Farm Notes

FARM FLOCK MANAGEMENT

George Robertson, Assistant Dominion Poultry Husbandman, discusses the question of housing and management of poultry on the farm states:

"Unless the flock is properly housed profitable returns cannot be expected. A house to be satisfactory should be bright, dry, and well ventilated, but above all it should be free from draughts. If a flock of 100 birds is contemplated a straw loft house 16 by 32 feet, plans of which may be obtained by writing the poultry division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, will provide satisfactory. The house may be divided by a partition so that the pullets and hens may be kept separate, the partition being placed according to the proportion of hens and pullets making up the flock. One member of the family should be placed in charge of the flock so that it becomes his or her responsibility. The handling of such a department of the farm work is excellent training for either son or daughter, and if the manager is treated as a partner, sharing in the profits, it will be an incentive that few will respond to.

Accurate accounts should be kept of all expenditure and receipts, and credit should be given the flock for all produce used in the home just the same as though it had been marketed in the usual way.

Farm, Egg and Poultry Account forms which may be obtained for the asking from the poultry division, if used to advantage will show just how your poultry accounts stand at the end of each month, and the keeping of this daily record will make the work far more interesting and is an incentive to better flock management."

is grown along with or between the seasons of regular crops.

Most frequently the catch-crop is grown to take the place of some crop which has been winter-killed, such as clover or winter grains.

When clover winter-kills it is always a problem to know what is the best plan to follow. The first step is to decide whether the stand of clover is worth leaving, which cannot be done until growth starts in the spring. If the stand is to be ploughed, the best plan is to plough the land and seed it to some other crop. It is usually unwise to attempt to thicken the stand of clover by broadcasting clover seed early in the spring because such seed will not produce a crop of hay until the following year and hence will leave a very poor and unprofitable crop on the land for that year. Moreover, the clover seed falls upon hard ground it frequently fails to get covered and does not germinate.

Under these circumstances, it is usually best to plough the land and plant it to a mixture of oats and peas for hay, seeding down the land again with clover and timothy. This plan undoubtedly entails more work and expense than would have been the case had the clover crop not winter-killed, but it is much better than allowing the land to produce a half crop of hay and become polluted with weeds.

Where fall wheat has been winter-killed throughout portions of a field, it is customary to re-seed the patches with oats or barley or an early variety of spring wheat. Barley ripens at nearly the same time as the winter wheat but the threshed grain is difficult to separate from the wheat; oats are much better in this regard, but are later than wheat in maturing. When stocking the grain, care should be taken to keep any sheaves of mixed grain separate from the wheat sheaves in order to secure a good grade of wheat. The use of spring wheat obviates these difficulties.

THE USE OF THE CATCH-CROP

A catch-crop is a crop which is grown to take the place of a regular crop in the rotation which has been killed by unfavourable climatic conditions or it is a crop which

Preference For Quality

One of the items of outstanding interest in the Live Stock and Meat Trade Review for 1931, issued by the Dominion Live Stock Branch at Ottawa this week, is that which comments on the evidence of consumer preference for quality in summer products. Bacon and pork quality have never been better than in 1931, the report states and with cheap prices the domestic consumption of these products was extremely heavy. At the same time, the report continues, the Beef Grading Scheme clearly indicates a consumer preference for good beef, and a willingness on the part of the consumer to pay a reasonable premium for beef of brandable quality.

Fattening Broilers

Studies recently concluded by the Poultry Division of the Dominion Experimental Farm show conclusively that meat meal is not necessary in the fattening and finishing of broilers. Skim-milk and grains finely ground are all that are necessary to obtain good gains in fattening. A good ration is: equal parts ground wheat, ground oats and ground barley, mixed with skim-milk to the consistency of porridge; and one meal ahead. Such a ration produces the "milk-fed" finish which commands a premium on the market.

IN MEMORIAM

MR. AENEAS MCKENZIE
(Lethbridge Times)

The funeral of the late Aeneas McKenzie took place from St. Patrick's Church of this city at nine o'clock on Thursday morning, solemn high mass being sung by the senior choir. Rev. Father Joseph McKenzie of Nelson, B. C., a cousin of the deceased, was the celebrant of the mass with the Rev. Fr. A. Madden and Rev. Fr. H. Barney of Lethbridge, assisting as deacon and sub-deacon. At the Officiary Mrs. M. Petrunia, Jr. and S. Proman sang "Pray for the Dead," as a duet and the choir gave "Nearer My God to Thee" for recessional. R. Quin of Cranbrook and I. Lacey, J. K. Smith, A. Cunningham, J. McDonald and W. Chalmers of Lethbridge, were pallbearers and interment was made in St. Patrick's cemetery.

Mr. McKenzie was born at Scotchfort in Prince Edward Island in 1880, coming west when 15 years of age. The remainder of his life was spent in Lethbridge where he was in the employ of the C. P. R.

His death, which occurred suddenly in this city on Sunday, May 15, was a great shock to his many friends by whom he was held in great esteem and affection. He is survived by three sisters, Mrs. A. R. McDonald of Cranbrook, Mrs. S. E. Donahue of New York, and Mrs. Annie Burge of Prince Edward Island, and three brothers, Angus of Vancouver, Jack of Prince George, B. C., and Alex. of Prince Edward Island. Mrs. McDonald and his brothers, Angus and Jack, were present at the funeral.

Two microbes sat on a party shelf. Asad watched with expression pain. The milkman's gnomes, and they both said at once. "Our relations are getting strained."
