

An Amazing Cure for Neuralgia Magical Relief for Headache

The Most Effective Remedy Known is "Nerviline."

The reason Nerviline is infallibly a remedy for neuralgia resides in two very remarkable properties Nerviline possesses.

The first is its wonderful power of penetrating deeply into the tissue, which enables it to reach the very source of congestion.

Nerviline possesses another and not less important action. It equalizes the circulation in the painful parts, and thus affords a sure barrier to the re-establishment of congestion.

You see the relief you get from Nerviline is permanent. It doesn't matter whether the cause is spasm of congestion, external or internal; if it is pain—equally with its curative action upon neuralgia—Nerviline will relieve and quickly cure rheumatism, sciatic, lumbago, strains, swelling or enlarged joints, and all other muscular aches.

...DRIFT ICE.—During the past week the easterly winds have filled Georgetown Harbor with drift ice, thus preventing the a. n. Enterprise and the Ferry boat "Montague" from making their usual trips. The fishermen also have been much inconvenienced by it as even comparatively small motor boats dared not venture out and many of the men who have run their lines are anxious for their safety. Yesterday there was a change of wind and the ice was fast disappearing. The first fresh herring of the season were caught yesterday.—G.

ASPHYXIATING GASES 'STILL IN USE

LONDON, May 7.—The British Official "Eye-Witness" in a long account of the engagement of the last few days in the Ypres region, records that the Germans have continued the use of asphyxiating gases, but with less success than on the first occasion.

Despite the use of gas by the Germans, the narrative says, the French have made continual advances east of the Ypres Canal, south of Piken, the result of which was to reduce the wedge occupied by the Germans in the French line between the Canal and the Ypres Canal, South of Piken, the over one thousand yards. During this advance, a large number of German prisoners were taken.

FRENCH ADVANCED.

While the French continued their advance in this section, it is asserted that the Germans attacked the British south of Neuve Chappelle, and at Hill No. 60, in both cases using gases. In the latter attack, however, owing to a change in the wind, the fumes were blown back toward the Germans, who are believed to have suffered, as no attempt to advance was made by them. Similar tactics are said to have been adopted by the Germans in their attack north of Ypres, last Sunday. "About half past five in the evening," the Eye-witness says, "a dense cloud of suffocating vapors were launched from their trenches along the whole front held by the French right, and by our left to a considerable distance east of St. Julien. The fumes did not carry much beyond our front trenches, but these were, to a great extent, rendered untenable and a retirement from them was ordered.

FIRED ON TRENCHES.

"No sooner had this started than the enemy opened a violent bombardment with asphyxiating shells and shrapnel on our trenches and on our infantry, as they were withdrawing. Meanwhile our guns had not been idle. From a distance, perhaps owing to some peculiarity of the light, the gas on this occasion took in like a great reddish cloud, and the moment it was seen our batteries poured a concentrated fire on the German trenches. "Curious situations then arose between us and the enemy, the poison belt, the upper part shredding into thin wreaths of vapor as it was shaken by the wind, and the lower and denser part sinking into all inequalities of the ground and rolling slowly down the trenches. Shells would rend it for a moment, but it only settled down again as thickly as before.

FACED HAIL OF SHRAPNEL.

"Nevertheless, the German infantry faced it, and they faced a hail of shrapnel as well. In some cases, where the gas had not reached our lines, our troops held firm, and shot through the cloud at the advancing Germans. In other cases the men holding the front line managed to move to the flank, where they were more or less beyond the affected area. Here they waited until the enemy came on, and they bayoneted them, when they reached our trenches. "On the extreme left our supporters waited until the wall of vapor reached our trenches when they charged through it and met the advancing Germans with the bayonet, as they swarmed over the parapets.

PERISHED FROM FUMES.

"South of St. Julien the denseness of the vapor compelled us to evacuate some trenches, but reinforcements arrived who charged the enemy before they could establish themselves in position. In every case the assaults failed completely. Large numbers were mowed down by our artillery.

Men were seen falling in heaps, and others scattered and running back to their own lines. Many who reached the gas cloud could not make their way through it, and in all probability a great number of the wounded perished from the fumes.

"Farther to the east a similar attack was made about 7 p. m., which seems to have been attended with even less success, and the assaulting infantry was at once beaten back by our artillery fire.

BEAT BACK THE ENEMY.

"A great deal has been said of the troops on the left, which saved the situation on April 22-23, but the services rendered by the British infantry further east were no less remarkable. The area to the north and east of Zonnebeke, representing a narrow hour of the salient, formed a kind of bastion. Throughout the fighting this garrison held firm until a raking artillery fire from all sides, and under repeated assaults which were delivered with so much determination that the enemy more than once reared up his trenches before they were beaten back. "Not only was this so, but while our men in this quarter attack were engaged in repelling attacks in front, they knew, all the time, that the troops on their left were falling back. The test was as hard as any soldiers can be asked to endure."

INDIANS' GREAT FIGHTING.

The Eye-Witness then relates incidents showing the steadiness of the Indian troops, who, he says, "advanced under murderous fire, their war cry swelling louder and louder above the noise." "Prisoners captured in the recent fighting," the narrative continues, "stated that one German corps lost eighty per cent of its men in the first week that the losses from our artillery fire, even during days when no attacks were taking place, had been very heavy, and that many of their own men had suffered from the effects of the gas.

"It would seem that a large number of infantry who had only received three weeks training were brought up during the battle to replace the casualties."

Canada's Fire Loss Is Higher Than Any Other Country in the World, According to the Report of the Conservation Commission at Ottawa

This should bring home to every property holder the necessity of Fire Insurance. Have you ever stopped to think how you would feel to have your accumulations suddenly obliterated? A fire may produce this result. The only absolute protection is Insurance. The cost is so trifling no one can afford to be without it. If you own any property liable to be destroyed by fire, it is a duty you owe yourself and to your family to insure it. A fire loss is always a misfortune to an honest man.
