BRITAIN TO SOLVE DIVORCE PROBLEM

LONDON.—That there are from 250,000 to 300,000 persons in Great Britain legally separated yet not divorced is one of the statements in the report of the royal commission which has lately been investigating the divorce problem.

This, moreover, is only a beginning. Other multitudes of men and women who have been married continued not only married but without even legal authority to live apart, though they do not and could not live together. Probably this second classification is larger than the first.

After surveying these conditions and their results Parliament has established a joint committee to promote the cause of marriage and divorce reform. For many years the question has been before the public. Determined opposition by the Church and other agencies prevented accomplishment in a moderate measure; the tide of human misery was dammed up; and now it is likely to be let loose, with a much more radical measure than a decade ago would have sufficed.

The joint committee has undertaken to obtain passage of a law permitting absolute divorce. In most of these cases of hopeless separation. Judicial separation orders are now issued on account of cruelty, desertion, drunkenness and many other offences, but these do not constitute divorce. Commonly the husband is required to pay maintenance fixed by the court, often in cases in which the husband has been grievously wronged. If he doesn't pay he can be and often is locked up. But however greatly both husband and wife may wish it, they cannot be divorced unless there has been adultery on the wife's part or adultery and also cruelty on the husband's.

Almost a decade ago an effort was made to obtain legislation providing that in cases of legal separation the court, after five years, should on the application of either party make decree of absolute divorce. That bill was smothered. The new measure, which is likely to become law before the war's end is much more liberal. It permits the decree to be issued after three years of separation, whether the separation was by consent, by court decree or otherwise.

Even advocates of easier divorce in some cases fear that this measure would make it too easy. But the people who have investigated do not. They describe immoral conditions widely existent because of the present difficulties of getting divorce. Illegitimacy and a fearful number of cases of bigamy are enumerated. Husband and wife legally bound to each other yet legally separated, forces of celibacy, lose all moral standards. The fact that they are commonly poor makes the results worse. It is a question largely concerning the poorer people, for at best it costs more to get a divorce than most people can pay. The story has been often repeated of the synical Judge who said the divorce laws of England were perfectly even handed as between rich and poor; either rich or poor petitioner might have a divorce if he had a case and about £500 for expenses!

The Church has been especially antagonistic to remedial legislation; but the Church influence is not so potent as formerly. The war has brought conditions in which the need of meeting this emergency is more pressing than ever, while at the same time it has weakened the hold of the Church owing to the attitude of most of the higher ecclesiastics on many war issues.

FURS ONE WILL WEAR OR WANT TO

Furs are to be very fashionable this Fall and very expensive. The dealers of New York are busily preparing to meet this happy combination of circumstances; they are drawing upon all the fur-producing countries on earth for the rare and beautiful pelts that wealthy women demand. A glimpse of the storerooms of one of the big importers is truly impressive. You may see, according to Frederick Hasken in the Pittsburg Gazette-Times, for example, a rack perhaps 40 feet long, loaded with silver fox skins and representing an investment of nearly $100,000,000, for each raw skin is worth from $250 to $1,000. There are long tables piled high with the fur of red fox—windrows of soft, fluffy reds and browns. Mink and martens and sable hang in rich glossy festoons from the roof, as do bunches of ermine, snow-white, save for the faint golden tinge in the sides. There are great stacks of Australian racoon, which is to be a popular fur this Fall, and South American guanaco, which will be much worn by little girls.

A Great Fur Year

Down in the cellar the raw furs are stored in bales and stacks. There are great quantities of glossy beaver from Quebec, of lynx and coyote and husky dog from Western Canada of creatures you never heard of from all the continents on earth. America and Russia lead, but there is hardly a country that does not contribute something. Most of the imported furs are very expensive, because of high ocean freight rates and heavy submarine insurance, but the well-dressed woman must have all the varieties at whatever cost. The manufacturers are pretty good at making substitutes. Skunk makes a fair grade of Russian sable. But some furs cannot well be imitated—Persian lamb, for example. This is the greatest year the American fur business has ever known. Right after the war broke out the industry was somewhat disorganized. The fur auctions had always been held in London, and many of our native furs crossed the water and came back. Then, too, there was a large export trade, and a good part of the manufacturing was done in Europe. When shipments of all kinds ceased, the machinery of the fur business was necessarily thrown out of gear.

