THE DUKE STEPS OUT

PROGRAM BY ELOCUTION PUPILS

High Class Entertainment Presented by Island Lady in Regina, Sask.

A Regina paper contains a report of an entertainment presented in that city by Mrs. Amy C. Westmoreland, widow of the late Rev. Ernest A. Westmoreland, formerly of Prince Edward Island. Mrs. Westmoreland is a native of Pownal, and is a very talented elocutionist.

The report is as follows:

Pantomime, pageantry, classical drama and dramatic readings made up the program presented last night at the F. N. Drake Building for Music and Art by Mrs. Amy C. Westmoreland and her elocution pupils before a large audience that expressed its enjoyment at many points during the evening. To Mrs. Westmoreland a sheaf of roses was presented and to Miss Isabel Pease, pianist, a sheaf of daffodils, both presentations eliciting much applause.

The varied and artistic selections came to an end with the reading of Tennyson's poem "A Dream of Fair Women," during which time students made their entry and took part in presenting the narrative. Betty Benwell, Margaret Reid, Jean Brown, Eida Borland, Madeline Hawn, Blanche Horton, Grace Nelson, Ruth Sparling and Ruby Smith took the parts of Cleopatra, Helen of Troy, Joan of Arc and the other famed characters represented. All were in classic robes and the Egyptian queen reclined upon a strikingly luxurious sort of couch.

"Robin Hood," as played and sung by a score of gay young foresters, was a popular part of the proceedings. An archery contest was well carried out and the duel between the bold Robin and a diminutive Maid Marion was not too fearsome to be a delight. All the choruses and the action of the play, not to mention the foresters' becoming clothes, were bright and pleasing. The performers were: Beth Lockyer as the prince of outlaws; Murray Edgar, Wilma Wagg, Ruby Smith, Helen Taylor, Leonard Peterson, Marjorie Beach, Catherine McConchey, Carrie Uphrarch, Gertrude Bride, Muriel Bradshaw, Madeline Hawn, Betty Benwell, Ray Beach and Ruth Sparling.

The pantomime, "An Artist and His Model," was the most humorous part of the program. All in dumb show, Miss Ruby Smith and Miss Blanche Horton left the audience almost believing it had listened to an hour's conversation between the painter and the fair lady he wished to immortalize. Miss Eida Borland, Miss Madeline Hawn, Miss Ruth Sparling and Miss Jean Brown gave readings.

For the drama, "Sardines," the players were Miss Hawn, Miss Brown, Catherine McKenzie, Margaret Reid and Mary Quigley. A pair of scenes from "As You Like It," were given, the costumes again being of the most correct and pictorial kind. A dozen members of the class wearing Greek robes gave a demonstration of extremely graceful and effective posing and exercising. Orchestral music was provided for some of the numbers. The stage arrangements were admirably carried out.

The evening's program under Mrs. Westmoreland's direction, possessed much charm. In addition to the training in dramatic reading the students have received it was evident that they have an understanding of graceful and natural movements and of the value of appropriate costuming and stage setting.

Nearly $20,000 worth of ambergris, used largely in making perfumes, was taken from a whale captured in Arctic waters.

ORDINATION AT IONA

On Sunday, June 8th, James Phalen McKenna, son of Mr. and Mrs. James McKenna, Newtown Cross, was ordained to the Holy Priesthood by His Lordship Bishop O'Leary, assisted by Rev. A. L. Sinnott, Rev. F. McMahon, D.D., Mr. Louis Dougan, Eccl. of Edmonton, being master of ceremonies.

The Rev. P. S. Duffy, P.P., of Iona assisted the newly ordained priest. Present in the sanctuary were the Revs. P. D. McGuigan, P. Hogan, George McCabe, M. Rooney and John Sullivan.

A sermon suitable for the occasion was delivered by Rev. A. L. Sinnott, who took for his text "Thou Art a Priest For Ever According to the Order of Melchisedek." In the course of his discourse the Rev. preacher clearly explained the Divine Institution of order with the three-fold power it confers. The offering of sacrifice, preaching the word of God, and the power of forgiving sins.

