Italian Liner Sunk By Submarine

MALIN, via Paris, Dec. 27.—A Tripoli despatch to the Socolo says that the Italian Liner Port Said, has been sunk by a submarine flying the Austrian colors. Six passengers and one member of the crew perished. The rest were saved. An Italian destroyer chased and shelled the submarine which was of large dimensions. Although believed to be hit, the submarine was able to plunge and disappear. The destroyer then turned her attention to a small Greek liner, a witness to the engagement, and a visit to this vessel led to the suspicion that she was in connivance with the Austrian. After rescuing the survivors of the Port Said, the destroyer took the suspected liner into Derna for a strict search in the belief that she has been engaged in supplying enemy submarines.

GREECE DOES NOT WANT TO CEASE NEUTRALITY

PARIS, Dec. 27.—The Athens correspondent of the Matin sends the following: "Having interviewed M. Venizelos on the subject of the elections, and obtained from him and affirmation that his triumph was demonstrated by the small number of votes polled I called upon M. Gounaris who denied there was any considerable number of abstentions, and claimed that even if the 300,000 soldiers mobilized, had been able to vote the result would have been the same. I then sought to ask about the foreign policy of Greece, but M. Gounaris interrupted me saying: "Greece's policy is unchanged. Greece is a small state, which does not want to be dragged into the war which might involve a catastrophe like those, which have befallen Belgium and Serbia. We are Greeks and nothing else. I am neither a Germanophile nor a Franchophile, but just a Greek. Germanophiles do not exist in Greece. "All Greece even under the present circumstances remains attached to England, France and Russia, to which she owes her existing and development. But you cannot ask that these sentiments should go so far as to lead us, without absolute necessity, into the conflict, and we believe nothing new requires us to revise our neutrality. Greece will always feel keenly whatever happens, for better or worse to France but we cannot do more. "I then asked M. Gounaris to explain how, if the Bulgarians are the hereditary enemies of Greece, the Greek people should agree to the allies army falling back indefinitely before the Bulgarians on Greek territory. "Now you're going into the domain of the future," he replied, "and I cannot enter into that. I was speaking only of accomplished facts and the attitude they impose upon us. I cannot speak of the future. "I remarked that such silence might be considered significant and M. Gounaris explained, "I don't even authorize you to draw a deduction from my silence."

TALES TOLD BY MEN IN THE FIGHTING LINES ON LAND AND SEA

VICTORY OFF THE FALKLANDS

The Scharnhorst, Gneisenau, Nürnberg and Leipzig were sunk half a year ago off the Falkland Islands, and the defeat of the Good Hope and the Monmouth amply avenged. The honor of victory belongs to Sir Frederick Doveton Sturdee. Sir Frederick is a young admiral, as admirals go, but for cleverness he was more than a match for von Spee. He was chief of staff at the admiralty in the early stages of the war, which means that he assisted in planning the moves on the chessboard. It fell to him to act; to apply the strategy and tactics which he planned for others at sea while he sat at a desk. It was his wit against von Spee's, who was not deficient in this respect. If he had been he might not have steamed into the trap. The trouble was that von Spee had some, but not enough. It would have been better for him if he were guileless as a parson. Sir Frederick is so gentle-mannered that one would never suspect him of a "double bluff," which was what he played on von Spee. After von Spee's victory over Craddock, Sturdee slipped across to the South Atlantic, without any one knowing that he had gone, with a squadron strong enough to do unto von Spee what von Spee had done unto Craddock. But before you wing your bird you must flush him. The thing was to find von Spee and force him to give battle; for the South Atlantic is broad and von Spee, it is supposed, was in an Emden mood and bent on reaching harbor in German Southwest Africa, whence he could sail out and destroy British shipping on the Cape route. When he intercepted a British wireless message—Sturdee had left off the sender's name and location—telling the plotting old Canopus seeking home or assistance before von Spee overtook her, that she would be perfectly safe in the harbor at Port William, as guns had been erected for her protection, von Spee guessed that this was a bluff and rightly. But it was only bluff Number One. He changed his order to do it was time to finishing off the old Canopus on the way across to Africa. There he fell foul of bluff Number Two. Sturdee did not have to seek him; he came to Sturdee.

little points of the German ships with the shells sweeping toward them and the smoke of explosions which burst on board them. It was not the British who needed his prayers that day, but the Germans. The Germans are more in need of prayers at all times because of the damnable way they act.

