theory that there was some discredit somehow in a girl working after marriage. Nobody is bound by that ancient tradition nowadays when everybody recognizes a woman's right to help herself and her husband in any way she can, and if she can do it better by working in an office instead of a kitchen, why is it just up to her.

Of course, mothers always think they know best. Probably they never did. Certainly they don't know now when all the conditions of life have changed since their youth.

DOROTHY DIX

DEAR MISS DIX: I am a girl of 21 years old. My mother is dead and my father married again. I have always been petted and spoiled and done just as I please, so I can't get along with my stepmother, although she would be good to me if I would let her. She is as good to my father as she can be. I left home and I don't want to go back and I don't want to work and I want my father to provide me with plenty of money. What must I do?

IN TROUBLE

ANSWER: I should think you are in trouble, terrible trouble, and you will always be in trouble as long as you live, as long as you act like a silly, spoiled baby instead of a sensible young woman.

You see, you are being perfectly selfish, considering no one but yourself, and no self-centered, selfish person can possibly be happy. Because they never can get all they want. They never can always have the center of the stage and they never can make everybody kowtow to them.

According to your own story you have left home without reason. Your stepmother is good and kind to you and would be a real mother to you if you would permit it, and I think your father has done exactly right and the only thing that will bring you to your senses by refusing to support you while you nurse your grudge against him marrying again.

The thing for you to do is either to go back home and apologize to your father and your stepmother and make yourself pleasant and agreeable to live with or else get a job. Of the two courses that would be the better one because it would give you something to think about besides yourself and make you of some use in the world. A healthy, intelligent girl of 21 should be ashamed to be a parasite and expect somebody else to provide for her. There is no more reason for her being a loafer than there is for a man of the same age.

DOROTHY DIX

DEAR MISS DIX: A friend of mine is going away to spend a week-end with a man who is in love with her. She claims that everything will be quite proper and tells me that I am prissy and old-fashioned to object to it and that every one is doing it. What do you think?

VIRGINIA

ANSWER: Undoubtedly many young women go away with men for week-ends, but when they do they leave their reputations behind them. Possibly their conduct is proper and platonic, but a hardboiled world looks on it with a cynical eye and believes the worst.

Week-ends with men friends is one of the things that simply is not done by young women who have any regard for their good names.
