SEMIDRESSY COSTUMES.
 Velveteen Suits That Are Not Strictly Tailor Made.
 A suit that is not strictly a tailor made and can be worn on semidressy occasions is a necessity in the smartly dressed woman's wardrobe.
 One such costume seen recently was of deep blue velveteen with a loose blouse jacket having an embroidered collar of ecru linen ornamented in shades of blue and green. The skirt was laid in tucked and flared from a trifle below the hips down. The bottom was simply a wide hem headed by three tucks.

 Another costume was of black velveteen ornamented with black and white silk braid and having a little veil of white moire cut in points and dotted with tiny pearl buttons.
 Waists of all over coarse lace are smart with such costumes, and the hat is supposed to match the suit.
 Deep red velveteen is very pretty made up in this way with a hat of rough red straw.
 There is one blouse we all love and shall continue to love during the hot weather, and that is the net lace or crochet blouse, the only lining permissible in such a garment being mousseline de sole or chiffon. When this blouse is made of very good lace, severe simplicity is best, and the woman who is not too thin will do well to have it made to fasten plainly with a little fullness pouching at the waist in front and the yoke piece kept as transparent as possible. Thin people should reverse this order of things and fasten the blouse in front with an enormous jabot of lace and with frills of the same over the hands. In all cases the sleeves are fairly voluminous from the elbow, and here may be introduced an under-sleeve of chiffon or net.
 The picture shows a gown of cream velveteen trimmed with fringe.

NOVELTIES IN HATS.
 Smart Picture Hats—Toques Trimmed with Alpacas.
 The smartest picture hat of the season is of cream or white lace with a broad border of black velvet. The brim is much curved and slightly raised on the left side, where it is filled in with flowers or a velvet bow fastened in with a paste buckle. Both the inner and the outer brims are of lace with an inch wide velvet border, and the low, flat crown of lace has a velvet edge. Tulle swathed and in big choux trim these hats, with just one feather sweeping around the side, or one or two tips peeping over the raised brim. A toque which is modish and fascinating has a crown of plaited chiffon and chemise in all black or black and white, and the deep brim of the tressador model is encircled with tucked chiffon. Over this comes a fringe of looseng shaped sequins, which hang loose and flash and glitter with every movement. On the left side is a flat rosette of the stiffly plaited cockade type, with a handsome stud of paste and steel and a big brush spray.

 The picture shows a smart sailor shape of yellow straw trimmed with pink roses.

 Getting at the Facts.
 "You can always tell a girl who has enjoyed the benefits of college training," said the strong-minded woman. "That's where you go home," rejoined the savage bachelor. "A girl who has enjoyed the 'at-home' benefits thinks she knows it all, and you can tell her a thing."—Chicago News.

MARCONI'S ILLNESS
 A despatch from Glace Bay Saturday night stated that William Marconi had suffered a mental collapse. Mr. Vyvyan, who for some time has been his manager at the Table Head, wireless station, was seen about the story, at Glace Bay, and he said that it was not true. Marconi had been ill with a cold, but was no improving, and he is expected to arrive in Charlottetown from England in August.

Thirty Thousand Physicians Gladly Prescribe LACTATED FOOD.
 The fact is action expressed by physicians that have made use of Lactated Food in the practice, proves that it stands far ahead of all other known prepared foods for the use of infants and children. A prominent physician writes thus:—
 "I have prescribed Lactated Food extensively during the hot summer months in treating children, fat and thin, and in every case it proved itself of great service, it being a really means of overcoming vomiting and indigestion. It is a valuable food."
 Another physician of high standing and great reputation says:—
 "I have had several cases of summer complaint in children on which other foods were tried with indifferent success. The use of Lactated Food in these cases in a short time has, apparently, discharged the doctor, but his reputation is strengthened thereby."
