Business men should remember that they can reach the country every day in the week except Sundays and stationary holidays, by advertising in the Guardian's Rural Daily with a guaranteed average circulation for 1907 of at least four thousand per issue.

A well known citizen witnessed a carter beating his horse unmercifully passing along one of the principal streets Saturday morning last. His feelings for the poor animal and indignation towards the driver prompted him to follow both to the wharf. The carter stated that he was mad with the horse, but was sorry he had lost his temper. This explanation does not excuse the man for cruelty to dumb animals. It would be a step in advance for this city to protect animals and punish those who transgress the law.

At Wonderland last night the audience were shown a program of splendid pictures, some of them excellent in the elements of truth and tragedy. Particularly humorous was the delineation of the adventures of a couple with a rather overflowing family. The Indian rubber man, too, was a funny character who headed not being run over by a steam roller. The other pictures and the song were first class and highly pleased the large number who attended. The management regret that for the latter part of last week they were handicapped through their films going astray thus depriving them of an expected change of program. The fault was that of the people who supply the films.

Ever since they became members of our order they have stood true to those principles for which we stand and we hope that their influence for the good of all mankind may be felt wherever they may go and that prosperity may be theirs to such an extent that peace and happiness shall crown their lives.
