There's No Business Without a Telephone

The business without a phone is no business—that's plain talk, but it's just as practical as its plain.

In city or country, village or town there's no business too small for a phone—a phone is a sort of guarantee that you have industry and ambition, and your creditors and the people will always judge your business by the extent of your telephone service.

The men with whom you desire to do business will always form opinions of your executive ability—they've got to—it's purely business. Don't let a piece of false economy stand between you and better and larger business.

We'll help you out if you ask—just write or call on Contract department.

Make Your Newspaper Advertising Profitable

Newspaper advertising costs too much for experimenting. It is mistaken economy to try it today and stop it tomorrow. The wheels of business should never stop and the whole machine is out of gear unless the big advertising wheel is always turning. A constant ad works all the time and charges no overtime.

You'll admit that the newspaper is the greatest medium of advertising, and if "any old kind" of advertising pays haven't you every reason to believe that with the attention of specialists your advertising would prove much more profitable. Advertising is our business—we know how to analyse your goods, to pick out their strong selling points, we understand the class of people you are catering to, then we prepared the advertising in an interesting "catchy" way that will beget confidence. With all we give the printer a design to follow—showing how to lay out the ads so that they will "stand out" from other ads—that will be attractive. The same as an architect gives plans for a building.

This service is a combination of newspapers and advertising specialists—the strongest forces known to day in the mercantile world.

And, then, the very fact of our carrying a large list of clients enables us to quote merchants prices that would not permit them to even waste their time if they were specialists in advertising.

No advertising or printed matter too large or small to receive our attention—when you think of advertising, think of us. We'll take pleasure in quoting prices. Phone 123.

A BUTTERFLY FARM.

Thousands of Caterpillars in Cages.

The prosperous butterfly and not farm, not only for breeding those insects by the tens of thousands but also raising a large proportion of its own fodder plants and issuing its periodical price lists of eggs, larvae, pupae, and perfect insects, is the natural outcome of the popular turning to nature study and the increasing numbers of collectors.

Such a farm was inaugurated a few years ago at Bexley, Kent, England, by L. W. Newman, F. E. S., and the venture has proved a great success. The farm consists of three-quarters of an acre of garden and allotment round his house and half an acre in a secluded corner of a wood, enclosed with wire netting. It was in the wood I found him, busily engaged with one of his two assistants in the task of spring cleaning, says a Daily Mail representative.

Here was a cage of wood and perforated zinc built around a growing tree, which, Mr Newman informed me contained 500 specimens of the red-belted clear-wing caterpillar; and close by was another cage—a huge structure enclosing no fewer than seven birch trees and measuring 11 feet by 11 feet round the sides and 12 feet high—in which were about 1,000 insects of different kinds. Other trees bore smaller cages of different sizes and shapes, each holding a swarm of precious stock, and so contrived that they could be fitted on to any branch, thus enabling them to be moved about the woodland as the caterpillars eat off the foliage.

Around his house Mr. Newman grows a motley crop of fodder plants for his hungry stock, and he has three glass houses, two of which are unheated. In one of the latter, I was informed, about 10,000 caterpillars of the silver washed fritillary. The larvae were in cages planted with violets just coming into flower. In the same house were four more cages planted with dead nettle and containing more than 3,000 caterpillars of the handsome scarlet tiger, and other cages also, in which were about 5,000 dark green and high brown fritillaries.

Throughout the establishment there are at the present time more than 40,000 living caterpillars, about 120 newly emerged moths and butterflies, and as it is now the fall-end of the season for pupae, only about 7,000 chrysalides. In June there will be thrp times the present quantity of living stock.

The dead stock numbers about 100,000 set insects, every one of which has its price, ranging from 1d. to 5s. 6t., and even more for rare varieties. In the same manner as orchid growers Mr. Newman sends his assistants far away on speculative forays, though never outside Britain. He has a man now hunting for a fortnight in North Wales for hibernating butterflies.

THE FARMER'S TELEPHONE.

