Purchaser Killed By Shock Of Fraud

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Reasons for the authenticity of the Masters which Hunter Charles Rogers, of Cobham, Surrey, is reported to be about to present to the Toronto Art Gallery were advertised to your correspondent yesterday. Definite proof is to hand in the form of an English writer not known in Canada stated today that Rogers, after being befriended by his husband, sold him for £1,500 paintings which were afterwards found to be almost worthless. Rogers, after his demobilization from the Canadian army, applied to the Epsom guardians for relief, which was given him. He later enlisted Pratt's sympathy and obtained a job as gardener from him. Last September he told his benefactor that he had come into possession of a number of genuine Old Masters, supposed to include a Constable, two Corregios, six Hop-

Feast Of Immaculate Conception Observed At Notre Dame

A celebration of marked devotional interest took place Friday, December eighth at Notre Dame Academy. It was the occasion of the patronal feast of the Children of Mary. Mass was said by the Right Reverend L.J. O'Leary, D.D. His Lordship entered the chapel to the strains of "Grand March, by Mottet" played by the Convent Orchestra. The vocal selections during the service were artistically rendered by the choir which was composed exclusively of members of the society. The Soloists were the Misses Louise Arsenault, Rose Ryan, Gertrude MacDonald, Agnes Flynn.

The wealth of natural flowers, the generous gifts of loyal and devoted clients of the Blessed Mother helped to beautify the highly lighted sanctuary. In the evening at seven o'clock came the fitting close to a beautiful day. Pontifical Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament took place with his Lordship Bishop O'Leary as celebrant assisted by Reverend Father McIntyre as deacon, and Reverend Father St. John as subdeacon. Reverend Father Maurice McDonald, chaplain of the Sodality, enrolled a large number of new members. In glowing terms Reverend Father McIntyre spoke of the prerogatives of the Mother of God and brought vividly to the minds of the hearers the spotlessness of Her "our Spinal nature's solitary boast." The program of the evening executed by the Sodality choir was as follows: "Ave Maria Stella" Muller. "Magnificat" Roswig. "Cor Jesu" Gravier. "Ave Verum" Faure. "Tota Pulchra Es" Riboux. "Tantum Ergo" Verdussen. "Agnus Dei" Gregorian. "Gloria Maria" Faure.

Soloists: Mrs. C. Kelly and the Misses A. Dolron, G. MacDonald, Rose Ryan, L. Arsenault, J. Houbin, B. Aubin. Violinists: Misses D. Hogan, G. McCormack, A. O'Leary, G. Michaud, K. McLellan. The chapel was taxed to its utmost capacity proving once more to all that devotion to our Blessed Mother never wanes in the hearts of her people. At Notre Dame the feast of the Immaculate Conception has been celebrated with undiminished pety since the foundation of the Society over sixty years ago.

JURY RETURNS VERDICT OF ACCIDENTAL DEATH

Several Give Evidence at Investigation Last Night Into Circumstances of the Death of John Flynn Last Wednesday.

That John Flynn, laborer, met his death last Wednesday morning on board the S. S. Carunna, a purely accidental cause, was the verdict brought in by Mr. F. P. Hennessey as chairman of the jury empaneled by Coroner Dr. Houston at the inquest held last night in the Police Court. The verdict was unanimous and was brought in after a few minutes deliberation upon the hearing of the evidence of witnesses to the accident. The jury members were Messrs. F. P. Hennessey, John Berrigan, J. P. McCluskey, John B. Connolly, F. H. Trainor, James McEachern, Frank Riggs.

