Bliss Carman's View of the Function of the Poet.
"What do you understand by a poet? What is his office and business in life? What part does he play in the world?"

"First, and speaking most roughly, the poet is a person who has something important to say about life, and has the special gift of saying it supremely well. He must be one (I think we will all admit) who has thought profoundly about existence."

"The poet must delight our senses with the inevitable beauty of his cadences, his diction, his rhythms—with what is often called technique; he must enlist our sympathy through his own strong and generous emotional nature; he must convince our minds by his own reasonableness."

"How can I talk to you with any hope of a common understanding, when I only know the facts at second-hand, while you have actually experienced them, and when I have no caring about them one way or the other, while to you they are matters of life and death?"

"If a man has never driven a nail in his life, nor built a fire, nor turned a furrow, nor picked a barrel of apples, nor fetched some of the cows, nor pulled an ear, nor reared a calf, nor saddled a horse, nor carried home a bag of apples from town by six-fifteen, nor weeded the garden, nor been lost in the woods, nor nursed a friend, nor barked his shin, nor been thankful for a free lunch, do you think it is likely he will have anything to say to you and me that will be worth listening to?"

"The fine arts are nearly related to the industrial arts." And at present we can have no widespread national interest in the fine arts, because we have no national industrial arts.

"Of all forms of human activity it is the most exacting, as it is perhaps the most delightful. And the demand which creative output makes on all the energies is just as great, and just as exhausting, as that of any other worthy occupation worthily followed."

WELL KNOWN GALT MAN TALKS
Of the Wonderful Curative Powers of Dodd's Kidney Pills.
He has Backache and his Legs began to Swell—Four boxes Cured him Completely.

GALT, Ont., Feb. 13. (Special).—Frank Cromwell of this place tells a story of his cure of a complication of painful troubles that would be remarkable were it not that his aches were all traceable to the Kidneys and he used that sterling curative remedy, Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"One lucky day Dodd's Magazine was left at my house and I read it very carefully, and my case there. I purchased one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills and began to use them. Before I had finished that box I felt relief."

"I have used four boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and am now completely cured." In his joy over his unexpected recovery, Mr. Cromwell grows enthusiastic over the wonderful curative powers of Dodd's Kidney Pills and daily recommends them to his numerous friends and acquaintances.
