

PRINCE EDWARD--To-day, Tue. Wed. Thur.

WARNER BROS. Sensational Story of the City that Rocked the World! HUMPHREY INGRID BOGART BERGMAN HENREID CASABLANCA A SURPRISING CAST TO TELL A SUPER-SURPRISING STORY! W. H. WALLIS PROD. LAUDE CONRAD SYONEY PETER Directed by JAINS VEIDT GREENSTREET LORRE MICHAEL CURTIZ EXTRA!! U. S. NAVY BAND :: PIGS IN POLKA - CARTOON 3 - SHOWS DAILY - AT 3.15-7 and 9 - DOORS OPEN EARLY

TO-DAY -- CAPITOL -- TUE. - WED.

MONSTER IN HUMAN GUISE! "AMONG THE LIVING" A Paramount Picture with ALBERT DEKKER - SUSAN HAYWARD HARRY CAREY - FRANCES FARMER Directed by STUART HEISLER -- ADDED -- NEWS - Cartoon Mitchell Ayres and Orchestra SHOWING DAILY AT 3.15 - 7 and 8.45

UNION ROAD SCHOOL The following is the report for February: Grade VII-1, Yvonne Livingstone; 2, Cordav Armstrong; Grade VI-1, Wilson Ravenhill; Grade IV-1, Roland Livingstone; Grade III-1, Donald Armstrong; Grade II-1, Olive Newman; Grade I, Sr.-1, Margaret Gill; 2, Hollis Newman; Grade I, Jr.-1, James Gill; 2, Blair Ravenhill. Highest average in Senior grades, Yvonne Livingstone. Highest average in Junior grades, Roland Livingstone. Perfect attendance for the month, Yvonne Livingstone. Roland Livingstone, Dean Ravenhill and Olive Newman. Doris R. Bryanton-Teacher.

OUT OUR WAY By J. R. WILLIAMS THE TRICKSTERS I DON'T WANT YOU PUT A GUARD OVER YOUR PRISONERS WHEN YOU GO TO LUNCH-- I MEAN MESS! THEY DON'T NEED NONE-- THEY'RE TOO BUSY WATCHING EACH OTHER!

High-Voltage Thrills In 'Among The Living'

Film fans who like a high-voltage horror picture every so often will find Paramount's "Among the Living" sufficiently thrilling film fare to chill them to their bones. The picture, with Albert Dekker in the dual role of John Radner, a millionaire mill owner, and Paul, his homicidal twin brother, opens at the Capitol Theatre to-day. Dekker, who will be teamed in the title role of "Dr. Cyclops," is no stranger to horror portrayals. He served his apprenticeship on the stage in "The R. U. R.," in which he was Radus, the robot who wrecks the world. In films he's been such divers characters as the leader of the multipliers in "Beau Geste" and the killer in "Reaching for the Sun" and "Strange Cargo." His Paul Radner, though, is almost painful suspense and excitement. Paramount starlet Susan Hayward deserves a bouquet of compliments for her Millie Pickens, a girl who just misses strangulation at the hands of the maniac, Harry Carey, as Dr. Ben Saunders, does an interesting and capable job. Frances Farmer, Jean Phillips, Maude Eburne and Gordon Jones also turn in excellent performances.

FANNING SCHOOL Honor Roll for February.

Grade X-1, Jack Benoit; 2, Mary Ann; 3, Irene Taylor. Grade IX-1, Edythe Donald; 2, Robert Murphy; 3, Jean Burt. Grade VIII-1, Elaine Bryanton; 2, Leonard Abbott. Grade VII-1, Charlene Owen; 2, Marlon Woodside; 3, Mary Bearstone. Grade VI-1, Doris Stewart; 2, Audrey MacKinnon; 3, John Donald. Teacher-James R. Murphr. Grade V-1, Ralph Champion; 2, William Auld; 3, Earle Woodside. Grade IV-1, Donald Armstrong; 2, Francis MacKinnon; 3, Joan Bearstone. Grade III-1, Vivian Bryanton; 2, Lillian Crozier; 3, Janet MacKinnon. Grade II-1, Donald Bearstone; 2, Mary MacGougan; 3, Mary MacNutt. Grade I, A.-1, Dorothy Crozier. Grade I, B.-1, Vernon MacKenzie. Grade I, C.-1, Betty Bearstone; 2, Terence Stewart. Teacher-Geraldine Stewart.

