A Heavy Winter Overcoat for $1.00?

Read This Ad Carefully---It Will Pay You

Our opening announcement of the greatest Overcoat values ever offered to the men of this Province has created great excitement in retail circles in this city---and not without reason.

Merchants who had their stock bought at regular prices have absolutely no chance to sell their Overcoats as long as our stock lasts.

So positive are we that the values we offer cannot be duplicated in this city that we will give any coat in the store for a one dollar bill ($1.00) to the man who can obtain equal style and value for the same amount of money elsewhere.

Every Coat of this Season's Manufacture

This is not a sale of old, out of date coats that have been carried over for five or six years, but every garment we offer has been made this season from the newest fabrics and in the latest models. Here you will find the famous Harris tweeds, the dressy Beaver and Melton, and the warm Chinchilla cloths in the largest variety of patterns ever shown hereabouts.

We Invite Comparison and we advise every man who wants an Overcoat this winter to see what we have to offer before buying one.

We know it will be hard for you to get away from some of the salesmen you meet in the big stores, but no matter what inducements they offer you be sure and see what we have for you before you make a decision.

Saved $8.50 on Two Overcoats

A customer who purchased two Overcoats from us on Saturday told us after he paid for them that he had saved eight dollars and fifty cents by buying them here.

Now the question is---was that amount worth saving?
This sale will last for 30 days. Come early and secure first choice.

FAVORS ABOLITION OF CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

The newly appointed warden of Sing Sing Prison, Mr. Thomas Mott Osborne, served voluntarily as a prisoner for six months in order to get the prisoner's point of view. He believes in more out-of-doors for the prisoners, and in placing the men more on their honor. He thinks that there are thousands of men who should be in prison and that thousands are dismissed who should be retained. He also believes that many men in prison could be reformed.

He also is opposed to capital punishment. He is reported to have said,

"You'll never see me in the death house when a man must go to the chair."

"Doesn't the law provide for the warden's presence?" asked the reporter.

"I think there is a way out of that," replied Mr. Osborne.

"Will you advocate legislation for the abolition of capital punishment," he was asked.

"I will support such legislation," he replied. "If we cannot have an abolition of capital punishment we ought to have public exhibitions of executions, I believe."

"Do you mean that you would favor the public staging of deaths in the electric chair?" asked the reporter.

"Yes, why make it a secret affair. If we must have capital punishment we might as well make it the greatest possible deterrent of crime," he said.
