MONTREAL AVERTS WATER FAMINE

(Special to The Guardian.)

MONTREAL, Jan. 2.—Contaminated by a fast emptying reservoir and with the major part of the city without water, the engineers, firemen, coal passers and others of the aqueduct department being on strike, the civic officials of Montreal faced a trying situation beginning at midnight New Year's Eve and continuing until this afternoon at 1 o'clock when the first pump of twelve million capacity was by dint of hard work, started for the relief of what threatened to be a water famine for the greater part of Montreal. An hour and a half later the second pump of like capacity was in action and at 5.30 the third pump, with a capacity of thirty million gallons, was also in operation.

Lots of people never think of making any preparation for the better land unless they see an excursion advertised.

A VISION

A Sermon Delivered on Sunday Evening, December 28, 1919, at the Baptist Church by Rev. C. R. Freeman.

"There was no more sea."—Rev. 21:1.

The late civil war in the United States imposed such conditions on many of the young men. It is not uncommon, especially in the South, to find the men who are limited by an insufficient education.

Others are limited by feeble health. There are many men whose mental abilities are greater than their physical powers of endurance. These physical conditions are not strong enough to enable them to reach the goal of their ambitions and being thus limited they fall a victim to their ambitions and fall premature graves.

Again there are those who have been deprived of one or more of the senses, who struggle bravely on with their part in life. Beethoven was for years so deaf that he could not hear the crash of the orchestra that rendered his own victories. Milton, the blind poet, adds to the world's literature some of its most sublime thoughts.

Others, being in a busy age when every moment is employed. Often do we long for more time to read, for more time to do acts of kindness, for more time to be with the loved ones, for more time to be with the loved ones, for more time to be with the loved ones.

John, looking up and seeing the new heaven and new earth, cries, "No more sea." Limitations will not be found there.

If, the sea is also an emblem of temptation.

As John looked out over the wide expanse of waters that rolled between him and his home, how deeply must the thoughts of separation have been impressed upon his mind. If only mountains or wide plains intervened, between him and those dear to him he might pass over the mountains and cross the plains, but the sea he could not cross. Thus it separated him.

Even Horace thought of the sea as a separator, in one of his odes he says,

"In vain hath a wise God Separated lands by a dissociable Ocean if after all impious Ships bound over the shoals. Without touching."

Today we think less of the sea as a separator because of the cables connecting continents and the wireless messages and ships which go over it. We have come to know God in the solitude of that island, chance his mind went back to his home in the distance, to the work he loved so well. He reviewed his own life and the lives of other faithful apostles, as of whom he felt that the sea was a separator. As he sat there meditating, suddenly he heard a sound like the sound of a trumpet. He turned and lo! he beheld one like unto the Son of man. Not that he had the new heaven and new earth, but that he had seen in Gethsemane and on Calvary, but one whose head and hair were white as snow, whose eyes were as a burnished brass, whose voice was as the voice of many waters and whose countenance was as the sun shining in his strength. It was a sight too glorious for him and he fell on his face. Not that he was afraid, but that he was in the presence of the Lord. He saw the separation, mystery and conflict are removed he cried, "There was no more sea." What could more vividly represent these things to the mind of the writer than the sea, which kept him a prisoner on that island, separated him from his home and rolled its mysterious depths in conflict at his feet? Let us then consider.

The sea viewed as an emblem of limitation.

It was the sea surrounding the island that kept John a prisoner. Doubtless he felt keenly the limitation imposed by the sea. At the moment of abandonment for the time, that work which was so dear to him. Thus as he beheld the new heaven and new earth free from limitation he cried, "No more sea." Who among us has not felt the limitations of life? We are constantly meeting with those who are in some way limited. Many a young man has longed to attain a certain end and yet has realized that the limitations imposed upon him by his circumstances formed a barrier impossible.

An ambitious young man is in a position where others are dependent upon his exertions. Thus his time must be given to their support and the great desire of his life remain unattained. Realizing his duty he yields to the demands on him and awaits his reward.

More than sixty years ago there worked on a Pennsylvania farm a boy who had declared his intention to write a grand oratorio. He had a passionate love for music, and his great desire was to leave the farm to go to the city and study for the world's composition it would be a masterpiece as it does the works of Handel or Beethoven. But the necessity of earning his living caused him to postpone this important work from year to year. His pent up love for music found expression in other ways. Stephen Foster is dead. The grand oratorio was never written, but "The Old Folks at Home," "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia," and others of his songs have gone into the depths of countless hearts stirring the feeling and sympathy that sweeten life and help to make it better.

It is not an uncommon thing to meet men, whose natural endowments are greater than those of others holding much higher positions, very limited education. Their circumstances surrounding them in youth may have been such as to render it impossible for them to obtain such an education as they needed for their life work.

THE NEW EARTH

and the new earth thus John could say, "No separation there. No more sea."

The sea is also an emblem of Mystery.

The Jews were an agricultural people and not a commercial people and upon the sea they looked with suspicion. To them it was an emblem of mystery. The few who ventured on the wave had no compass to guide them; no chart marking headland rocks and shoals; no lighthouses along the shore sent out their warning rays. Even as late as the time of Columbus we find crude ideas of the sea. Thus it was a fitting emblem of mystery. Many of the perplexing problems so perplexing to the early Christians. The questions concerning the existence of God; the nature and attributes of God; are indeed mysterious to us. We may know some of the attributes of God and some of the nature of the existence and nature of God, but we must confess that we do not know all. Yet we would not say with Pope,

"Know then thyself, presume not God to scan; The proper study of mankind (is man.)"

