GREAT DAMAGE BY STORM AT NEWFOUNDLAND

Fifteen Fishing Vessels are Reported Lost -- Shipping Suffers Heavily During the Two Day's Storm

(Canadian Press)
ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., June 21.—Great damage was done to shipping by a storm which swept over Newfoundland during the past two days, and about fifteen fishing vessels were reported lost between Quirpon and Cape Norman. Bell Isle reports the loss of several motor boats. At Bay De Verde the schooner Banbury, which had taken shelter after colliding with an ice berg, slipped her moorings in the storm and drove ashore. After wrecking fishing stages along the shore the vessel became a total loss. No loss of life had been reported.

AMUNDSEN'S STORY

KING'S BAY, Spitzbergen, June 20.—Cur plan of King's Bay at five p. m. March 21 with a load of proximating three tons, by way of Amsterdam Island. At 6 o'clock we encountered fog, above which we rose to height of 3,100 feet in order to navigate. During the next two hours the planes flew like bullets through the fog which lasted until 8 p. m.

STUDY CONDITIONS

During the following days we studied the drift conditions, and observed the meteorological situation. While flying northward we had "observed" an area of about 1,000,000 square kilometers reaching about 88.30 north, without any indication of land. Considering the depth disclosed by our soundings, we therefore, thought it most probable that we would find land further north of this side of the Pole.

RETURN TRIP

During our return trip, we continued carefully to make similar observations on those which we had made on the way north, but on account of the fog we estimate that we observed not more than 60,000 square kilometers along our return route. This—up and back—the expedition has made observations on 150,000 square kilometers of hitherto unexplored area.

CRACKS IN ICE

On June 14, cracks suddenly opened in the ice under our feet threatening to remove a third of our work which we had done in levelling a strip along the frozen surface.

POLE IMPOSSIBLE

Moreover, there were no grounds for assuming that ice conditions further north would be such as to permit of a successful landing. A permit of a successful landing, with opportunity for observation, would apparently have been impossible. We believe that merely flying over the Pole without making these accurate observations would not have been in order.

CONGRATULATIONS POUR IN

Congratulations are pouring into the returned explorers from all sides. The "miraculous" manner in which they were plucked away by sailing vessel some 20 minutes after descending in the N-25 at a bleak point at the northernmost extremity of Northeast Land and thence carried in safety to Spitzbergen, the start of their Polar attempt, has caught the interest of kings and commoners.