A BRIGHT SHOW BY PARISIAN GIRLS

The Parisian girls opened their engagement at the Prince Edward on Christmas Day, and although the entire company must have been, have been extremely weary, owing to the delays in getting here, they presented a bright-snappy performance in the afternoon and again in the evening to large audiences. It is quite a long time since Charlottetown has had a real good laugh, and that is exactly what this bright, breezy company is giving, and it is being appreciated for those who laugh Christmas night were there again last night bringing with them additional friends. The Parisian Girls do good work in unison and as each member is attractive and graceful in speech and action, they are delightfully entertaining. Last night's audience was in a good mood and laughter and merriment were altogether in order as the fun followed in quick succession. "Drop it and Run" was the offering and it happened there was no deep plot to follow, but it did splendidly to show the company off to advantage. The costumes were daintily attractive with frequent changes and the singing and dancing of the entire group being the general order. The young lady soloists Misses Beslie Fox, Elsie Wallace, Toban Ashton and Violin Darn, sang in solos and chorus in a splendid manner. They have clear tuneful voices and sing catchy and pretty songs. Miss Fox made a decided hit in her song "Fishing" and as the ball was most attractive she certainly was successful. Special mention might be made of the violin playing of Mr. I. Kubill who is an expert and sympathetic player. He gave a magnificent rendition last night "Oh Canada" with the "Maple Leaf" as an encore. This part of the entertainment is one that appeals to all lovers of good music.

Victors and Vanquished Those dripping German officers who had seen the battered turret carried away bodily into the sea by a British 12-inch shell, who had endured a fury of concessions and destruction, with steel missiles cracking steel structures into fragments, came on board the Invincible looking for signs of some blows delivered in return for the crushing blows that had beaten their ships into the sea, and saw none until they were invited into the ward-room, which was in chaos—and then they smiled. At least they had sent one shell home. The sight was sweet to them, so sweet that, in respect to the feeling of the vanquished, the victors held silence with a knightly consideration. But where had the shell entered? There was no sign of any hole. Then they learned that the fire of the guns of the starboard turret midships over the ward-room, which was on the port side, had deposited a great many things on the floor which did not belong there; and their expression changed. Even this comfort was taken from them. "We had the range of you!" the British explained. The chaplain of the Invincible was bound to have an anecdote. His place was down behind the armor with the doctor, waiting for wounded. He stood in his particular steel cave listening to the tremendous blasts of her guns which shook the Invincible's frame, and still no wounded arrived. Then he ran up a ladder to the deck and had a look around and saw the

THE ARMENIAN QUESTION

BERLIN, via London, December 24.—Count Ernest von Reventlow, naval expert, writing in the Tagess Zeitung further discusses the Armenian question, using as his text an expression contained in a pamphlet just published by C. Adolf Bratter, a Berlin political writer. Count von Reventlow cites this book as saying Armenian atrocities always arise in the same way, i.e., "Revolutionary Armenians are incited by Great Britain or Russia to uprisings, rebellion and treason. Full of bitterness, the Turks for decades have been vainly endeavoring to suppress these conspiracies." Bratter's book further declares that "Great Britain, with the help of Russia and France in the present case, planned an extended conspiracy in Armenia with the purpose of having an uprising occur at the moment when the Allies entered the Dardanelles. Unfortunately for the Armenians, the uprising came too soon." Count von Reventlow welcomes the book, saying: "It is high time Germans comprehended the real meaning of Armenian atrocity affairs. They should finally understand that it is not our ally to feel or even express sympathy with Armenian revolutionaries and users who form a great and malignant danger for our brave, tried and true Turkish allies, and who are the tool of our mortal enemies—Great Britain and Russia. "If the Turks did not defend themselves energetically and thoroughly against the Armenian danger whenever it arises they would be doing their allies as well as themselves a bad service. Therefore, we Germans must consider the handling of the Armenian question as an internal affair of the Turks."

KING PETER OF SERBIA ARRIVES IN AVLONA

BRINDISI, ITALY, Dec. 25.—(Via Paris Dec. 27)—King Peter of Serbia has arrived here on board an Italian cruiser.

PARIS, Dec. 27.—"King Peter of Serbia was brought from Durazzo, to Avlona on an Italian cruiser," says the Journals Avlona correspondent.

"The voyage was rough and the King had to be carried ashore in an armchair. It was a tragic and heartrending spectacle."

"An automobile carried the monarch to a secluded inn opposite the Italian headquarters, where upon him and was shown into the poorly furnished room he occupied. His clear eyes what depths of bitterness did they conceal. His features hollowed by suffering what immense weariness did they betray. That sorrowful countenance was the epitome of the whole tragic epoch."

"The physician, who interpreted for me, told me that upon his arrival the King asked the price of his room and added that he had no gold to pay for it."

"I am no longer a King," he said, "I am only General Totani, this name which will shelter the King's incognito during his exile, is that of a powerful family of Tirana to which Essad Pasha belongs."

"I will give no more orders. It is the Crown Prince who commands. For the future, I am nothing in the government. A soldier, I have only to obey."

"And the army, Your Majesty?" I asked.

"My soldiers are dropping from hunger and weariness. We must feed them and then after a few weeks rest we shall see."

"What are your plans, sire?" "I want to go to Saloniki to see my minister of war. If this is possible I will arrange something. I have got to live to see victory for my people, and the triumph of our just cause."