The examination of witnesses continued from 7.30 until 9.30 last night. Dr. Ledwell, A. A. Hennessey, Daniel Gillis, Martin Power, Jas. McAleer, Wallace McDonald and Dan Coughlan were called to the stand. The evidence was as follows:— Dr. R. J. Ledwell: (Sworn) I am a regularly qualified and practicing physician of this province. I was summoned about 8.10 a. m. on the morning of the accident. A few minutes afterwards I saw the man at the entrance to Pickard's wharf in the ambulance with Mr. A. A. Hennessey in charge. I saw Father Rooney was with Mr. Hennessey. I examined the man and found he suffered from a compound commuted and depressed fracture of the skull (the doctor here gave in technical term his finding.) There was considerable blood oozing from the left side of the head and from the scalp wound. It would be difficult to say whether the man was living or not. I could not say whether life was extinct or not. Being in doubt I asked the clergyman to give him conditional absolution. I gave the man no treatment. He suffered from a very severe injury to his head. The man had a very severe wound and was beyond any help I could give. I saw Mr. A. Hennessey, Under-taker, Charlottetown, (sworn) Under a few minutes after 8 a. m. Wednesday I was called to Pickard's wharf on an ambulance call. I arrived there three or four minutes afterwards. I passed Father Rooney on the way down, on Water Street. I took the stretch-er out and went aboard the steamer. Father Rooney arrived at the wharf a few minutes after me and administered the last rites of the Church on the deck of the steamer as soon as he arrived. Flushing ceremony in the ambulance. We put the body in the ambulance and started for the City Hospital. On the way I met Dr. Ledwell in front of Carvell Bros. I stopped and let him in the ambulance. He examined the man while I kept moving along. I stopped shortly after and Dr. Ledwell and Father Rooney both got out, one of them said: "The man was dead." I think it was Dr. Ledwell. So I then proceeded to my undertaking rooms with the body. I placed the body on the table and waited for orders. I thought the man was dead when I first saw him. His skull was split right down the centre. His head was covered with blood. There was a small piece of bone broken away from forehead. When I saw him he was lying on a bench of some kind with a life belt under his head. (to the foreman) I found the man on the steamer. I do not know whether he was dead then or not but I thought he was.

Daniel Gillis: city, laborer. I was working on the steamer Corunna the morning of the accident. I was winch driver. We started to rig the gear to discharge the coal. We took one wooden stand aboard and put it in its place. We went to get the other one. John Stevedore, I do not know whether it was another man. The hook of which was hooked on the top of the first stand. Flynn went aboard the steamer, climbed to the top of the stand, unhooked the hook and came down with it. He passed it out on the wharf and stayed on the steamer. The hook was placed on top of the other stand on the wharf and they gave me the word to "go ahead" on the winch. I started ahead on the winch and I heard the men on the wharf shout to Flynn to "look out." I saw the first stand on the deck was starting to tip over. Flynn started to move away in the direction the stand was falling. The men shouted three or four times. Flynn had his head down, in a crouched position. One of the cross pieces struck him on the back of the head and took him with it to the deck. He was crushed by the weight, face down on the deck and held there. It fell on top of his head. Some of the men ran and lifted the stand off and carried him down and put him on a hatch. A telephone message was sent in for a doctor and the ambulance arrived soon after. The weight of one of the stands would be about eight hundred pounds. Wallace McDonald was boss of the job. He was there at the time. My usual job is running the winch. I have had a good deal of experience. There was no hitch in the work. Everything was going along as usual. There were about eight employed in raising the stand. All necessary precautions were taken. I consider the affair was purely accidental. I did not see what really happened to the first stand to cause it to fall. (To Mr. Hennessey.) The Laborers Protective Union own the stands. (To Mr. Riggs.) If the stand had been lashed to the deck the accident might not have happened. (To Mr. Hennessey.) The stand was simply put in the position it was to occupy. There was nothing holding it at the time. It would be lashed afterwards. The stand is four legged, about six feet at the bottom, tapering to nothing at the top. The cross piece that hit Flynn on the head was about half way up. When both stands are up they are lashed to the deck in case the coal is to be taken. (To Mr. Martin Power: laborer (sworn). I was working at No. 2 hatch on the steamer on which the accident occurred. I heard men shout to Flynn to "look out." When I looked around the stand was down on him. I rushed over to help to take it off. We took the stand off and saw the condition of the man. I shouted to get a doctor. The captain of the steamer ordered the man to be carried to the hatch, and too other men carried him to a hatch. The captain got a life belt and someone put a blanket over him. Just about this time the ambulance and Father Rooney arrived and I helped to carry him ashore and put him in the ambulance.

Wallace McDonald, city, laborer. I saw Mr. A. Hennessey, Under-taker, Charlottetown, (sworn) after the accident, helping to raise the stand. We got one stand up on the deck and carried the other one over and were just about to hook it on to take it aboard when I heard some of the men shouting "look out." When I looked up the stand which we had put in position was falling. It was on the wharf. I saw Flynn on the deck. He started to run out of the way. He just made a couple of steps and it caught him on the head, knocking him down. I went aboard and helped to lift the stand off him. The captain ordered him to be put on a hatch. I helped to carry him to the hatch. I thought the man was dead when I first saw him. His skull was split right down the centre. His head was covered with blood. There was a small piece of bone broken away from forehead. When I saw him he was lying on a bench of some kind with a life belt under his head. (to the foreman) I found the man on the steamer.