The telephone might justly be classed with the time and labor-saving machinery of the farm. Before its introduction, practically all farm work that involved the co-operation of neighbors called for extra work in the way of notifying. Especially was this true if conditions arose necessitating a change of plans. Butchering, threshing, haymaking, fruit gathering—these and numerous other occasions required a considerable sacrifice of time and effort, where with the telephone a few moments' time is sufficient. The "friend on the wall," as one woman styled her telephone, runs errands better than a boy and far cheaper than the hired man. It would be hard to estimate the time really saved the farmer by this means. A fairly good idea, however, of the time-saving value of the telephone may be gained from the fact that the farming community that has once been awakened to its usefulness never goes back to the unsatisfactory and time-consuming backwoods methods.

Then, too, there is the added feature of the farmer being able to discuss in person all matters relating to his work. Sending word is quite often an unsatisfactory method and is never as good as a personal talk. "If you want a thing well done, you must do it yourself" was the conclusion of Miles Standish in regard to courtship and courting is not the only instance where the advice applies.

The telephone is not only a time saver, but a money saver. With it the old "hit or miss" method of marketing farm products is replaced by business-like operations. The "prices dropped several points from yesterday's" argument does not enter the farmer's mind in a position to watch the markets closely, as well as make his sales, by telephone. Prices from different dealers are readily obtained and a sale made before he leaves home. The choice of selling at a sacrifice or hauling back from market never comes to him. The telephone places the buyer and seller on equal footing—the only condition which absolutely insures square dealing.

Health precautions practically demand that the farmer's home contain a telephone. Sudden illness oftentimes brings a crisis when the only way to give a hundred times the cost of a telephone could be got in instant communication with a physician. To the man living on a farm, isolated from his friends and miles from a doctor's office, an unwarned need of the latter's aid is not to be computed in dollars and cents. The city has long recognized its need of the ambulance and the emergency hospital; the country is wisely taking advantage of the time and life-saving element of the telephone.

Another feature that helps explain the popularity of the telephone in the farming districts is the broadened social advantages it affords. Few realize the important place the telephone holds in the social system. Formerly the farmer's social circle was confined too much of the time to the members of his own immediate family; now it is limited only to the number of his acquaintances who possess telephones. Friends, relatives, business acquaintances, both near and far—in city or country—all are in speaking distance. Social gatherings are planned, and visits are arranged for, in addition to the many social chats held through the telephone. No wonder that the farmer's sons and daughters are becoming more in favor of remaining on the farm since the advantages there are becoming nearly as great as in the city.

ORIGIN OF KHARTOUM.

(London Chronicle.)

The city of Khartoum (or Khartoum as Major Stanton, the late governor, prefers to spell it) is not yet a century old, and it owes its existence to a typically Oriental form of treachery. When Khedive Mohamed Ali invaded the Sudan in 1820 he marched all-triumphant to Shendi, where his troops were entertained at a banquet by the submissive natives. But while the Khedive's high officials were seated at the feast they shared the fate of the vintals, and were themselves reduced to funeral baked meats. Full of fury the army fell on Shendi and demolished it. Marching south, the invaders reached the junction of the Blue and White Nile. With the conquerors' instinct they recognized that the strip of land, with its new fishermen's huts and straw formed ideal strategical headquarters. So that Khartoum—the elephant's trunk—finally grew into the most sensitive part of the Sudan organism.

USE OF PARCHED CORN.

Probably the most primitive methods of food preparation is the parching of grain. When America was discovered the Indians were found living largely upon wild rice, which they kept by parching and which, prepared in this way, could be kept indefinitely. The grain is sterilized by parching.

The ancient lake dwellers in Switzerland prepared food in a similar manner, and at the present time the peasantry of the Oriental countries prepare their grain in the same way. Parched corn is exceedingly palatable as well as wholesome.

Many years ago a prominent American physician, visiting in the Canary Islands in search of health, returned home and reported himself cured of chronic dyspepsia by the use of the simple food of the natives, the latter parching all their grain.

Ordinary field corn carefully parched and ground makes an exceedingly palatable breakfast dish. It is well adapted for delicate stomachs, according to the investigations of physicians who have made a study of stomach ailments.

HAVE YOU GAS ON THE STOMACH.

When people are troubled in this way, their digestion is not good. Up against the heart, that's where gas forces the stomach. Away the heart goes frightening people almost to death.

