ABSENT MINDED.

An absent minded man called on the family doctor. After discussing the topics of the day, he prepared to depart. The doctor showed him to the door and after wishing him "Good morning," remarked, "They're all in good health at home, I suppose?" "Great Scott!" exclaimed the absent minded man, "it's just struck me why I came. My mother in law is in a fit."

CHESS TOURNAMENT

The tournament is finished. Tantonian Horse made a magnificent rally and downed the Worthy President, or rather President Worthy. R. E. Mutch succumbed to Dr. Ross's anaesthetics, but later in the evening rallied, but too late to change his position on the final score. Dr. Lundie's game with Woodman was watched intently, especially towards the finish. The doctor won out, giving him championship honours for 1915 and possession of the enchanted cup or trophy.

The final score stands as follows:—

Wins	Losses
Lundie, 8	4
Tanton, 7	5
Woodman, 6	6
Mutch, 5 1/2	6 1/2
McRae, 5 1/2	6 1/2
Louison, 5	7
Worthy, 5	7

Dr. Lundie was congratulated, not only by the former "has-been" champions, Tanton and Louison, but by the entire club membership. The congratulation, he said, seemed to be sincere as well as hearty.

It was decided to divide the club into two teams, for a one game team competition to take place next Wednesday evening at Dalton Rooms. The line up will be as follows:—

Capt. Ross vs. Capt. Lundie
Tanton vs. Woodman
Worthy vs. Louison
Mutch vs. May
Gardner vs. McRae
Love vs. Doull

This event should prove interesting, as the teams are well matched.

In the second contingent series, McRae continues to lead in their series of games, and it is not likely that any of the lesser lights can catch up to his score. Although the series is not completed, McRae will likely be proclaimed the winner.

The poetry contest will close Saturday night. All who would like to compete had better get busy now. The prize is a silver medal.

GAVE PORTER SHOE TO SHINE AN LEG WITH IT.

SPOKANE, Wash., March 26.—C. E. Cranke, of Colville, for years has had a well established reputation as a practical joker, but his latest exploit in this line, which he is relating to his acquaintances with great gusto, created such commotion in a Pullman sleeper on the O. W. R. & N. train near Pendleton recently that the crew had to take a hand to quell the disorder.

Awakened during the night by some one rummaging around under his berth, Mr. Cranke discovered the colored porter down on his knees hooking into the recesses under the seats with a cane. The Pullman conductor about this time thrust his head out of the curtains of his section and remonstrated with the porter for making so much noise.

The porter explained that he could find but one of Mr. Cranke's shoes to shine and was endeavoring to locate the other, which happened to be still on the foot of Mr. Cranke's artificial leg, which he had carefully deposited in the net in the berth. Reaching into the net he got the leg and passed it foot first through the curtains, just in front of the colored man's face. The latter took hold of it, but when he drew it out into the light and saw there was a leg attached, he dropped it and ran through the train screaming at the top of his voice.

"I never heard such a commotion in my life, and the passengers came tumbling out of their berths pell mell, imagining there was a hold-up," said Mr. Cranke. It required the combined efforts of the entire train crew to quiet them and get them back to bed, and it was almost impossible to induce the porter to return to the car.

WHEN BAYONETS WERE UNHANDY.

NORTHERN FRANCE, March 22.—The battle at Neuve Chappelle will live in Canadian history with the victories of 1812, Paardeberg, and all other glorious struggles. The Canadian division has established itself as dependable. On the morning before the great battle which pushed the German line far back past the war-wrecked village of Neuve Chappelle, the men crouched in trenches waiting. Sentries gazed through loop-holes across the shell-ploughed level field, through barbed wire entanglements, to where the German trenches showed shadows through the light morning mist, three hundred and fifty yards away. The occasional sharp crack of the sniper's rifle punctuated the stillness. The artillery had not yet begun to work. Later the heavy guns began the familiar matins, booming a stentorian chorus far behind. Louder and more persistent this morning the merciless hail of fire poured about the sandbag parapet far across the fields.

