"Swanee River" at Capitol Theatre, Summerside

The story of Stephen C. Foster, the great American troubadour, was presented last night at the Capitol Theatre, Summerside, in the magnificent Technicolor 20th Century Picture, "Swanee River." A superb cast presents the thrilling story of Foster and his beloved melodies which are America's only real folk music. The picture is tops in film entertainment, and recalls those colorful romantic days of minstrel and river boats. Don Ameche plays Foster just strong, inspired and emotionally as he was—sweet and tender, head-unstable. As Jane Audeard leads a proper inspiration for some of our greatest music, Al Jolson puts over the role of Christy, the black-face minstrel man, with a humor and a vigor unparalleled in his long career.

Featured in the supporting cast are Felix Bressart, Chick Chandler, Russell Hicks, George Reed and the Hall Johnson Choir, whose renditions of the Foster songs are memorable indeed. Al Jolson wrote the story that makes it a genuine success of touch and feeling for the world. It is an achievement in this offensive spirit which so clearly animates our forces in the Middle East. It augurs well for the future.

The War Secretary sounded a warning that if the enemy should attack the people must stay where they are.

"Refugees on roads or railroads hampering their own progress, defence depends," he said, "the masses of refugees helped to lose the battle of France. They will not be allowed to do this again."

"We have won the battle of the fate of the French nation, that civilization cannot be preserved by material means alone," he said, "it is only by the dedication of the human spirit, and of the human will through the length and breadth of the land that complete and final victory can be won."

"It is our privilege as an Empire, fighting together as we will, to restore and in the end to extend the frontiers of freedom."

"The world has nowhere to look but to us for the salvation of the precious heritage of civilization which must inevitably pass from Europe unless we, with our banners from overseas, show the invincible will to defend it."

Many Under Arms
Mr. Eden quoted Prime Minister Churchill's statement of last week that there are 250,000 soldiers under arms in this country with over counting 500,000 local defence workers.

Since the spoke these forces have been increased by the arrival of the Australian and New Zealand contingents and by the return of large numbers of British, Canadian and Allied troops from France.

"Many of these men have met the enemy. They are confident that they can beat him. If he is able to run the gauntlet of the fleet and the air force or descend upon our land from the sky, we shall be attacking the enemy on our own soil. Unhindered by the necessity of sending supplies and reinforcements overseas."

"We do not intend to make the enemy. But for once he will be operating under the disadvantages which we have always experienced in our continental wars. And in addition he will have to supply his forces overseas without possessing the command of the sea."

BUCHAREST, June 27—Thurs.—AP—The Hunanian airlines suspended commercial service from the capital to Cernauli, following a report of a clash between British and Russian planes which invaded the border. FORD ACTION

In high places. As is customary on Wednesdays, the House adjourned at six o'clock. The platform was adopted in record time. Then, disregarding the dinner hour, the nominations began, with permanent chairman Joseph W. Martin announcing that he thought they might be completed tonight.

The roll of the states was called, revealing that 10 names would be presented: Thomas E. Dewey, Frank E. Gannett, Senator Robert A. Taft, Wendell Willkie, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Senator Styles Bridges, Governor Arthur H. James of Pennsylvania, Hanford MacNider of Iowa, Governor Harold G. Baskin of South Dakota and Senator Charles L. McNary of Oregon. MacNider is a former minister to Canada.

The uproar attending the smaller nominations was matched only by the measure by the enthusiasm with which the convention pushed the platform through to adoption. Chairman Herbert K. Hyde of the resolutions committee read the document to delegates.

Hyde's oratorical and arm-swinging delivery came after a day in which Herbert Hoover was authoritatively described as having taken a position in opposition to the nomination of Willkie, New York.

Mr. Hanson first drew attention to the Ford incident on orders of the day when he referred to news-articles of the motor magnate's refusal to make airplane engines for Great Britain.

Mr. Howe said it appeared a joint order from the United States and British governments for manufacture of Rolls Royce engines had collapsed because of Mr. Ford's refusal to manufacture for Great Britain.

So far as the Ford Company of Canada was concerned, it was headed by Wallace Campbell, who had served on the Canadian government Board, and his plan was co-operating fully.

Mr. Howe said that Mr. Ford has taken an attitude that is distinctly unfriendly to the British Empire and every part of it. Mr. Howe said he was shocked by the United States government as perhaps the circumstances warranted.

Later, when the House was being moved into committee on supply, Mr. Caldwell seized the opportunity such a motion gives a member to introduce a debate. He declared the Ford incident was too serious to be dismissed with a "passing reference."

The head of the Ford enterprises, Mr. Caldwell said, "is a gentleman who was decorated by the leader of the German Reich and whose long record is not one to inspire confidence in those of us who believe in democratic institutions."

"To my mind," Mr. Caldwell continued, "the whole record of Henry Ford is the record of one of the type who is bringing upon us the conditions we are facing."

"He is the industrialist who has exploited the working man, who has regimented him, and then, when he has sucked the life-blood out of him he throws him again into the gutter to follow the lead."

"Ford has paid his men what he has regarded as a good wage. But those of us who know the history of the Ford workers know this: that the Ford factory has destroyed more men long before the period of their usefulness should have ended."

"Everyone knows, who knows anything about the industry, that it is one of the cruellest industries in the world. And because Ford, fatening on human life as he has done, has set the example, other industries have had to follow his lead."

Because of privileges given him by Canada, and in other parts of the empire, Ford had made "billions" out when depression came and he was the only man in the world who could afford to give relief to the unemployed.

Whatever the share ownership of the Canadian Ford Plants Mr. Caldwell was convinced they were controlled in every essential manner by Henry Ford.

Gov't Has Power
Last week the government was given extraordinary powers to consolidate Canadian resources for war purposes as well as to compel personal service.

"It is an opportunity," Mr. Caldwell said, "for the government to take this industry out of the control of Henry Ford, and so far as his interest in concerned, place it in the hands of the people who are going to do with it finally, and who are in control of the custodian of the alien property just as we have placed the property of smaller people in the hands of the government."

Paul Martin (Lib. Essex East) who represents the constituency in which the Ford Company of Canada is situated, said Mr. Caldwell's reference to Mr. Ford's action in the matter of the Ford plants of the citizens of this country was of the House, by the vast majority of the United States.

But Mr. Martin drew a sharp distinction between the United States Ford companies and the Canadian branch which he said was largely Canadian owned and headed by a man who, with his wife, had proven himself intensely loyal to the British cause.

Howe's Statement
In connection with the demand for seizure of the Canadian plant Mr. Howe said the government had not yet faced the necessity of using the wide powers given in that direction "although on a few occasions we have threatened to do so."

The Minister added: "If there is the slightest indication that any corporation capable of making war materials is not doing so energetically and in a way which will afford maximum assistance, the government will not hesitate to take over that plant and see that it is operated for government account."

REPUBLICAN Writer Sees France Into Political Fire

WASHINGTON, June 26—(CP)—Kirke L. Simpson, Associated Press military correspondent, suggests that while France has stepped out of the frying pan of the European war, official texts of the German and Italian armistice terms suggest she has stepped into a hotter one.

The roll of the states was called, revealing that 10 names would be presented: Thomas E. Dewey, Frank E. Gannett, Senator Robert A. Taft, Wendell Willkie, Senator Arthur H.