FEAR SHOWS IN EYES

The pupils of the eyes dilate when a person is afraid, but become smaller when he is angry.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE WITH MAJOR HOOPLE I MUST BE GETTING LOONER AND AND, BUT I WANT A PET SO BAD I'LL GIVE UP MY GO FERRIS EGG!! I'M TAKIN' A BIG NUSSANCE OFF YA, ER HANDS-- LOOK WHAT MRS. O'LEARY'S COW DONE TO CHICAGO. OH, VERY WELL, TAKE! AS A MINDY DEED TO A BROTHER WILL SELL HER-- EAGAD! THAT BONINE HAS SUCH A SWEET DISPOSITION IT'S LIKE LOSING A FRIEND! WHAT LUCK! THIS NOT ONLY PAYS FOR MY BUT LEAVES A BIT FOR CIGARS. MAKING BUSINESS WITH EMOTION-

CENTRAL GUARDIAN HEAR W. G. HOGG

This column is reserved for news of local interest, but advertising of a new nature may be inserted at five cents a word, strictly payable in advance. CRASWELL for Photographs. CONFEDERATION LIFE INSURANCE. L-978

FAREWELL PARTY--On the evening of Saturday Feb. 13th, a group of neighbors and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Toomba to bid farewell to their daughter, "Cora," who was leaving for Moncton to take up her duties there as Steno. Clerk in the C.N.R. Regional Office. An address was read during which she was presented with a beautiful gift to which she very fittingly responded. After a social hour was spent and such served all departed to their homes wishing her the best success in her new environment.

W.M.S. MEETING--The monthly meeting of the W.M.S. of Trinity United Church was held on Thursday afternoon in Hertz Hall, with a large number of members present. President, Mrs. W. H. Johnson, opened the meeting with hymn 12. Miss E. Punter, presided at the piano. The scripture lesson was read by Mrs. L. E. Bustin, followed with prayer by Mrs. E. H. Rogers, and Mrs. S. W. Newsome. The reports of the past month were read and showed a good increase. The study period was divided into six parts. I. "The Church and the Family," read by Mrs. P. G. Delaney. II. "Slum Areas," by Mrs. B. Essory V. "The Homes of Wealth," by Mrs. W. Teed. VI. "The Church in the Suburbs," by Mrs. S. W. Newsome. A solo was then rendered by Miss L. Aiken, accompanied by Miss E. Punter. The meeting closed by singing the hymn, "Christ the Lord of the Feast Binds," followed with Prayer by Mrs. W. H. Johnson.

HODGSON-PRIDHAM--A very quiet but pretty wedding of interest to many on P. E. Island was solemnized in the Brunswick Street United Church, Halifax, N. S., on Wednesday afternoon Feb. 24th, at 2.30. The bride, Miss Beatrice Helen Pridham, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Perley Pridham of Alberton, B.E.I., and Pte. Ernest Hodgson of the R.C.A. of Port Arthur, Ont., now stationed in Halifax, were united in marriage. To the strains of the Wedding March played by the Church organist, the winsome young bride entered the church leaning on the arm of her bridegroom. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. G. Ball assisted by the Rev. C. A. Brown of the Halifax Gospel Tabernacle. In the witness stand were the bride and a personal friend of the Pridham family. The bride was attended by Miss Mildred Leard also of Alberton and the groom was ably assisted by Mr. F. E. Island, member of the R.C.A. and of Toronto. Following the wedding ceremony the happy young couple left amid the good wishes of their many friends, on a honeymoon trip to P.E.I. The bride was formerly a valued member of the staff of the Riviera Tea Room, Spring Garden Road, Halifax. On their return they will reside in Halifax, where the groom is stationed.

TURNIPS WANTED--Buying Turnips daily at our Charlottetown Warehouse. Frank B. Clarke. 3-8-31.

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. TUPPER FERGUSON Mrs. Tupper Ferguson (nee Esther Elizabeth Wyatt) of Marshfield passed away on February 6th after a short illness. She was the wife of Tupper Ferguson, a prominent farmer of Marshfield. She was born in Dunstaffnage on September 16th, 1881, the daughter of the late James Wyatt and Mathilda Graem McLeod Wyatt. She attended the public school in Dunstaffnage and later the Summerdale High School. She then entered the nursing profession in New England Baptist Hospital. While in the U.S.A. she was a member of Park St. Presbyterian Church Boston, and later became a member of the Central United Church of Marshfield and Dunstaffnage. During the last World War she served overseas with the United States forces. She later made her home in Marshfield until her death. She is survived by her husband and two sisters, Mrs. Herb Nelson, of Marshfield and Mrs. George Beswell of French Cove.

Funeral services were held at her late residence and at Central United Church on February 8th. They were conducted by her pastor Rev. J. A. Nicholson, who was assisted at the Church and the grave by Rev. H. Bark. The floral tributes were beautiful and many. A large congregation was present in the Church. The interment was in Central Church cemetery. (Patriot Please Copy.)

owner and proprietor, Mr. Miner MacNevin is building up a business on satisfied customers and has striven to retain that high standard of efficiency and service which this old firm has always enjoyed. The Women's Institute is busy doing war and Red Cross work. This is one of the largest Institutes in the province. They give freely of their time and their talents and every month while project receives their hearty support. With all due deference to other organizations, you cannot find a more willing and capable bunch of women anywhere, and have contributed in no small way to the deserving schemes of the community.

