GABBY GERTIE

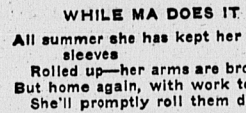

"The man who dances with Jo also dances with Grace."

"Se you're back from your rest are you?" "Not exactly. I'm back for my rest."

"Stop, this instant, Josiah! Don't you see there are a hundred people watching you kias me up here?" "What do I care, Maria? Ain't this here the observation tower?"

"I proposed to her by letter and she turned me down."

"Well?" "I wonder if it would be any use to try a follow-up system."

The Wife-Ship Woman

By Hugh Pendexter. AUTHOR OF 'KINGS OF THE MISSOURI', 'BY GORDEL', 'A VIRGINIA SCOUTER'. COPYRIGHT BY HUGH PENDEXTER, 1923-1925.

"I have not thanked you, monsieur," she whispered. "Nor shall you. I did nothing. But you are ill, mademoiselle." "A hunter bargaining for a wife!" shrilly screamed a wanton. "They swim out to meet us. Don't waste time on that sniveling thing, my big man." The woman in black was shrinking from her mates, and well might she, as with foul abuse they upbraided her for trying to "steal the first proper man." There was death in her face as the torrent of filth was loosed, and I would have retreated to save her something of embarrassment had not the Mattors now come up to be instantly pounced upon by the harpies. "Will you walk to where the boats are, so you may go to the main?" I asked.

"God!" she shivered, staring frantically about. "To the main? To the wilderness! To the savages! Anything to escape that!" And her gaze followed the group of forlorn creatures now pawing and mauling the two Mattors. "My name is Brampton. I'm English. Something of an outlaw from Virginia. You came to help make Louisiana great?" "I am Claire Dahlsgaard. I've come to die," she simply replied. "You fear that they misrepresented conditions to you?" She gave me a quick sidelong glance as sharp and penetrating as the point of a needle, and with more control of her voice informed me: "I was picked up in a raid."

"My first thought was that she must be the daughter of some poor farmer. For the company's agents in rounding up the friendless to ship overseas had no scruples in taking the daughters of the poor, be they ever so virtuous. But a glance at the slim white hands, so aristocratic and so unused to labor, sent a chill to my heart. She was poor but no daughter of poor but honest people.

She had been picked up in a raid. That was easily understood. But a young woman with slim soft hands, who had not worked. And yet there was infinite appeal in the small face and silent grief. Her utter helplessness increased the inevitable suspicion. Anyway, it was not for me to condemn her. I broke the silence by offering: "I will walk with you to the shore and see you start in one of the first boats."

Her head jerked up as I spoke, because of some aloofness in my tone, I fear. I had not meant to be cruel for she was heartsick and body-sick, a very young woman as helpless as a child and marooned in a land which must be to her a perpetual revelation of horrors. "It will be good to go in the boat," she managed to say. "But perhaps not the first boat—it depends." "It will largely depend on his excellency's orders," I corrected. "But—they the women—said there would be much waiting. Too few boats—I can tell better when I see them loading."

IN MEMORIAM

MISS MYRTLE WILLIAMS

On Friday evening Aug. 15th, 1930, Ellerslie and the neighbouring districts were grief stricken by the sad and sudden news of the tragic death of Miss Myrtle Williams, R. N. which was caused by a falling heart while bathing at Fortune Cove, Cascumpec. It appears that Miss Williams accompanied by the other "pioniers" went bathing and was seen in water not more than two feet in depth. After taking a few strokes shoreward she was noticed to drop her head as if to perform a stunt. Mrs. Robert England, sister, alarmed the rest of the party, thereupon the unfortunate one was carried ashore and died before medical aid could be rendered.

With such sad news came the realization that a most efficient nurse, a most kindly friend, beloved and highly esteemed by all, and the favorite sister and daughter had passed on to be with her Master whom she loved and served so well. Miss Williams, who was 46 years of age trained in the P. E. Island Hospital at Charlottetown and nursed for many years in the U. S. A. and in Canada. She was one who spent her all for the patients she served and endeared herself to all with whom she came in contact. Her many sleepless nights and hard days of toil and stress doubtlessly were a great saving factor in the lives of all for whom she cared, but certainly they had a weakening effect upon her own strength, and when the end came it seemed so hard that those for whom she had done so much could do nothing to save her.

Besides a host of dear friends and acquaintances she leaves to mourn a loving mother, Mrs. Christy Williams, wife of the late Mr. Henry Williams and seven sisters: Lulu (Mrs. Russel Hayes) Summerville, Mass.; Alberta (Mrs. George Walsh), Ellerslie; Priscilla (Mrs. C. S. Millar) Bideford; Pearl (Mrs. L. B. MacGovern), Ellerslie; Edith (Mrs. John Hutchison), Summerville, Mass.; and Elsie (Mrs. Clifford Hayes), Tyne Valley; and three brothers: Stanley of Bideford, Roy of Ellerslie and Frank of Wollaston, Mass. The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon Aug. 19th from her old home to St. John's Anglican Church. The church which she loved so much and served so faithfully was not able to hold half of those gathered to pay their last respects. The service was conducted by the Rector, Rev. H. R. Coleman and assisted by Rev. Henry Cook, during which Tennyson's hymn "Crossing the Bar" was most feelingly sung by Mrs. H. R. Coleman.

After the service in the Church the mortal remains were carried to the adjoining cemetery and reverently lowered to their last resting place, not by any mechanical device but by human hands in recognition of the service the deceased had rendered to mankind during her lifetime. The pall-bearers were: Messrs. George Walsh, Clifford Hayes, Lyman B. MacGovern, C. Shreve Millar, Robt. England and Willard Phillips. The sympathy of all is extended to her sorrowing mother and family; and a sense of loss is sustained by all who knew her. We know, however that her love will chant itself its own beatitudes after its own life-working. A child's kiss, set on her loving lips has made her glad; a poor man served by her has made her rich; a rich man helped by her has made her strong. She served herself by every sense of service which she has rendered. Such a crown we set upon her head. And now, a fair maiden, in her Father's Mansion clothed with celestial grace and beautiful with all the souls expansion, do we behold her face.

There were many beautiful floral tributes from the following: Brothers and Sisters, Anglican Ladies Aid, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Hazen Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Burleigh, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Millar, Mr. and Mrs. Russel McArthur.

FRANK PIGOT. The death of the late Frank Pigot, of Savage Harbour took place Saturday, August 2nd at the Bosworth Hospital, Brookline, Mass. Mr. Pigot had gone to this Hospital only a few days previous to his death. Every hope was held out for a splendid recovery, and the news of his sudden passing was a great shock to his relatives and friends.

The remains, accompanied by his wife, daughter Rose, and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Stems arrived in Charlottetown Monday night. The funeral which was one of the largest ever seen in Savage Harbour was held Wednesday, August 6th from his late residence. The deceased was a man of outstanding character. The influence of his life was always on the side of right. He was loved and respected by all who knew him. He was a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church at Mt. Stewart until union when he became a member of the United Church. For a number of years he was Supt. of the Sunday School. Those who knew him will long cherish his memory. The following sent flowers: Pillow—Wife and family.
