THE PRINCESS OF GRATZEN

By Louis Arthur Cunningham, Author of "Of These Three Loves," "Marionette," Etc.

"You must take more." She stood on toptoe and gave him her lips briefly and turned away, her cheeks flushed. Then the station wagon, laden with the Goujons and a romper full of good things from the party, with Roger at the wheel, rolled down the long drive among the cool blue shadows. The little ones waved until they passed from view.

Madame and Meridel and Rudolph sat for a while on the porch. Pol Martin and Rosine slipped away. Up the stairs they went silently, hand in hand, to the wing of the house where madame had her rooms. Gesner and Corinne had finished clearing away. The door was ajar.

"I do not like to go in, Rosine. Suppose Madame Laurin or Uncle Rudi or Meridel were to find us — what would they think? And what should we say to them?"

"I do not know. But you must come, Pol Martin. You must see it. Maybe I am wrong. But you must see this picture."

"But of whom is it a picture? Someone, you say, whom I am supposed to know. But who could that be? I know so few in this country."

"You must see it. On the dresser, in a bright frame. You will know —"

"Come then! Quickly! But I wish I did not have to know."

They went into the room where a short while ago all had been so gay, so bright, so merry. It seemed empty now, haunted by shadows, by some sinister presence. The black reticule still lay on the dresser where madame had left it. Rosine, by standing on tiptoe, could move it a little and straighten the picture. The light was dimmer now. But there is its bright metal frame was the handsome smiling face, its eyes fixed upon them.

Pol Martin gazed at it and slowly his lips parted. His fingers tightened on hers. He stared long. He could not seem to tear his eyes from that thin, smiling face.

"Pol! Tell me, Pol." Rosine's voice was urgent.

"Yes —yes!" he whispered. "I would know him anywhere. I could never forget. It was thus he smiled the day he ran from Bonhomme Fricot's cottage. He wore the uniform of one of the Luftwaffe then. But it is he."

"Yes, I know. I saw it before the party started. I could not eat for thinking of it. I could feel him smiling there behind me. But what could his picture be doing here? Who can he be?"

"I do not know. We shall ask Corinne or Gesner. We shall not speak."

"No, we must not speak. These are good people, all of them. They do not know that the devil is amongst them."

"But Roger promised to kill this one —and Roger is strong. He wears a cross the King gave him for bravery. Yes., Roger will kill this one surely."

And they stole away, out of that room, away from the picture of Michel Fabric that smiled at them in the twilight.

In Memoriam

MRS. LILIAN MacINNIS

"We shall not say,
We must not say,
That she is dead,
She is just away."

These words came vividly as the news was flashed to us that Lillian MacInnis of Cherry Valley, aged 47 years had passed to that beautiful country beyond, there to receive the reward that is promised to those who strive day by day to do all things well.

In this respect, she earned the love and esteem not only of her immediate friends, but of everyone with whom she came in contact. Possessed as she was of a very cheerful and uncomplaining disposition, it was hard to realize that she was in failing health, and despite all that medical science and loving care could do for her, her gentle spirit passed peacefully away on Nov. 20.

During her illness, she was visited frequently by her pastor Rev. Mgr. Maurice McDonald who brought her the consolation of her Holy Religion and also performed the last sad funeral rites. She leaves to mourn one brother Ernest of Cherry Valley, and the following sisters: Mrs. E. J. Foley, Marsden, Sask., who was with her at the time of her death; Mrs J. S. Horan and Mrs. Richard Enright both of Saskatoon, Sask.

The pall bearers were: Monty MacLeod, George Irving, J. J. MacInnis, Dennis Rooney, Alphonse MacIntyre, Leo Praught. May her soul rest in peace. (Patriot please copy.)

Says Mrs. Joseph Pare, Montreal, Quebec: "I find KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN much more satisfactory than pills or powders. Nearly all our family suffered from constipation. Our friends suggested pills and powders, but relief was only temporary. Now we eat ALL-BRAN regularly and recommend it to our friends."

Instead of waiting until you suffer and then dosing yourself with harsh purgatives, try ALL-BRAN'S "Better Way" to correct the cause of constipation due to the lack of the right kind of "bulk" in the diet. Eat it daily and drink plenty of water, but remember, ALL-BRAN doesn't work like a cathartic; it takes time. ALL-BRAN is sold at your grocer's in two convenient size packages; at restaurants in individual serving packages. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

Dorothy Dix Says—

My husband is good and kind to me. I have a nice home, a better one than I will have if I leave my husband. But I don't care as long as I am happy. I can't go on living a lie and eating my heart out in longing for this other man. What shall I do? WORRIED

ANSWER: A great many times in life we have to choose between two evils and try to decide which is the lesser of them. You say you want to be happy. My advice to you is to sit down and try, very calmly and honestly, to weigh the happiness you find with your lover against the happiness you would find in being with your children and having their affection and respect, and in rearing them to be fine men and women.

In one side of the scale put the thrill of having your lover's arms around you. In the other the feel of a baby's arms around your neck. Sweet in your ears will be his love talk, but will it drown out the cries of little children weeping for the mother who has deserted them? Your new husband may praise you for your courage in defying gossip and scandal and following your heart's desire, but will that makes up to you for sons and daughters who never speak their mother's name because they are ashamed of her?

If you could be perfectly sure that breaking up your home and leaving your husband and children for this man would make you happy, you might be justified in doing it. But so many women try it and find only misery. So think a long time before you make your decision.

The Cough That Sticks
The Cough That Hangs On

This is the kind of a cough it is hard to get rid of, the kind that bothers you during the day and keeps you awake at night.

Why not get a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and see how quickly it will help to relieve you of this coughing condition?

It acts promptly and effectively, going to the foundation of the trouble, loosening the phlegm, soothing the irritated air passages, and stimulating the bronchial organs.

"Dr. Wood's" has been on the market for the past 48 years.

Price 35c a bottle; the large family size, about 3 times as much, 60c, at all drug counters.
