A CHARGE AGAINST ROOSEVELT.

Ex-Secretary Long, one of the leading spirits of the late President McKinley's cabinet has been writing for The Outlook a history of the New American navy. In the concluding chapter of this history some sentences occur which cover a very severe reflection upon President Roosevelt and his fitness to guide the affairs of the Republic. Mr. Long, after remarking that "Mr. Roosevelt was an intensely interesting personality as Assistant Secretary of the Navy, as indeed he is in any capacity," makes this remarkable statement: "Just before the war he, as well as some naval officers, was anxious to send a squadron across the ocean to sink the ships and torpedo boat destroyers of the Spanish fleet while we were yet at peace with Spain."

Mr. Long was afterward questioned by a Boston Herald reporter as to the accuracy of this published statement and he was thus given an opportunity to have modified it or explained it away. He on the contrary enforced and amplified it. "It was a mighty pressing time," he said. "The war was inevitable, and it was almost upon us. The Spanish fleet with its then dreaded torpedo boats, was on its way to Cuba. Although war had not then been formally declared, a number of the leading naval officers thought we ought in self-defence, to meet this fleet and dispose of it. The President, (McKinley) and the Naval Department, however, were of the opinion that no such action was in order till a formal declaration of war had occurred. Mr. Roosevelt was among those who thought the Spanish fleet ought to be destroyed."

It would be difficult to believe this most extraordinary charge were it not thus so publicly and clearly made by a very prominent public man. But as the charge has not been met or answered we can only conclude that President Roosevelt either cannot truthfully deny it, or that he is content to remain under charge of having contemplated a crime comparable to that of the destruction of the battleship Maine, assuming, what is by no means proven, that the Maine was treacherously blown up by the Spaniards. The blowing up of the Maine, if it was not accidental, was possibly the work of a coterie of reckless and criminal spirits at Havana. It was not a national act. But what Mr. Roosevelt is charged with having urged would have been a national crime. Fortunately for the credit of the Republic better counsels prevailed and the proposed treachery was not enacted. But it is not a pleasant thought that we have now at the head of a neighboring nation a man who is publicly charged with being capable of having advised what Mr. Long has disclosed. It would be relieving to hope, if we could that the very serious charge may be proven untrue.

Not very much is known of the Islands in Portland Channel two of which are awarded to Canada and two to the United States. The latter are mere islets, and appear as dots on the map. The two Canadian Islands are much larger, Pearce Island being about 25 miles in length by eight or nine in width. Wales Island is a fairly square block of say ten miles square lying immediately west and closely abutting on the end of Pearce. The American islets are nearly in line with the Canadian and still further west. To have made a straight boundary would have required to go to the northward of all four islands referred to. The boundary as now laid down passes south of the two smaller islands and then bends to the north between them and Wales Island. The latter must be distinguished from the much larger Prince of Wales Island, which lies some ninety miles west, and, whose southern point is the starting point of the boundary line.

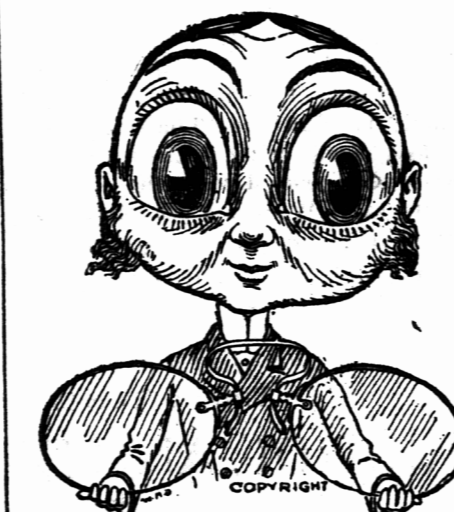

"I lost courage and thought I would never regain my health."
"Three years of delicate health trying doctors' prescriptions and patent medicines" without benefit might well sap the courage of any woman. And yet Mrs. Bryant proved that the question of the cure of womanly disease is only a question of using the right remedy. A few doses of "Favorite Prescription" restored her courage and revived her hope, because she could see "a decided change from the first." Three months' use of the medicine restored her to perfect health.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures irregularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. Mrs. Sarah Bryant, President of Memphis Social Science Club, residing at 271 Atkinson Ave., Memphis, Tenn., writes: "I suffered with delicate health for three years, trying doctors' prescriptions and patent medicines until I lost courage and thought I would never regain my health; but a few doses of your 'Favorite Prescription' made me change my mind. Could see a decided change from the first, so I kept on taking it for three months faithfully and am now in perfect health."

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.
