Black future For quislings

LONDON, Jan. 13—(CP)—The allied nations served grim warning today on Axis occupation officials and their quislings that post-war courts and perhaps firing squads await those responsible for slayings and brutality to the helpless peoples of conquired Europe.

Foreign Secretary Eden, sounded the keynote when he said the German occupation officers and "the quislings have little reason to look to the future with any hope."

Governments of eight occupied nations, and the Free French committee signed an agreement to seek out, try and punish those responsible for persecution. A conference in St. James's Palace laid the framework for punishment of such occupation officials as Reinhard Heydrichs, "protector" of Bohemia and Moravia, and Gen. Otto Von Stuelpnagel, military administrator of occupied France. Both have been accused of ordering mass executions.

Observers for the United States Russia and China looked on, but did not engage in the conference.

600 million War loan for Next month

OTTAWA, Jan. 13—(CP)—Canadians next month will be asked to lend the Government $600,000,000 to help wage war against the Axis. Finance Minister Ilsley announced today.

The minister, announcing the size of the second victory loan of the war which he forecast last month, said he was confident of its success.

The first Victory Loan of this war, last June, was for a similar amount and it was subscribed to the extent of $710,958,950 in cash.

"With the intensification of the war it is clear that (in the second Victory Loan) we, shall need at least $600,000,000" Mr. Ilsley said.

The new drive for war funds will start in mid-February and continue into March.

N. B. makes good Financial showing

FREDERICTON, Jan. 13—(CP)—A record high surplus of $901,233 on current account, record receipts of $10,948,040, record expenditures of $10,046,806 and a record reduction of $747,725 in the net debt are shown in the annual financial statement of New Brunswick for the fiscal year ending Oct. 31 last. A surplus of $31,301 had been estimated in the 1941 budget.

Revenues exceeded the estimates by $838,185 while expenditures were $61,748 less than anticipated. Previous record receipts and expenditures, respectively, were $10,302,143 and $9,764,000 in 1940, which also was the year of the previous highest surplus—$538,143 Prior to that the best surplus had been $198,209 in 1928.

The net debt stands at $85,032,940. It was increased by more than $8,000,000 in 1939 and more than $9,000,000 in 1938. A decrease of $335,212 in 1940 was the first appreciable reduction since 1929.

Biggest single gain in revenue over 1941 estimates was shown by the Liquor Control Board with receipts amounting to $2,220,307, or $550,307 over the estimate and $564,569 over the 1940 revenue. Highlighting reductions in expenditures was a saving of $51,429 in debt charges.

Four Federal By-Elections

OTTAWA, Jan. 13—(CP)—Four federal by-elections are scheduled for Feb. 9—a major political event in peace time that is scarcely rippling the surface of war-pre-occupied Ottawa.

Even the fact that two cabinet ministers and the new National Conservative leader are seeking House of Commons seats so far has failed to arouse any great interest here.

Inquiries today revealed that Prime Minister Mackenzie King is unlikely to take any active part in whatever contests may take place, and it is not expected his cabinet colleagues will be very active.

Comparatively little opposition has developed for the two cabinet ministers, Justice Minister St. Laurent who is running in Quebec East, and Labor Minister Mitchell in Welland.

Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Senate Conservative leader who, after 15 years' absence from the House, is seeking a seat in York South so he may become leader of the official opposition, will be opposed by J. W. Noseworthy, a Toronto school teacher running as a C. C. F. candidate.

There has been no formal entry against Mr. St. Laurent in Quebec East but it is reported he may be opposed by Paul Bouchard, Independent-National candidate against the late Justice Minister Lapointe in the 1940 elections, when he polled 12,000 votes to 17,000 for Mr. Lapointe.

Labor Minister Mitchell, the government's candidate in Welland, is promised opposition from Mark Kirluck, a C. C. F., candidate.

In Montreal-St. Mary, fourth seat to be filled Feb. 9, there are several desirous of the Liberal nomination and it is reported Dr. Gaspard Fauteux is likely to be named.

Liberals are not contesting the York South seat against Mr. Meighen and Conservatives are not expected to offer any opposition to the two Cabinet ministers.

But there will be no certainty about the contests until official nominations take place Feb. 2.

