JAMES PATON,

After Ten Years

NEW WORK

Chapter 50

Patty went around to Mrs. Munn's house, although she felt the jealous disapproval of her mother follow her the entire distance. She felt at home the moment she crossed into the other house. She loved the low, wide hallway, and the tiny oval room [illegible] where Mills, the butler, helped her off with her coat.

"It's like old times to see you again, Miss Parke," he told her.

"It's like old times to be back, Mills," she answered. Mrs. Munn had the rare ability of making friends of her servants. She was the despair and envy of all the women who knew her and who changed maids, as one said, every new moon. Mills had been with her 30 years.

Mrs. Munn had made one room of her first floor, which, after the manner of New York houses, was raised high above the street. At the far end Patty found her on a sofa before a fireplace, with a lamp on the sofa table at her elbow, and some magazines and novels scattered about within reach.

"It isn't quite cold enough for a fire yet," she said, after she had kissed Patty and drawn her down to a comfortable seat on the couch. "I never feel a room lives unless the windows open into the outdoors or else a fire is going."

"How dead most rooms are then!" Patty answered. Her eyes travelled around, looking with pleasure at the simplicity and beauty and homeness of the place.

"Yes, like their owners. My dear, I can't tell you how glad I am to have you near me, for I've been getting dead too. Yes, don't look protesting. I have. I've let myself sit here and think, oh not necessarily gloomy thoughts, for Mary's life was so beautiful that her death must be beautiful too."

Patty's hand went out, and they sat holding to each other for an instant. Then:

"I've let myself get out of touch with young people, I think that must be it."

"But all your friends have daughters."

"Dear me, yes, and granddaughters being introduced into society and driving high powered cars all over the country! You see, while Mary lived, I had her companionship and her friends were always around the house. Naturally they've dropped off. I see them when I see their mothers, my dear. I'm too old for the younger generation and too young for the older. These girls' mothers tell me I'm a Radical, that's because I made a speech at a labor meeting last week."

Patty laughed.

"Is that to be my work, going to labor meetings?"

"No, that brings up to the point, doesn't it? Of course you know all about the work of the Civic Society. Well, we've a special committee to work in this part of the city. We are trying to put in reform of one sort and another. I've hired a set of offices in what was once a negligee shop, my dear, when you see their interior decorations! Cubism and Futurism carried to the ultimate degree. But that's the point. Your work will be—"

She went on outlining the new duties, which seemed simple enough. Someone with intelligence and a nice personality had to be in the office from 10 until 5:30 to answer the phone, keep the records and write letters.

"You won't really need shorthand, and with practice you'll be able to typewrite fast enough, there'll be little of that anyway. You must help us with publicity, and do the hundred odd jobs that come up in any such organization. My dear, the chief thing is to have tact. You'll overhear a lot, women you know."

"To have eyes and see not, ears and hear not," Patty quoted.

"Exactly. You'll start tomorrow." She gave her the address, and arranged to be there to show her what was expected.

"Of course, you can't do it and pay for that apartment, which is $40, and buy clothes and food for three," she said. "But Mullicent has money, hasn't she, and I suppose she'll find something to do?"

"Oh, yes," Patty answered.

But that was a new problem.

She knew that she could not find a place much cheaper that the little apartment they had, without going either in a neighborhood so shabby they would be unhappy, or so far uptown that she would have to join the daily mob that fought their way to the trains in an overcrowded subway.

Of course, they had Millie's money, but then they paid for the trip, shipping the furniture, and other expenses at home, a lot had been used up.

But she wasn't going to worry about it yet. Of course they would manage and Humphrey would send for Millie as soon as he was able. He hadn't given them his address so they could not write, but the post office at home would send on any letters.

She walked home along the quiet street, tired, a little worried, but still with that feeling of exultation.

Tomorrow—New Events

Charlottetown Hospital Annual Report

Report of the Charlottetown Hospital for the Year 1921.

Thanks to Patrons and all Others Concerned.

Once more the pleasant duty devolves upon the Sisters of the Charlottetown Hospital of offering to the public a summary of the work accomplished during the past year. In submitting the same, the Sisters wish to express their most sincere thanks to their benefactors and friends, and to the ladies of St. Charles' Auxiliary Society for their unflagging interest in working for the welfare of the Hospital.

May the Giver of all Blessings reward a thousandfold all who have assisted us in any way, either by patronage, moral support or otherwise. In thanking the public in general, the Sisters trust that the mutual kindly feelings which have characterized the past will still be a distinctive feature of the future.

Hospital Statistics for 1921

Patients admitted	902
Cured	735
Improved	63
Not treated	20
Deaths	17
Births	65
Non-paying	258
Surgical cases	66
Medical cases	234

The annual meeting of St. Charles Auxiliary Society of the Charlottetown Hospital was held on Jan 2nd. The Chaplain, Rev. R. R. St. John presided and His Lordship Bishop O'Leary was present at the meeting. The full report of the work of the Society for the year 1921 was presented by the President and the result was most gratifying to the large number of members present.