Man himself is a mystery. It is our high duty to know all we can of man, but it is our higher duty and our proper study to know of God. While much concerning both man and God may remain unknown to us and we may not be able to classify all our knowledge of God; yet the knowledge of God in the heart of the truly devoted Christian is a foretaste of that knowledge that we shall have when "The day breaks and the shadows flee away." Many are the problems of daily life that must remain unsolved. Many the questions concerning nature which must await further light.

In view of the mysteries concerning God and man, life and growth, Tennyson wrote:

"Flower in the crannied wall, I pluck you here, root and all, in my hand, Little flower—but if I could understand What you are, root and all, and I should know what God and man is."

We cannot understand the providence of God.

"God hath his mysteries of grace; He hides them deep, like the secret sleep, Of him he loved so well."

In that new heaven and new earth the veil of mystery will be removed and every eye shall see him. For the time the veil seems to be removed, but the mystery of John there was no more mystery.

IV. The sea as an emblem of conflict.

Have you ever witnessed a storm at sea when the angry waves were like mountains around you, tossed like the ship as a plaything, roaring as they dashed about her; when the wind whistled through the rigging, while the thunder of the lightning flashing revealed through the darkness the angry waves?

One who has witnessed such a storm has vivid impression of the conflict. It is a conflict in which all classes and conditions of humanity take part. But to the Christian alone is given the promise of glorious victory and great reward.

John realizing the magnitude of the conflict is permitted to behold that new heaven and new earth and as he gazes upon it knowing that when he enters there the conflict will be over and the victory assured, "No more sea."

By contrasting these realities, which the sea as an emblem suggests with the glories of the heavenly Jerusalem, we are enabled to see only we gain a greater appreciation of the Christian's inheritance. When we pass through glory's morning gate and walk in Paradise, there will be no more limitation, no more separation, no more conflict, no more strife. There the myriads will walk together with their Lord.

PRESENTATION TO POPULAR BANK MANAGER

On the evening of Wednesday December 17th a large number of the citizens of Hunter River together with a number of the friends from the outside district, assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Staver in the Royal Bank Building for the purpose of tendering them a farewell reception before they would leave for their new home in Westville, N. S.

Mr. Petrick has been manager of the Hunter River branch of the Royal Bank for some five years and has recently been transferred to Westville, largely because of his business ability coupled with his genial off-handed manner. His business has during these years increased very rapidly. Mr. Petrick will be much missed in the commercial world, but not only in business circles but in all the different spheres of life his place will be hard to fill. In every movement which was for the uplift and the betterment of the community Mr. Petrick took a leading part. To every good cause he was always a generous contributor. One of his greatest joys in life was found in helping any who in anyway needed aid. Mrs. Petrick will also be missed by those who had the pleasure of knowing her. At the reception the first part of the evening was spent in playing games. A dainty lunch was then served. When the lunch was over Rev. H. Staver was elected chairman for the occasion. After a brief address in which he told of the purpose of the gathering Mr. Staver called on Dan M. McLeod to read an address to Mr. and Mrs. Petrick at the close of the address J. Wellington Patterson came forward and presented them with a purse of $50.00 in gold. The chairman, Mr. Staver then read an address from the staff of Mr. and Mrs. Petrick and Roy Vanderstine presented them with a beautiful set of sterling silver perks handled deserve knives and forks on behalf of the staff. Mr. and Mrs. Petrick although taken by surprise in a few well chosen words thanked the people for this and many other expressions of kindness shown them. The audience then joined in singing "For they are Jolly good fellows" Short words of appreciation were then given by Lieut. Wm. McDonald, W. H. Stackford, Dan McLeod, Mrs. Everett Wedlock and Mrs. Dan McLeod. After having played a few more games all joined hands and sang "Auld Lang Syne." Mr. Petrick, Rev. H. Staver and Dan McLeod were then bidden. The happy gathering was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

AFTER 16 YEARS EXPERIENCE A DOCTOR SAYS

Zam-Buk

HAS NO EQUAL FOR SKIN DISEASES

"For sixteen years I have used Zam-Buk in my practice, and have always found the results from its application highly satisfactory. In my opinion there is nothing to compare with it for skin troubles—from roughness and irritation to chronic skin diseases. Without a doubt, Zam-Buk has wonderful curative properties, and when a patient requires such a remedy I always prescribe Zam-Buk."

This letter of appreciation has just been received by the proprietors of Zam-Buk from Dr. A. P. Shibley, of Washington, D.C. The medical profession is always slow to recommend a remedy, and the fact that many doctors now prescribe Zam-Buk, is one of the surest proofs of its superiority.

Zam-Buk's superiority is due to its herbal composition. It is all medicine, with absolutely no animal fat, and is so blended, refined and concentrated that it contains the maximum germ-destroying, soothing and healing power. Owing to its absolute freedom from animal fat, Zam-Buk cannot become rancid, but will keep indefinitely without losing any of its strength or purity. While the healing power of Zam-Buk, and its power to penetrate to the root of skin disease is so great, yet its action is so mild, that it is the ideal preparation for the pimples, eruptions, and rashes which so often occur amongst young children. Mothers agree that it is the best balm for baby.

Zam-Buk should be handy in every home for cuts, burns, scalds and bruises. Equally good for eczema, ringworm, ulcers, abscesses, boils, pimples, blood-poisoning and piles. All dealers 50c. box.