Competing With H. B. C.

But it soon became apparent that the disaster was not as great as it had appeared. A fur auction in New York was organized and has been held twice a year ever since with increasing success. New York is also a great fur manufacturing centre. Even before the war more furs were manufactured here than in London, Moscow or Paris, and the industry has now been so expanded that it can get along very well without any assistance from Europe. Emboldened by success at least one great New York fur house has made the daring move of establishing a branch in the wilds of Canada to buy furs direct from the trappers. This means nothing else than competition with the great and famous Hudson Bay Company. But the fur dealer who has made the move is more than satisfied with the result. He has built an establishment on Peace River, in the heart of the Canadian fur country, and is bidding for trade by giving the trappers a better "assortment" than do the Hudson Bay posts, by paying cash and by selling merchandise at as small a profit as he possibly can. This year he brought out a nice lot of furs.

Fur Fashions

Fur styles do not change as rapidly as those in other lines, but there is enough variation to keep the designers busy, while different kinds of fur go in and out of style. For example, many years ago there was a great demand for Russian squirrel, from which a wrap made like a Mexican poncho, with a hole for the head, was made. This passed out of fashion 20 years ago and with it Russian squirrel. This year squirrel is coming back, and you can see great quantities of the little gray skins in the dealers' storerooms. The Russian squirrel, unlike many of the American species, has a very fine, thick fur. The favorite fur coat this year will be a loose-fitting one falling to the hips. It is made in Hudson seal, trimmed with marten, mole and kolinsky. Coats falling below the knees are generally made of sealskin also, and are belted at the waist. Long coats are often made of caracul trimmed with Hudson seal.

In Favor of Fox

The woman who can afford it may have a great variety of furs. The shops this year are showing an unusual variety of fur headgear. Close-fitting toques in military shapes are

POSSIBLE UNIONISTS NAMES MENTIONED

The three western names most commonly mentioned these days as likely to enter a Union Government if it is formed, are Premier A. L. Sifton, of Alberta, Hon. J. A. Calder, of Saskatchewan, and T. A. Crerar, of Winnipeg. All of them have been pretty prominent of recent years.

Mr. Sifton is an older brother of Sir Clifford Sifton. He graduated from Victoria University, Cobourg, in 1880 at the age of 21, and at once began the study of law in Winnipeg. He began practice in Brandon where his father conducted an extensive wheat farm. Finally he settled in Calgary.

After the formation of the new province of Alberta he was appointed chief justice of the province, and in 1910, on the resignation of Premier Ruthenford, he was called upon to form a Government. He has been Premier since that time.

Mr. Calder is regarded as one of the ablest men in politics in the western provinces. The son of a Scottish father and mother, he himself was born at Ingersoll, Ont., some fifty years ago. Graduating with honors from Manitoba University he adopted teaching as his profession, and in time became principal of Moose Jaw High School.

His abilities were soon recognized and he was appointed inspector of schools in the North West Territories. When a deputy commissioner of education fell to be appointed he was given the position.

Connection with the N. W. T. Government gave him a taste for politics, and when Saskatchewan was created a province, he entered the field and was elected to the first assembly in 1905. He was given the portfolio of education. In 1912 he became Minister of Railways and Highways.

T. A. Crerar is recognized as the predominating, but there are also elaborate evening hats. Red fox is a favorite material for scarves and capes. These are being made up less artificially than they used to be, and more of them are being worn in natural colors. In fact, fashion shows a tendency in this regard to revert to what it probably was in cave-dwelling days, for some of the neck pieces are little more than a dressed skin thrown about the shoulders. That furs will ever go out of fashion is not to be feared. They have a fascination for the feminine mind possessed by no other material. Dealers say that if the war continues a few years more New York will be firmly entrenched as the fur market of the world.