Fifth Vacancy

A fifth vacancy in the House of Commons, created by appointment of former Secretary of State Pierre Casgrain to the Bench, exists in Charlevoix-Saguenay. No data has been fixed for this by-election.

It was reported here today that Emile Boivin would be the Liberal candidate there and that he would be given an acclamation.

Mr. King has not yet resumed Cabinet reorganization which he announced last month, would be carried out in a manner to increase the Quebec representation in the government.

Cabinet sessions, which have been held almost daily since the first of the year, were resumed today but it was said that the business before the government was mainly routine.

Mr. King has remained silent through pro-conscription agitation which has come in recent days from some of his own House supporters, from Senator Meighen, and from a group of Ontario residents in the form of a full-page advertisement in the newspapers.

But there is a persistent report the Prime Minister is working out a formula to meet this agitation and that it may be announced in a radio address before Parliament opens Jan. 22.

"Ivan the Terrible" Commands Home Australian Forces

(By Gayle Talbot, Associated Press Staff Writer)

NEW YORK, Jan. 13—(AP)—Maj.-Gen. Iven Giffard MacKay—generally called "Ivan the Terrible"—commander of Australia's home forces, was film censor of the land down under before Hitler forced him to drop his shears and de-moth his old army uniform.

Hollywood possibly remembers him with some pain, for he took his movie job seriously and was tough about some questionable scenes.

He is equally tough in battle, as can be attested by the Italians who were smashed by his Australian 6th division at Sidi Barrani, Bardia and Tobruk in 1940. His men call him the "hero of Bardia."

His nickname stems from the bloody Gallipoli campaign of the First Great War. All his men were killed or wounded in one engagement, and only Sir Iven was left standing. Alone, armed with pistol and rifle, he held his trench for two hours against a strong Turkish unit. When relief reached him, he was battered and exhausted, but still on his feet.

Later, still full of fight, he commanded the 1st Infantry Brigade in France, collecting at least one wound, the Distinguished Service Order and bar and the Croix de Guerre.

As is frequently the case, Sir Iven looks more like a school teacher than a warrior. He is tall, slim and mild-mannered.

The fact that Sir Iven dropped the military mantle in peace-time is one of the things that appealed most to the democratic Australians. They like it when, upon quietly resuming command at the start of the current conflict, he said he was ready to "fight round two of the struggle against tyranny."

He was knighted last March in recognition of his bold leadership in Libya, and in August was appointed to his present high post. Sir Iven is married, with one son and two daughters. His mother was Emily Frances, a Canadian.

He alone of the three men commanding Australia's military arms is a citizen of the country. The other two, Vice-Admiral Sir Guy Royle, first member of the naval board, and Air Chief Marshal Sir Charles Stuart Burnett, are "on loan" from Britain.

NEWSY NATURE NOTES

By Stuart J. Thompson

New Year Thoughts

Once more the New Year comes and we discard the old calendar and hang up a new one, perhaps with mixed feelings. We may regret the passing of the old year, or we may look forward with anticipation to the coming of the new.

It is well we divide our time off into well-defined periods. There is something stimulating about beginning a new day; a new month is an interesting event in our lives; and there is something undoubtedly inspiring in the fact that we are commencing a new year.

Each day that breaks we can liken to a nature ramble. Whatever our work or daily occupation, there is zest in the thought, "What new experience am I going to have today?" for no two days are alike any more than any two outdoor rambles.

In the same spirit we enter each month. In Nature no two months are quite alike, July and August, though both summer months, each has birds, flowers and an atmosphere typical of itself, discernible to a close observer. It is between two months which are much alike in Nature's calendar that we have elected to end one year and begin a new. Abruptly in the midst of Nature's winter season we re-date our lives and affairs. The last outdoor ramble is recorded, the last Nature note is set down, then we close our books and, so to speak, write "Finis". And in January, which we now call 1942, although still the same season of winter, we start afresh with all the enthusiasm and inspiration that a new beginning brings, hoping for bigger, better things and looking forward to new experiences in the days to come.