The return from the Germans was desultory but constant, and the plump of bullets into the Canadian trenches showed that the enemy was alert as the hours dragged by. To the men it was monotonous. There was nothing to do but squat in the mud and wait their turn on guard, or for the dark night, when the men picked up back for rations or crawl forward to listening posts. They ached to leave the narrow trenches, the waiting game is great, but tiresome.

Then the word came. The long hours of paralysed thoughts and danger was over, and the men were only anxious once more to step out of the trenches. In a moment, dragging themselves along on their stomachs, starting to crawl, they were ordered to make a short rush, and down again behind cover when the officers saw the fire growing too hot. No more charging in straight lines across the open. A twenty yards rush and then flop to save the men. How long it took to get up the command is no one knows. Some say five minutes, others say hours.

It was slow going through the heavy mud, and once in a while men dropped, but not many. The casualties were comparatively light this day. They were withholding their names at present and the entire story is suffering at the hands of the censor.

Back the Canadians crawled, and the bullets bit into the earth all about every yard of the way, but everyone was in danger. An hour later the order again came and the Canadians went forward section by section, the reserves covering the advance by insistent volleys. As the men neared the trenches they saw grey coated forms spring up. They were along the line by this time, and the Germans were coming in behind the rushing, when line smashed line, and there was a riot of men with steel and lead.

Not only bayonets, but rifles, water bottles, flats and feet all played a part. The men shouted, shrieked and groaned, while the ponderous undertone of the artillery continued.

A youngster from London, Ontario, rushed about jabbering and yelling, "I got one." It was the buck fever of the northern woods in another form. The Canadians pressed on. The grey clad bodies lay behind the advancing lines. Suddenly the order came to retire. Only a few Germans had left the trenches, wire entanglements were just ahead, machine guns were trained and thousands of Germans were awaiting the coming of the khaki clad lads. Back once more the Canadians crawled.

Details of the fighting the following day, when the Canadians, it is officially stated, took the trenches and forced the Germans back a hundred yards, have not yet come down. That the grey clad bodies lay behind the advancing lines. Suddenly the order came to retire. Only a few Germans had left the trenches, wire entanglements were just ahead, machine guns were trained and thousands of Germans were awaiting the coming of the khaki clad lads. Back once more the Canadians crawled.

ITALY'S POSITION

(Special to The Guardian.)

ROME, March 28.—Contrary to statements which have appeared in French and English press Austria Hungary never opened any direct negotiations with Italy concerning possible territorial cessions. From the highest sources here it is affirmed that everything done in this line was due to the initiative of Germany. It is said was animated by a desire to eliminate causes of antagonism which always had existed between Austria and Italy. But even the work of the former Imperial Chancellor of Germany in this direction was most cautious, so that decided statements which have appeared in one sense or other were most premature.

This prominent Italian point, is

"THE MASTER KEY" A GRAND SUCCESS

The announcement that the new serial, "The Master Key," which has been awaited for weeks would be presented was the means of packing the Prince Edward Theatre last night and the entertainment was more than commensurate with the overflowing houses. The moving picture authorities say "The Master Key" is the greatest serial yet produced and its first instalment yesterday captivated the hearts of all. When the author of the story, John Flemming Wilson, turned it in to the Universal Film Co. he said he was giving them a story which he frankly thought they could not produce a film. However when he saw the first scene yesterday and captivated with its magnificence, Author Wilson said that the motion picture gave his weird theme more realism than his written story. In the first instalment, as shown yesterday at the Prince Edward, the patrons were treated for the first time to a human interest appeal, besides many startling examples of spectacularism in the way of settings and photographic effects, some never before duplicated upon the screen. One case in point is where a crowd of convicts escape to yet produce with Tom Gallan, accused of murder among them. All the scenes here, and those following which show Gallan escaping, were photographed at night in the forest. The first two reels are absorbing in their interest and the second instalment will no doubt be witnessed by equally as large a crowd as the first. Miss Ella Hall, only 17 years of age, is playing the difficult role of the heroine and this beautiful actress with her simplicity and charm of manner is bound to endeavor herself in the movie fans. Mr. Robert Leonard who is well known as a star to local theatre-goers, plays the part of the hero and also directs the play.

