"These Women" BY MALCOLM DUART

CHAPTER XXIII

"I'd never mistake that penmanship," commented Morton. Audrey looked at him with a gasp of interest. There was a note in his voice that she never had heard before. "You hate him!" she exclaimed. Morton turned the letter over and inspected the signature. "P. H. Smith," he read aloud, without answering her. The handwriting was singularly clear and beautiful—the writing that is peculiar to architects, and engineers, and accountants, and other who make precision their life's work. Morton turned to the beginning and read, half aloud: "At Sea, the 21st. 'I expect to mail this at the first post we touch. There is something that I know of deep interest to you. The knowledge is worth money to you—and to me. I am willing to sell my knowledge. You have access to your guardian's funds. He is wealthy. Upon receipt of five thousand dollars from you, in the form of any negotiable paper, I will give you information that I am quite sure you never have had. What do you know of yourself, and of your guardian? Do you know who your mother was? Do you know who I am? Maybe you will not care about this last item—until you have received word from me. In return for your five thousand. Then you will be much interested. Knowing something of women, I am quite sure you will show this letter to Morton. Knowing something of him, I am sure he will give you an explanation. Again drawing upon my knowledge of women, I am fairly assured that sooner or later you will transmit to me the sum I have mentioned. Curiosity in this case is legitimate. From time to time I shall inquire at the office of the International Express Co., in Buenos Aires, for a letter (with enclosure) from you, addressed to the undersigned.' Audrey took the letter from Morton's hand and looked at it again. 'Isn't he horrible?' she cried. 'Does he really know all those things?'

Tossing the envelope on the table Morton paced rapidly up and down the room for a few moments. 'Audrey,' he said, abruptly, 'you are a rich woman I have made over to you half of all I have. You may send him the money he asks, if you wish.' Audrey leaned back against the desk. 'You hate him!' she said again. 'I have every reason to hate him.' Morton said solemnly. 'There was a time when I would gladly have strangled him to death, if it had not been for you—for the effect it would have upon you.' 'The girl's eyes had something of worship in them. 'You always have been thinking of me, haven't you?' 'Always!' he answered. He moved nearer her. 'Do you wish to send him the money? He can tell you what he says he can tell.' 'I'll never do it.' Her voice rang with sincerity. 'I would be cheating you if I did it.' The man sat down, and with his elbows upon the desk, rested his chin in his hands. After a long silence he spoke again. 'Dearest,' he said, 'there are terrible things that can come into the lives of innocent people. Sometimes they are made to suffer for things that are not their fault, at all things they have nothing to do with, except to pay the penalty. I have been trying to shield you.' She moved nearer to him. Leaning over, she almost whispered: 'Daddy, is that man my real father?' He was startled. With a quick gesture he seized her arm and pressed it with his fingers until she winced. 'Not!' he shouted. 'Not! Praise God, you didn't enter the world under THAT handicap!' He relaxed his grasp, and with a little sigh she passed her hand over his cheek. 'I'm so glad!' she said, softly. 'Ever since I first saw him I've wondered that—a little. And I hated him so—I hated his eyes and the way he looked at me and at you.' Looking into the distance, and tapping on the table with his fingers, Morton spoke, motionlessly as of a subject which he dreaded. 'Smith is not his name, of course,' he said. 'It is a good enough name for his present purposes. And he is a bad man. A very evil man who has caused much needless agony to people who never harmed him.' He thought a moment before he went on. 'There is a kink in the minds of men, sometimes, that makes them a danger to everyone with whom they come in contact. He is like that.' Swinging around in his chair, he looked at Audrey, his lips twitching, put her arm around his head and drew it to her bosom, crooning over him. He went on speaking, in the same dead, colorless tone. 'He did a great wrong to you, sweetheart. You were too young to know about it—you were a little baby. I hope you never WILL know about it. I've tried to keep it from you. I always shall try.' 'There, there!' She smoothed his cheek. 'Don't worry about him any more.' Morton shook his head. 'I am not worrying about him. Whenever I desire I can put him where he can harm no one else. But Audrey—if I do that I'll hurt you.'