Instant relief of distention is instantly afforded by ten drops of "Nervine" in a little sweetened water. Nervine is the most marvelous reliever of cramps and spasms known. At least five times stronger than other pain remedies, Nervine is more prompt in action, is more immediately effective than anything else. Nervine seems a miracle to people accustomed to old-fashioned remedies. Pain is no joke, it comes to everyone, so safeguard yourself against its penalty—have at hand immediate means of relief by keeping near by Nervine, that powerful, penetrating, and pain-subduing remedy. Nervine is a universal conqueror of pain. Not only will it cure cramps, stomach pains, flatulence and gas risings, but it is simply fine to rub on as a liniment.

Nervine cures all pain. Large bottles, 50c, kept in the home, keeps the doctor's bill small.

Commodore Ledyard 34.709

Bingen 2.06 1-4 Nancy Hanks 2.04 Adml Dewey 2.04 3-4 Lady Ethlynn (3) 2.24 1-4

The Commodore enjoys the rare distinction of having the fastest, combined speed and inheritance of any stallion yet foaled. He inherits the blood of the KING and QUEEN of the trotting turf, having by his sire and dam eight crosses of Hambletonian 10. He has developed into a horse of commanding size, with great bone and substance and will weigh today 105 pounds. His grand sire Bingen 2.06 1-4 is the leading and most popular sire in America. Eleven (11) colts were the result of his first year in the stud here, six of which started in the trotting race as two year olds. Arena Belle, bred by Duncan Robertson, North River, won in track heats. They were equally successful in the show ring, winning 1st, 2nd, and 3rd, prizes in their respective classes. At the Provincial Exhibition in Halifax, in 1908 53 of those colts, 3 years olds started in the trotting and 42 in the trotting class, winning a first, two seconds, a third and fourth, also a first in the show ring.

At our Provincial Exhibition last fall three of his colts started in the 3 year old stake race which was won by Orwell Bell in 2:30. The first colt bred in the Island to go in the standard list at three (3) years old proving beyond a doubt his ability to transmit speed to his progeny.

Lady Ethlynn, 2:24 1-4 (3) the dam of Commodore, has proven herself to be a noted brood mare. She has the blood in her veins of Jay Bird, George Wilkes, and Aunt McGregor, the greatest sires of extreme speed living or dead. She is the dam of three (3) colts in the list including Sahib 2:24 3-4 almost a full brother of Com Ledyard, by Bingen 2:06 1-4. Sahib sired Landim 2:28 1-2 at two years and Swave 2:29 at two, last year 1909. Four of the get of Adml Dewey entered the standard list. Bingen 2:06 1-4 the grand sire of the Commodore has 11 trotters and 11 pacers in the standard list including Lulu, record 2:02 1-4.

At the request of numerous breeders the owner of Com Ledyard has decided to send him fortnightly as follows: Monday, May 30th leave for P. These Unmixed Fertilizers Will Prove a Real Profitable Investment

It's a matter of dollars and cents to every farmer. With the farmer who shakes his head and says "Impossible" we don't want to have anything to do, but the farmer who is willing and who wants to benefit by the experiences of others we are willing to go to a great deal of trouble to prove by facts and figures that the intelligent use of these unmixed fertilizers will swell the bank account—and that's what every farmer wants. It's cash that's convincing but if you're not interested enough in your own well fare to investigate into the qualities of these fertilizers you'll always "hold your own nose to the grind stone"—you must break away from antiquated ideas and look for your share of the profits reaped by the farmers all over Canada. You can make your own little farm a veritable land of bounty if you'll try—if you're just willing to "Get out of the ditch."

The more you investigate and inquire into the values of these fertilizers the clearer you'll see the benefits to be derived, and your pocket book will be the proof of how profitable these unmixed fertilizers really are - don't take the small end of the profits—if you won't look for benefits you'll never receive them—better investigate into the possibilities of these fertilizers.

More farmers are yearly finding out the benefits to be received from the intelligent cultivation of your lands—that's why all our agricultural industries have been formed to fight octogenarian ideas. We'll help you out of the rut of "rusty" farming—these unmixed fertilizers point the way to profitable farming—these unmixed fertilizers point the way to profitable farming. If you'll drop us a card we'll send some interesting booklets, absolutely free, which contain some really interesting pointers to farmers—Write.