Victoria and Vicinity

The annual meeting of the Cra-paud Creamery reports a very successful season. This creamery is situated in the centre of a rich agricultural section and draws its strength over wide areas extending from Bonshaw to Tryon and from Kelly's Cross to Victoria. This short sketch would not be complete if reference were not made to the early pioneers, namely John Moore, Crisp Moore, Donald MacLean, W. C. Lea, R. C. Lea, W. B. Trowsdale, R. T. Lord, W. H. Inmy and many others. This was a period when any innovation was viewed with suspicion. But those were men of vision and initiative who persevered in the face of much adverse criticism and surmounted the many difficulties that surrounded them and contributed in no small way to the enviable reputation which that company now enjoys. They gave freely of their time and talents and served their community faithfully and well. They have long since passed from scenes of life's activities and journeyed down the river of time. They built better than they knew and their works live after them. The present manager, Mr. Lloyd Rogerson, has been with the company for over twelve years who with his unfailing courtesy and strict attention to business has turned out products equalled by few and excelled by none and gives a good account of itself in any competition. A high grade milk is produced and the happy faculty of imparting to others his skill. Many young men who are giving a good account of themselves in other parts received their initial training at this factory. Mr. Brenton Wood, the efficient secretary and salesman, who is a successful business man has discharged his duties to the satisfaction of all concerned. The auditor Mr. John Myers, has performed his duties in a thorough and business-like manner. The directors who are all practical dairymen, have always kept abreast of the time and have added improvements from year to year. The almost utter extermination of foxes in European countries, and the depletion of many herds in this country, owing to war conditions, are the chief reasons for the increased demand for breeding stock. It is our faith in the industry will be justified and we hope to see the day when we will be "right there with the cherries."

The people of Victoria are welcoming Mrs. Wendell Rodd, who comes here as a young bride. Mr. Rodd operates a meat market, ice cream parlor and general groceries. The many friends wish them a long and happy voyage through life. The rink is being well patronized. The general manager, Mr. E. J. Walsh has everything in first class shape and the disciples of the shining blades are assured of good music and of ice and up to date lunch counter.

Victoria has an up to date fire department with the new pump and hose and modern equipment stored in the fire hall. No fires too big or blaze too small to receive their prompt attention. The chief, Mr. E. J. Walsh has had his men out for practice and reports the equipment in Tip-Top shape and the men right up to the minute and ready for any emergency. Equipment will not be found wanting.

L. D. MacLeod and Sons have done a large business during the past season. They are dealers in all kinds of farm produce: beef and dairy cattle, hogs, coal, fertilizers, foxes, horses and high grade poultry. The senior member of the firm, L. D., although a very busy man, is an ardent race fan and rumour has it that he is negotiating for a free licence for a campaign during the coming season.

Mr. Peter MacEachern is busy handling his business. If it is machinery, parts, radiators, insurance or cream separators, Peter can fix you up.

The hot stove leanture is still going strong. It is composed of men of the village, with several farmers from nearby farms. They hold their meetings in the village store, promptly at eight. Mr. speaker takes the chair, everything from raising baby chicks, to growing turnips and feeding hogs. He then reads the order paper, the speaker invites the chair, they button up their coats, drift out into the night to the various homes, satisfied that the evening has not only been spent pleasantly but profitably.

The Bank of Nova Scotia, which opened at Charlottetown, some years ago, in a small way, occupy very pretentious premises on Main Street and employ four of a staff. The present manager, Mr. Dunsford, comes from Quebec. He is a veteran of the last war, a good mixer and has made many friends since taking over the bank. He has a wife and daughters, and is a member of the social and business life of the community.

Mrs. W. H. P. Irving is spending the winter in Victoria as this is her hometown, she is renewing many early friendships. She is a guest at the Orient.

Mr. C. J. Miller, the man that time forgot, although passed the three score and ten, is engaged in the smelt fishing in winter and operates a packing plant in summer. He has all the modern equipment; this factory has always passed the strictest sanitary requirements. The Orient Hotel has had a very successful season. The rental proprietor, Mr. H. B. Profit, and his amiable partner, have a happy family of making you feel at home. This is a three story building, well heated, running water and well lighted. Efficient service and courteous treatment makes this one of the most popular resorts in the Province. That vacation will not be complete if you do not spend a week at the Orient.

Mr. G. C. Holland, prominent horseman of Tryon, paid a visit to Victoria recently. Some years ago, when ice racing was our principal winter sport, he was much in evidence as a race promoter. The writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At a race in Victoria harbour, Mr. Holland had sold a horse to a party in Hampton. He was making his first start under his new ownership and was turning in a very indifferent performance. The writer and Mr. Holland, who have always been close friends, were standing on the ice talking. The young man drove up and claimed the horse was not live. Mr. Holland, who was much in evidence as a race promoter, the writer recalls an amusing incident. At