An immense congregation was present, many from the city being present.

Among those from abroad were Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose McMillan, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank McMillan, and daughter Frances, of Portland, Maine both men being uncles of the newly ordained priest, also his brother, Mr. Joseph McKenna, Manager Royal Bank, Meteghan River, N.S., accompanied by his bride.

The choir rendered very acceptably the beautiful hymns, "Come Holy Ghost" and "Veni Creator Spiritus." Mr. Alex M. McMillan presided at the organ which had recently been purchased and was played for the first time on this occasion.

Immediately after the ceremony Father McKenna imparted his first blessing to his parents and immediate relatives, and then to the entire congregation.

Father McKenna who completed his course at the Grand Seminary, Quebec, and is now temporarily attached to the Cathedral staff, will sing his first High Mass at Iona on Sunday, June 16th.

Marigolds

Marigolds will prove a boon to the person who account of summer cottage, holidays, golf, or plain laziness, is inclined to neglect the garden during the hot weather of July and August. They will bloom right through this when many other plants droop and wither. When once established they require very little care the removal of the fading bloom being about all that is necessary. The marigold family comes in such a variety of heights and style of flowers that a whole garden could be planted with it alone. There is the diminutive little French type with a mahogany brown and yellow spotted flower which may be used for edging. Then there are taller sorts of the same kind and also the huge African types which can be used as hedges or in stumps at the back of the garden. They bloom freely sending out huge sulphur-colored flowers. There is also an English marigold, commonly known as the Calendula or pot marigold. This has a pretty, thick foliage, very green. It grows about eight inches high, blooms from early Summer right through to the heavy frost in the Fall and will seed itself and brought indoors where it will continue blooming. All the marigolds prefer a light soil and do best in an open position, although they will give very fair results where partly shaded. They should be well thinned, which in the case of the African sorts means a foot each way. (I did not realize what could be done with the la.)

PERSONALS

Mrs. George Watts, York, is reported much better today.

Mr. Edwin P. Clarke, Mt. Stewart, spent yesterday at York.

Mr. George Henderson, Oregon, is spending a few days at York. He left the Province forty-eight years ago.

Mrs. W. E. Strickland of Calgary, Alta., left yesterday morning on return to her home.

The Guardian regrets to learn of the continued illness of Mr. John Kielly, Stanhope.

Messrs Clark Harding, Walter Connick, Gerald Bowness, were visitors to the city and attended the show.

The many friends of Miss Velda Taylor, Foundry Mills, are pleased to see her home again, after an operation for appendicitis in the Prince County Hospital.

Mr. William E. Forbes of Messrs Brace, McKay, & Co., and Mr. E. N. Nicolson, of Nicolson Oil Co., Summerside, have been touring in King's county this week and were in the city yesterday on their way home. Everything was looking fine in the eastern part of the Island, and seems to give promise of an abundant harvest.

LOBSTERMEN TO CO-OPERATE

BOSTON, June 13.—Through the co-operative efforts of representatives of the United States navy department, the commonwealth of Massachusetts and the lobstermen of the state, a chart has been prepared and instructions issued that will make lobster fishing in Massachusetts much more successful in the future than hitherto. Interference with lobster fishing by naval vessels plying in lobster waters appears to have reached an end. For several years ships of the Navy and merchant ships have interfered seriously with the lobster fishing industry in the Buzzards Bay-Vineyard Sound-No Man's Land area, as well as at Newport, R. I.; in that these ships pass through the lobster grounds, cutting off the buoys, there-by losing the pots. A pot costs $4 and the average value of the lobsters for the season is $30; so that a lobsterman losing his pot might lose as much as $1000 or $2000 for the season.

Many protests were made concerning these losses and these led to an attempt of the Navy to avoid the pots on every occasion, but it was found that, if they avoided them this week by going around an area, next week they would be right in the middle of a new series of pots, which had been moved over to the area which they were occupying. This was due to the migration of the lobsters, which was little understood. The lobstermen are close to shore early in April and move slowly seaward until November, when they practically disappear.