By request the colossal war production "Lay Down Your Arms," in four parts, was on again and it again met with the great favor it deserved. Many proclaimed this the best war picture ever seen here.

A joker comedy, "Mike and Jake at the Beach," provided real good and hearty "laughs."

Mr. Huskins sang beautifully yesterday in rendition of "Sing me to Sleep."

There will be a complete change of programme to-day with the exception of "The Master Key," the first instalment of which will be shown at the three shows for the last time.

BATTALION DRILL 'OF ISLAND RECRUITS

Through battalion drill together yesterday for about three-quarters of an hour. A number of interested spectators, including several ladies, witnessed the manoeuvres.

In conversation with the reporter Captain Campbell referred to the matter of the supply of Canadian boots to the soldiers. "The faults that have been so promiscuously found with the boots supplied the men," he said, "are in my opinion, not more than a gross exaggeration and a misrepresentation to serve political ends. I am now wearing a pair of the very boots complained of, and they are among the best I have ever had. They have seen hard service for upwards of six months now and they hold as strong and as good as they were the day I got them;—well, you can see for yourself" (And a stronger pair of boots could not be got anywhere) "I picked them up at random," continued the Captain, "out of a pile of the same kind, and I did not select them for strength or anything of the kind, and you can see how they have served. Of course, you can't expect boots or anything else, for that matter, to be ill-used and remain perfect if you don't give them some reasonable care and attention. I shall mine, and every other boot of the same lot I know of that was treated as I did mine has retained its strength and usefulness. The best boot ever made could not stand the conditions of Salisbury, when I was there, without being properly looked-after; and you could not expect it."

CONSTRUCT AN EXERCISING ENCLOSURE.

In connection with every stable there should be an enclosure of from one to two acres of land as an exercising and feeding lot or paddock. Whether a pasture is had or not, such an area should be a part of every farm. In this enclosure the cows can be placed warm nights or at other times when it is not convenient to keep them in the stable or pasture. Here the fattening and other stock can be given their roughage, the horse can exercise and rest in the open and the pigs can wander.

FOOLING THE SUBMARINES.

Occasionally we learn of humorous incidents of the war that tend to lighten the general gloom that surrounds the operations of land and sea. One of these is a device adopted by the British Admiralty to fool the German submarines. In the many ports and shipyards of the British Isles are scores of merchantmen of various types that for various reasons have been withdrawn from active service. But although intended for an ignominious finish on the scrap heap, the war has found for them a useful, if odd part. They are rigged up as dummy warships, and cruising up and down the North Sea where the submarines are likely to be operating, lead the real cruisers and battleships and take up the time that is valuable to the enemy, while there is always a chance of luring them into range of a British cruiser or destroyer. It is said to be a simple matter to "fake" these boats so as to give them the appearance of warships. Some changes to the masts and funnels and a dummy barbette, would easily deceive a submarine, which under the most favorable conditions is limited in its seeing capacity. They are the clowns, the Masqueraders of the blockading fleets, daring to man them as it is their definite business to cruise in the danger zones. To bluff is their game and long they may continue to escape mine and torpedo, incidentally furnishing a laugh although doubtless the Germans have failed to see the joke.—London Advertiser.

THE NEW MOON.

Dear mother, how pretty the moon looks to-night! She was never so cunning before. Her two little horns are so sharp and bright— I hope she'll not grow and become a full moon. If I were up there, with you and my friends, I'd rock in it nicely, you'd see. I'd sit in the middle and hold up both ends. Oh, what a bright cradle 'twould be! I would call to the stars to keep up of the way. Let's we should rock over their tops. And when I would rock till the dawn of the day, And see where the pretty moon goes. An there we would stay in the beautiful skies, And through the bright clouds we would roam; We would see the sun set, and see the sun rise, And on the next rainbow come down.