FARM FOR SALE AT ROSE VALLEY

I offer for sale my farm of 100 acres, 80 cleared balance hard and soft wood. Will sell with or without standing crop, situated 2 miles from Bradalbane Station, near to Church, School and Mills. If not sold will be offered at auction with crop, stock and implements. For date see posters later. WALTER MacKENZIE, Rose Valley, R. R. 4. 516-7-9-fmw6l.

She held him closer to her. 'I guess he knows that,' she said, 'with a wise little nod. 'That's why he didn't care if you saw his letter.' 'I suppose so,' he assented. 'Evidently he feels that if he has five thousand dollars he can be independent of me and the job I gave him in the Argentine. The money would be gone, though, before long.' He gave a short laugh. 'He never was skillful with money. They kept him for two long terms in the penitentiary because of his—well, carelessness. That was why we didn't get to see him at our house for eighteen years or thereabouts.' 'The girl shivered. 'A jail-bird!' 'Worse than that,' he supplemented. 'A disease—a walking small-pox—a plague!'

It was an auspicious time for Parrish to begin his new role as Audrey's assistant, guardian. After her conversation with Morton the girl slipped away to the washroom, and when she returned, her rouge was gone from her lips and her lashes were innocent of the mascara they had worn when she came. Parrish entered Morton's office by one door as Audrey came in at the other. Morton held up an admonitory hand. 'Don't hit him again, Audrey,' he warned, his eyes crinkled in a quiet smile. The girl drew herself up stiffly and then relaxed as she caught her guardian's glance. 'If it were—if it were any other day, I WOULD slap him again,' she said, turning her shoulder conspicuously toward Parrish. 'Coast is clear, Parrish,' commented Morton. 'Make your peace with the young lady.' 'Parrish made a defensive gesture. 'I only did what I thought was right, and she attacked me! Plainly his grievance had not wholly died away. 'You deserved slapping,' she said. 'How can you say anything against my daddy, when he's treated you so well?' 'Oh, tut, tut, tut!' Morton got up, and placing his hand on Parrish's shoulder took the girl by the hand. 'I don't care two hoots in— in the hereafter what anybody says about me! Parrish is a good young man and he thinks I'm a bad old one. 'That doesn't worry me. He means well when he tells you to beware of me. We ought to encourage people who mean well. They are needed in the world. 'Although —' he turned to Parrish—'some well-meaning people make idiots of themselves. Eh, Parrish?' The young man hung his head. 'I don't admit I'm an idiot.' 'You are, though,' interposed Audrey, briskly. Morton moved his hand to her shoulder, and still holding to Parrish, gave them both a brief shake. 'Hush!' he commanded. 'Don't act like two children putting out their tongues at one another. 'Parrish, you are instructed to take Miss Morton wherever she wants to go, each afternoon and evening. Audrey, he'll be along to see that you're not harmed in any way. Now behave yourselves.' Parrish looked covertly at Audrey. 'Well, come on!' he said, turning to the door. 'Do I have to go with him?' she asked Morton. 'I'd rather you had somebody to watch out after you,' he said, gently. 'This new career of yours isn't any too safe, you know.' She kissed him, and with a pout, followed Parrish out the door. The letter from Smith still lay on the table. Morton picked it up and read it again, carefully. Then, turning to his desk, he unlocked an inner drawer and took from it a packet of papers. It was the one he had unfolded before the Toronto detective when Smith first appeared at Morton's home. Drawing from the package two yellowed sheets, he laid them side by side with the letter Audrey had received. Looking back and forth, he compared the handwriting. 'It hasn't varied a half's breadth,' he commented to himself, as he folded the documents and put them away. The new letter from Smith was carefully folded with them. This done, he picked up the telephone directory and leafed over it, calling a theatrical agency. 'This is Harry Morton speaking,' he said to the girl who answered. 'Let me talk to Abe.' He waited until a man's voice gave a gruff, 'Hello.' 'This is Harry Morton,' he said. The voice at the other end promptly became cordial. 'Are you putting on any new revues this spring for the jazz restaurants?' 'I thought you would. . . . Well, I want you to do me a favor, I'll drop in and see you in half an hour.' (To be continued)