The Navy department requested Admiral Phillip Andrews, commandant of the First Naval district, to study the situation and make recommendations for rectifying it if possible. Commander Guy Davis was detailed for this duty and he consulted the director of game and fisheries, William C. Adams, at the state house, who assisted by turning over the files, so that all previous complaints were available and also the names of the lobstermen and their addresses. At that time, Mr. Adams stated that, although he had been director for fourteen years, he had no chart showing the lobster fishing grounds in these areas.

Letters were sent out to all lobstermen covering the entire district where interference had been experienced, with a request that they forward information regarding the lobster grounds used by them each month and which month of the year. Many lobstermen had private grounds, which had been handed down from generation to generation and which they did not wish to divulge. However, every lobsterman communicated with, frankly gave the fishing grounds used by him during the year, and from voluminous data a chart was constructed which showed the entire lobster area used by them from April to November. This chart is accurate and copies have been forwarded to Director Adams for the use of the state of Massachusetts.

Upon the completion of the chart a conference was called at the Navy Yard, Boston, Representative lobstermen attended as did Director Adams and Commander Davis. The chart was inspected, criticized and approved. It was then sent to lobstermen in the area for further criticism and suggestions. After all had had an opportunity to have corrections made a finished chart was constructed.

The chart was forwarded to the commander of the naval destroyer squadron and the scout fleet with instructions that his vessels adhere to the routes designated in the chart.

The Navy department has approved each recommendation of Admiral Andrews and directed the U. S. Navy Hydrographic Office, at Washington to publish the charts and forward a copy to each naval vessel operating in the Atlantic.

It is generally believed that thousands of dollars in lobster pots will be saved to the lobstermen of the state through the navy's co-operation.

Rev. Dr. Fraser Retires From College Post

To Be Principal-Emeritus—Filled Despite Protests.

OTTAWA, June 13.—The Board of Management of the Presbyterian college, Montreal, recommended that the resignation of Rev. Principal D. J. Fraser, D. D., L. L. D., as Principal of the College be accepted and that he be given the title of principal—emeritus of the college and granted a retiring allowance of $3,000 per annum. Rev. Dr. S. Banks, Nelson, of Hamilton, Ont., opposed the appointment of Rev. A. S. Pearson, of Glasgow, to the chair of church history and homiletics. He pleaded for a selection from amongst residents of Canada and placed in nomination the name of Rev. Dr. Robert Johnston, of St. Catharines, Ont. Dr. Johnston, however, declined but pleaded for a delay in making the appointment. The appointment was made.

Peters Road and Vicinity

Favorable weather conditions for the past week has enabled farmers to catch up with their seeding operations, potato-planting, etc., and the out-look for good results is promising.

The epidemic of scarlet-fever with one exception is much lessened in the community and most of the patients are in a fair way to normalcy.

The new cemetery at Peter's Road is being attended to in the erection of fitting monuments to the departed. We note the following: To the late A. Higginbotham of Cambridge Road; to the late Mrs. D. McKay of Greek River; to the late George Reynolds of Cambridge Road; to the late Hugh McLean of Charlottetown. The work is being performed by the old and reliable firm of Vere Beck & Son, Montague.

The Peter's Road route in connection with the Murray Harbor North Dairying Co., began to operate on Monday 10th inst.

The following may not appear very amusing in print, but some interested spectators nearly doubled up, when they saw Mr. Joseph Jenkins, Greek River, busily employed drawing away the banking from his residence with a horse and plough. Mr. Jenkins says it is O. K. and saves time at this particular busy season. The horse was hitched considerably in advance of the instrument in use and steering was thus facilitated.

You may have heard of the wonderful feats of the "barber" at the Spring Cross Road with implements of torture deftly welded akin to this. Well that's him!

In the interests of Dairy enterprise in the Community, where our disease-free area in part exists, the action of our enterprising citizen Mr. Malcolm Reid is to be commended in his recent purchase of a registered Jersey sire, accompanied by papers from The Canadian Jersey Cattle Club. The name "Pride's King of Willow Green" is appropriate. The animal was bred by and purchased from Mr. Edwin B. Mutch, North River, P. E. I. We believe in P. E. I.