But strangely enough Nature knows no such change. The "New Year" is purely a human invention. Years, as we know them, mean nothing in the outdoor world. Except for the changes of long duration, the landscape we know and admire remains the same no matter what numerical name we apply to the year. Nor can we detect any decided change month by month. It is the seasons that bring us the changes we know. Spring, with its renewal of vigor and quickening into life; Summer, with its ever-increasing growth; Autumn, with its maturing and mellowing; and Winter, with its time of rest and sleep. And so in endless succession, unceasingly, no matter how we have divided up our time, nor what our sentiments toward each season and our emotions on commencing a new year, Nature's seasons wax and wane, gliding imperceptibly one into the other, the days making up the months which in turn make up the seasons, whether it be 1842 or 1942

And as we ponder on Nature's constant cycle of ever-changing seasons, we are reminded of that grand and impressive passage in Genesis 8: 22—"While the earth remaineth seed-time and harvest, and cold and heat, and summer and winter, and day and night, shall not cease."

Dutch Lose Oil Island In Indies

Defenders put coveted oil far beyond reach of enemy for months.

ed Press Staff Writer)

BATAVIA, Netherlands East Indies, Jan. 13—(AP)—Tarakan off northeast Borneo has fallen to a Japanese assault of overwhelming power, but the one prize for which the invader paid heavily in ships and planes and men—the island's oil—is still many a month out of his grasp, the Netherlands Indies command said tonight.

Almost simultaneously with the disclosure of the command that the small Tarakan garrison had been overrun by vastly superior forces and that only a few of its men had reached the Borneo mainland, it was established that the Netherlanders meant business when they warned the enemy that it would be easier to come for the island's riches than to take them away.

All oil wells and equipment were so smashed by the little band of defenders, said an authorized spokesman, that many months of labor will be required to get them into production again.

Thus was shut off at the source a petroleum flow of 80,000 tons a month—a flow of high quality.

The Netherlands communique reporting the loss of the island made no mention of how the fighting was going in the Minahassa section of the island of Celebes, were earlier landings had been made on the left wing of the Japanese invasion thrust.

It made clear, however, that the Japanese fleet and troopships were under unending aerial assault. Netherlands and allied (Australian and American) bombers already had hit two Japanese cruisers and four transports—this in the first two days of the invasion.

"The fact that within a few days allied aid has expressed itself so substantially has been enthusiastically welcomed in this country," said an informed Netherlands quarter, "because it proves that the unified command is not hesitating to use without delay the striking power of which it can avail itself."

Federal Subsidies For Quebec

MONTREAL, Jan. 13—(CP)—Loss of revenue to Quebec through decreased tax collections on gasoline and other commodities affected by war-time restrictions will be compensated by subsidies from the Dominion government, Premier Godbout said in an interview today.

The Quebec Premier said he believed the subsidies would be extended to all provinces.

The Premier gave no indication of the amount of the proposed subsidy, nor did he say if the amount had yet been set. On the basis of estimated ordinary revenue for 1941-42, proceeds from the gasoline tax in Quebec amount to about $11,500,000 yearly. The provincial tax is eight cents a gallon.

Premier Godbout said that arrangements had been completed for the Dominion government to enter the provincial income tax, corporation tax and succession duties fields. He estimated compensation for the province from the Dominion in these fields would be about $22,000,000 annually.

Mr. Godbout said that the provincial government did not at present anticipate that any new taxes would be needed in the next fiscal year.

Turning to other provincial matters, the Premier said that present conditions "do not seem to warrant" abolition of the provincial legislative council. Rumors had been current that the council, only provincial upper house in the Dominion, would soon be abolished.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of my husband James Rayner who passed away January 14, 1941.

Gone is the one I loved so dear
Silent the voice I loved to hear
Sincere and kind in heart and mind
Sweet are the memories you left behind.

The home is lonesome without you dear
I miss your prayer and the Hymns you sung
Your loving smile has gone forever,
But I'll never forget it, no never.

So bravely I'll try to fight the tear
That often comes from missing you dear
Gone on before me to God's great domain
Fond memories darling will always remain.

Airmen of the R.C.A.F. fear not the cold blasts of winter which today shriek around them as they do their trick on sentry-go at Manning depot, Toronto. Not, that is, as long as they have outfits like this to wear. An overall coat, a parka hood cap and heavy overshoes go right over the regular winter uniform. This sentry is Aircraftman Lawrence Hill. He's from Sundridge and is accustomed to this type of weather. It was two below zero at the depot when this photograph was taken.
