SWIM FROM WRECK FOUR LIVES SAVED.—BELLEVILLE, Nov. 20.—Wrecked on a rock at McLeilan's Point on Lake Ontario, four miles from Colborne, the crew of the Sonora a motor cruiser owned by Jennie McQueen of this city, had to swim for their lives. Capt. A. L. Wilson, George Keegan of Belleville, and James McGuinness were the members of the crew.

The Sonora was returning at night, empty, from a United States port, and in a heavy fog. The crew lost their bearings, and no danger was anticipated until the boat struck against a huge boulder, the craft being wedged between this rock and others about it.

Wilson, Keegan and McGuinness jumped overboard and, although they could not see the shore, they took the chance as the waves were dashing over the cabin of the cruiser. At the risk of being dashed against the rocks they found a way to shore. One of the men, in jumping overboard, had picked up a waterproof tin box containing six matches, and with these the ship's carpenter started a fire. When babies and children of all ages dawn broke the three saw a farm printed on bottle. Mother: You house, where they were warned must say "CALIFORNIA" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

audience owing to the most unfavorable condition of the roads was not as large as would have been under more favorable circumstances nevertheless, those who had the courage to face the frozen roughed highway went home, quite forgetting the unpleasant road conditions and feeling amply repaid for their visit to the hall. The numbers on the program were tastefully chosen representing in part the musical minds of some of the old master composers, whose works while in life now live in the essence of imperishable things. Two vocal numbers by Miss Huestis were highly appreciated while her accompanying strains from the piano helped in no small measure, the two talented violinists to waken and bring out the musical soul which lay asleep in their violins. Their artful bowing and technical skill, exhibited well what may be accounted when inherited talent becomes woven with judicious training and a musicianly understanding. Round after round of applause greeted the talented performers before and after each number. In short the entire performance was a thorough musical treat and is now left to mingle in a sentiment the not too distant future. Miss Penman and Miss Stultz are graduates from Mt. Allison Conservatory of Music, and are conducting classes in violin in Summerside and Charlottetown respectively.

Think Anarchist Was Killed For Disobeying Order

MILAN, Nov. 20.—The police have arrested a man named Tran Liobornicy, who is suspected of a mysterious crime discovered at Varese a few days ago.

Dr. de Martini, brother-in-law of the famous conductor, Toscanini, was found killed in his villa. He was an anarchist and had often visited Russia.

Recently, according to the police, he received an order to carry out a certain political plan in Italy. He returned to Varese with documents and money, but did not carry out the plan.

France Increases Customs Duties

PARIS, Nov. 20.—Information that an increase in the French customs duties on many articles will go into effect the first of next year has been communicated to the commercial attaché of the United States embassy by the French customs service. RECORD SHIPMENT OF BLOODED HORSES ON WAY FROM FRANCE

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—On its way to this country to be offered to American breeders at public auction is a shipment of blooded stock, the largest number, from the Haras du Poles, stud of A. K. Macomber of San Francisco. It is said to be the biggest single shipment of the kind ever sent to the United States from a foreign port.

It was shipped on the steamer, Olen of the Pacific Line and consigned to Dr. Robert W. McCoy of this city. The consignment represents an overflow from the stud which Mr. Macomber acquired from the estate of Dr. E. W. K. Vanleer. Most of the horses in the consignment are from four to six years old, and only a few are more than ten years of age. They will be sold by George Bain at the private stable of Mr. Macomber at Belmont Park about the middle of next month. They will be on exhibition for three weeks prior to the sale. At the close of the last French racing season Mr. Macomber found himself in possession of 115 mares, and as in addition, he is the owner of forty-five fillies coming on to take their place in the breeding ranks, he decided to allow the breeders in the United States to benefit by the surplus.

BOMBAY AUTHORITIES HOT AGAINST WHITES

BOMBAY, India, Nov. 20.—The corporation of Bombay has passed a resolution urging that in view of the unjust and humiliating treatment of Indians by the Government of the Dominions and Crown Colonies, no municipal insurance of funds be placed with the companies or banks registered in those places, and that no person born in those Dominions or Crown Colonies be employed by the Bombay municipality.

The mover of the resolution declared that the tour of Rt. Hon. Srinivasa Sastri, member of the Indian Commission of State and a representative of the Indian Government at the various peace and economic conferences, had absolutely failed to bring the Indians the relief they sought. Mr. Sastri sailed from London about the middle of last May on his tour among the Dominions, which included Australia, New Zealand and Canada, on his mission for pleading equality of status for Indian settlers in the Dominions and Crown Colonies. He was well received in all the places visited by those high in authority.