Some of our local agriculturists having about completed their work on the farm, are anticipating a day off cod-fishing before the boats have been taken in.

The School at Peter's Road, owing to the prevalence of scarlet fever has been closed sine die until further notice.

The Board of Health (Trustees) should take steps to have the school building thoroughly disinfected before the re-opening and Annual Meeting.

Mrs. Bessie Graham and Miss Arlie McLean, Charlottetown, spent the week-end at Peter's Road and Murray Harbor North, having motored from the city.

Now that the tourist season is on and the charms of rural scenery with the allurements of stream, rivers and bays, and the coast waters with their enervating sea breezes, might it not be a good investment for some of our Canadian citizens to provide ways and means in the erection of an up-to-date hotel for the accommodation and comfort of our summer visitors who would surely visit Murray Harbor during their vacation from the American cities, but who otherwise would have no certain place at which to put up or the independence they would desire.

To keep the music library of one London motion-picture theatre up to date, nearly 2,000 numbers are added each year.

One Man's Wife

They tried the plan. Yvonne liked it. "I will be already dancing when the eyes of the audience catch me," she said. "Exactly. Never think of your audience. Let them think of you," proclaimed M. Romanovski.

PREPARATIONS

The matter of costumes interested them all. Yvonne's taste was found to be perfect. She knew the effects she wanted to obtain and worked for them in every detail.

Her first dance was to be symbolic of a virgin's greeting to the spring. For it, she chose an all-white costume. She would dance in bare feet. Around her head was to be bound a fillet of pond lilies.

"The only dancer on Broadway who hasn't bobbed her hair," Mr. Drake observed astutely and presently took the public into his confidence. That night the theatre-going public knew a new dancer was to be seen at the opening of "The and Furious" the following Monday, and that she was to be known only as Mademoiselle, and that she danced with long hair.

Yvonne planned a first dance for her second number. A sheaf of scarlet silk, very scant, very form-fitting, was made for that. Ingenious lighting provided tongues of flame to follow her about the stage. To those who watched her at the dress rehearsal throwing herself passionately into her dance as though she was an all-consuming flame, she seemed the very spirit of the fire.

For her third number, which would come at the close of the second act, she elected a quaint, mingled, old-fashioned dance in which she wore a hooped skirt that billowed and dipped as she moved. There was something roughish about this dance, and the contrast between her formal old-fashioned costume and her quick steps was amusing.

"You see now quoth M. Romanovski, "she has the sense of comedy too. All great artists have."

Mrs. Ogden had insisted on seeing Lottie, the maid she had spoken of, to Yvonne. At first Yvonne had protested, but when she found how well Lottie fitted into her life she welcomed her, and Lottie became an abject slave to Yvonne's beauty.

Life was very full, it seemed to Yvonne in the five days that elapsed before her opening. So full that she scarcely thought of Richard. There were Lottie and Dicky at home. There was the constant rehearsal costume selection, practice make-up, to occupy her away from home. Yvonne was too busy to suffer greatly in these five days.

The evening before the opening she was to spend quietly at home. But one wanted her to go to bed early and to sleep long and soundly. Lottie had brushed her hair and laid out her night things Yvonne clasped her hands around her knees and thinking.

Tomorrow night was the great night. They believed in her so, their friends. She must not disappoint them. She had no fear of that. Only Richard were to be there watching her. How she would dance for him!

At the thought of his name all her old remorse swept over her. And when she knelt to pray that night, it was not for success in her debut, but for forgiveness for having disobeyed her husband.

You want Yvonne to succeed. You expect her to. Thrill with her tomorrow as she sways a blouse adorned by the simplicity of her art.

Insidious Eye Strain

We use this adjective advisedly.

Sufferers from Eye Strain may have perfect vision and therefore do not suspect the presence of any evil defect.

The motive power of the entire human organism is Nerve Energy.

Normal eyes, it is computed, utilize about 20% of this Nerve Energy, but when Eye Strain is present, a much larger proportion is required. Hence defective eyes through their consumption of an excessive amount of Nerve Energy may seriously affect the functioning of other organs of the body and produce ill health.