The gross receipts of the year amounted to $2808.51, total disbursements $485.89, leaving to the credit of the Auxiliary $2322.62. Of this amount $1000.00 was paid towards the liquidation of the debt on the property adjacent to the City Hospital acquired by the Auxiliary, and $90.00 for the purchase of a Statue of St. Charles of Borromeo, the Patron Saint of the Society, placed in St. Dunstan's Cathedral. As it had been a year when exceptional heavy monetary outlay was made necessary by the complete renovation of the Hospital and a laboratory had been installed, the Auxiliary voted the entire balance of $1232.62 to Rev. Mother Superior to help defray the expense of same.

His Lordship Bishop O'Leary addressed the meeting and congratulated the members on the splendid result of their work during the past year; thanking them in the name of the Diocese for the property purchased by them and presented to the Ecclesiastical Authorities for Hospital-extension purposes and the possession of which enabled the immediate work of remodelling and re-construction to begin after the disastrous fire which had destroyed our splendid Hospital and laid another burden on the Diocese.

That the work of St. Charles Auxiliary will in the year 1922 proceed with renewed vigor and that the result thereof will greatly exceed all past endeavours as the need is so much the greater is the earnest desire of all its members and in thanking a kind and generous public for all favors shown in the past we humbly ask a generous share of your patronage for our future efforts.

The annual election of officers for the ensuing year was dispensed with upon the returning to office by acclamation of the entire retiring Board. The motion was put by Rev. R. R. St. John, who spoke in praise of the work accomplished by the officers and members working so harmoniously in conjunction for the greater welfare of the Society. The motion was supported by Mrs. (Dr.) McGuigan, Rev. M. Superior and others in well chosen remarks urging "co-operation" to continue to be the watchword and the working plan of the Society. A vacancy on the Executive Committee, caused by the removal of Mrs. Robert Patterson from the Province was filled by the unanimous election of Mrs. D. McDonald.

The officers for the ensuing year are:

Chaplain, Rev. R. R. St. John.
Hon. Pres., Mrs. Thos. White.
President, Mrs. W. J. McIntyre.
Vice-Pres., Mrs. John McAleer.
Sec., Margaret Ready.
Treas., Rev. M. St. Gertrude, Superior.
Exec. Com., Mrs. P. McCarron, Mrs. F. McGuigan, Mrs. D. McDonald.

Ladies! Look Young Darken Gray Hair

Use the Old-time Sage Tea and Sulphur and Nobody will Know

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantage of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes and mars the face. When it fades, turns gray, and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully; besides no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two its natural color is restored, and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

Raw Furs Wanted

GRIM MYSTERY STIRS MONTREAL

MONTREAL, Jan. 18—Believed to have been killed by drugged liquor, Harold A. Baylis, 31, a civil engineer employed by the Phoenix Bridge Co., and of an unidentified woman described as of about the same age, were found in apartment number one, of the Chestnut Apartments, 23 Lincoln avenue, in the west end of this city early this morning. Death is believed to have occurred during the night of Saturday or Sunday.

Baylis is a son of Samuel H. Baylis, a prominent citizen of Montreal. The description of the woman is that of fair, good-looking woman of about thirty-two with light brown hair which is bobbed. Her height is about five feet six inches and her clothes included a fur coat trimmed with Alaska seal. She was wearing a quantity of jewels including a wedding ring.

HON VICTOR GIBBSON FOUND DEAD IN ENGLISH HOTEL

LONDON, Jan. 18—The body of an Irishman, found dead in a hotel at Horsham in Sussex on Saturday was identified today as that of the Honorable Victor Gibson, son of the late Lord Ashbourne, and brother of the present Baron Ashbourne.

Considerable mystery surrounded the case over the week-end. Gibson on arriving at the hotel Saturday asked to be allowed to remain in the smoking room, where he was later found dead. He had previously stated at the hotel that he was an Irishman and a rebel known to the Irish press by half a dozen names, and that he had lived with his father at the Vice Regal Lodge in Dublin 14 years ago. Some broken glass was discovered in the fire place and a small quantity of liquid had been spilled on the hearthstone. An inquest, however, showed that Gibson died from natural causes—syncope following pneumonia.

STEFANSSON IN FAVOR OF PROBE

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 18—Vilhjalmud Stefansson, the Arctic explorer, today declared in a statement here that he would gladly welcome investigation of the charges made by Prof. J. J. McNeill, of McGill University, Montreal, and Dr. R. M. Anderson, of Ottawa, that the explorer subordinated other interests to his own personal advantage.

BIG ONTARIO FIRM LOSES FIGHT WITH PROVINCIAL GOV'T

TORONTO, Jan. 17—Judgment was given today by Mr. Justice Logie against the Shevlin Clarke Company, of Port Arthur for $1169,991, in favor of the Attorney-General of Ontario. It is also ordered that the company must pay $17.60 per thousand feet on all timber cut and not yet "returned" on the Quetico Park Reserve, "berths 45 and 49."

The judgment declares that the agreement between the Ontario Department of Crown Lands was invalid, and that it was, in fact, nothing but a license to go on ungranted lands.

The judgment orders that the costs of the case, which was tried at Toronto and Fort Francis, shall be paid by the defendants, together with the costs of interlocutory motions and other incidentals of the trial.

Almost any man has a lot of experience on hand that he would gladly dispose of at 90 per cent below cost.