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN ON THE ELECTION

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The Manchester Guardian, discussing Labor's great advance in connection with the general elections, says it is important to remember that this is the first time the young men who served in the war were able, except nominally, to vote. The Guardian says it will be no surprise if the first great upheaval of British Labor in this century should be found to date from the great struggle in which, for the first time, the common people felt distinctly that their rulers on the whole had failed in the day of trial, and that the country was exasperated from that failure by the exertions of Labor under arms.

With regard to the failure of Liberalism, the Guardian thinks it is heart-breaking to find Liberal breath wasted in discussing whether Mr. Asquith or Lloyd George was the man responsible for it, and which wing of the Liberal party did worse in the last parliament. Until all these trivial antinomies are abandoned, the Guardian says, Liberalism, for all serious purposes, is out of action.

GLACIERS DIMINISHING

PARIS, Nov. 18.—The glaciers of the French Alps are gradually melting down. Though some of them, such as that of the Argentero, have grown longer, the Merde Glacier and others have shortened by 67 feet during the last four or five years. What is more important is that all of them have become far more broken up by crevasses and their depth, according to scientific measurement, has decreased by many feet.

Professor Allix, who in a paper to the scientific society of the Isere yesterday, gave some of the most recent measurements, declared it was an unquestionable fact that the ice reserves in the glaciers had decreased enormously. Partly this was no doubt due to the warm winters and summers of the last few years, but he doubted whether even a series of severe winters would easily make up the decrease.

The importance of this gradual diminution of the ice reserves lies in the fact that the rivers in the south of France which are alimented from the glaciers have fallen in regularity and volume, and the electrification schemes which are on foot may ultimately suffer.

Herring Failure Is Being Probed

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The theory that the disastrous failure of the herring fishery might be attributed to an alleged change in the currents of the North Sea has aroused much interest in scientific and fishing circles. The matter is under the constant investigation of the Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries.

Mr. Nelson, scientific superintendent of the Fishery Board for Scotland, stated that, so far as the tides were concerned, in an summer of 1920, and again in 1921, there was an abnormal influx of Atlantic water into the North Sea, coming in by way of the Orkney-Sutherland passage. "The water," he said, "is more salt, of higher temperature and contains a distinct fauna. One of the most highly-recognized animals is a jelly-fish like organism called a 'sea-bell'.

These are found abundantly in Atlantic water, but never in the true waters of the North Sea. We know that the herring feeds on small crustacea, and the Atlantic water is found to be very deficient in these crustacea. Thus the cause at once seen a reason for the very poor quality of the herrings caught last year. As soon as the research vessels of the Scottish Fishery Board were ready for use this summer, an expedition was made to find out the position of the Atlantic water. It was found to be normal, and to show no signs of penetrating into the North Sea. This may be some late with the successful summer herring fishing. The herrings were in extremely good condition.

In 1921 there was no really a scarcity of herrings, but the herrings caught were of a very poor quality.

"It is impossible to say what actually was the cause of this until we have made further investigations, but this matter will certainly be carefully looked into each summer. The previous influx of Atlantic water into the North Sea took place as long ago as 1905, so that it will be seen that the investigations are necessarily laborious and extend over a long period of time.

In addition to the direct investigations of the North Sea and the

Senator Beaubien Honored in Paris

(Special to The Guardian.)
LONDON, Nov. 21.—Senator Beaubien of Montreal, was given an ovation at a dinner given by the Canadian section of the British Chamber of Commerce in Paris and other organizations there when he presented statistics showing the enormous resources of Canada.

The minister of Commerce, who was also present, officially stated that Premier Poincaré of France had approved the project for an exhibition train of British products to tour France. Among others at the dinner were Marshall Joffre, Poch and Fayoll, all of France.

West of Scotland, arrangements have been made with the French Government to investigate the movements of the Atlantic water off the Bay of Biscay and at the entrance to the English Channel. Arrangements have also been made with the Portuguese Government to make weekly records of salinity and temperature at the Azores, and the American Government are being approached with a view to establishing marine recording stations in the Gulf of Florida, which is the source of the Gulf Stream.

We thus have our finger on the pulse of that great artery which supplies the very life blood of the fisheries of Northern Europe.

Mr. Nelson added that Mr. Otto Pettersen, the delegate of Sweden on the International Council for the Exploration of the Sea had compiled records relating to the herring fishing from the very earliest times. His first records depended on extracts from the ancient sagas, which chronicled the periods when herring fishing was at its maximum. Mr. Pettersen found that there occurred a maximum period, followed by a period in which there was practically no fishing. The period extended, roughly, over about 111 years. This might be correlated with a certain relative position of the sun, moon, and earth, when the maximum tidal force is obtained. The Norwegian period of plenty alternated with the Swedish period.
