SCENES IN THE OLD ABBEY WHEN CROWNING THE KING.

The Aged Archbishop With Trembling Hands, Had Need of Support—A Moment of Alarm—The King and Prince of Wales Embrace—A Moving Spectacle.

LONDON, August 9.—In Westminster Abbey the scene was nothing less than marvelous. Nearly seven thousand members of the nobility, the clergy, and the gentry had gathered, with foreign Princes, Ambassadors, Colonial Rulers, Indian Potentates and leaders from the furthest quarter of the globe where the Union Jack flies, to do honor to the King.

Two incidents in the service in the Abbey will live in the memory of all who witnessed them. The first of these, which almost developed into a dramatic contretemps, centered around the aged Archbishop of Canterbury.

From the commencement of the service the Archbishop had the greatest difficulty in reading or remembering the prayers. The book from which his almost blind eyes endeavored to read, shook in his hands and when he came to place the crown upon King Edward's head his huge frame, towering above the seated King, swayed so violently that the Bishop of Winchester had to support him, while the Dean of Westminster put a guarding hand under the crown.

It was evident that the Archbishop of Canterbury could not see his King's head and after groping around, he was just about to complete the most important part of the ceremony, when it was discovered that he had the crown with the back to the front.

Slowly he raised it, but too late to prevent the choir from prematurely bursting out with a loud "God Save the King." Amid a tension that had grown to a pitch of painful nervousness, the Archbishop finally managed to place the crown correctly upon the King's head.

A few minutes later came the climax to his feebleness. He was kneeling to do the first homage of all the subjects of the King when suddenly he almost fainted and would have fallen upon his Sovereign's knees had not King Edward tenderly, but firmly, grasped both the prelate's hands and lifted him to his feet.

The Bishops of London, Winchester and Durham clasped their hands around the Archbishop of Canterbury, the King kissed his wrinkled hand, the Archbishop's head fell back, his feet moved slowly and mechanically, and thus he was more carried than led from the throne to King Edward's chapel, where he was revived.

The tremor which this event had scarcely subsided when another exquisitely human touch varied the proceedings, and the King was forgotten in the father. Instead of merely accepting the homage of the Prince of Wales, King Edward put his arms around the Prince and kissed him, and then recalled him and wrung his hand with a manliness of parental affection that brought tears to many eyes.

To those who were able to see clearly these two episodes the magnificence of the jewelled women, the splendor of the uniformed men and even the historic grandeur of the Coronation Office itself sank almost into secondary interest.

King Edward was greatly unnerved by the condition of the Archbishop of Canterbury and his Majesty sat in constant dread of a contretemps, though outwardly calm, as could be judged from the steadiness with which he held his sceptre rod erect during the ordeal.

This brave show, however, did not deceive the Queen. Throughout the service and especially as the Archbishop of Canterbury became more and more nervous, Her Majesty palpably dreaded that the King would break down. With keen anxiety, she constantly turned toward her husband, watching him intently throughout the ceremony. Her graceful dignity and solicitude for King Edward was one of the most charming features of the proceedings in the Abbey.

ACTED LIKE MAGIC

A French Gentleman's Opinion of Dodd's Kidney Pills and What They did for Him.

ST. URBAIN, QUE., August 11.—(Special).—Narcisse Barrette of this place says:—

"For more than 15 years I suffered with a severe malady of the back and kidneys which caused me horrible pains.

"I tried many doctors but the relief I could get was only temporary and the disease always returned. I suffered almost beyond endurance.

"I had Rheumatism as well as Back Ache, and I would rather die than suffer again the way I did.

"After trying the doctor's treatment and almost everything else without any good result, I began to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. They acted almost like magic. I am now in perfect health and work every day.
