REQUIRES MORE THAN ONE

Mrs. Pester: What do you think of a man who hides behind his wife's skirts?

Her Husband: Well, if he had enough of her skirts he could do it.

A LOCAL USAGE

Patient: Do you give a local anesthetic?
Dentist: No. The patients in this locality always drink a pint of moonshine. Then they don't feel anything at all.

UNDER THE TREES MONEY GROWS ON

She (deeply interested): And of course, your rich uncle remembered you in making his will?
He: He did that—remembered to leave me out.

AND THE GRAVES YAWNED

She: Promise you'll never even look at another girl?
He: If I never look at 'em, how am I going to know that you're the prettiest one there is in the world?

NO DRUGS

Duggy tooth pastes are doubtful. Minty's does not contain a trace of drugs—nothing but the most reliable cleansing agents. That's why the bubbling foam which dissolves tartar and film, makes your teeth so glistening white.

CHAPTER XLVI

The smile died on Mary Lowell's mouth. She bit her lip and stared, uncomprehending, at Jimmy's vanishing form.

Barry Colvin's hat in his hand, called crazily, "Jim! Oh, Jim!" He mumbled words vaguely at Mary, not realizing she was not near enough to hear: "He's crazy. I'll catch him—see what's the matter with him."

But Jimmy was not crazy. He had recognized in the man who was boarding the street car, none other than Kid Divis.

There was no time for explanations. Everything else could wait—would have to wait.

"I'll not let him get away this time," he snarled.

He swung aboard the car just as the conductor was closing the door. He glanced swiftly about him, his head lowered, his eyes peering.

He thought, "I mustn't take any chance of being recognized."

Divis had moved up in the car. Jimmy saw a newspaper lying on the rear platform. He picked it up, slid into the seat nearest the conductor, from where he could observe Divis' back and shield his face with the paper.

He wondered what he would do—what his plan of action would be—if he should see him and leave the car.

"Get him, that's all," he told himself, and sat there hoping that there would be no such action needed.

It wasn't Divis he wanted to tell himself. It was Jensen. Divis, if arrested, would only be again about Jensen's whereabouts. Perhaps he was going to see Jensen now.

Once Divis glanced nervously toward the rear of the car. Jimmy, his face exposed, shifted the paper quickly in front of his eyes, stifling for an outward show of non-chalance that he did not feel.

But Divis had not seen him—or, at least, had not recognized him—for he turned slowly around again and stared out of the car window.

The car rolled on—black after black. Passengers sat at nearly every seat. Now a new fear struck Jimmy—that if he rode much further he and Divis would be alone in the car. In which event, he knew he must be recognized.

Minutes passed to Jimmy, nervous, apprehensive, they seemed like hours.

The car, with fewer stops to make, rushed along at a swaying, dizzy speed.

Jimmy, still behind his newspaper, saw the passengers gradually thin out until there was only three remaining besides himself and Divis.

"Good night!" he said to himself. "Is this man going to the end of the line?"

Another passenger left. The car moved on.

"End of the line," sang the conductor. "All out."

Divis had risen from his seat and was walking down the aisle toward the rear platform. Jimmy saw Divis would pass him.

He thought, "I can't follow him. What can I do? If I trail after him he's bound to recognize me."

Struck with a sudden inspiration, he closed his eyes and gently tilted his head back, letting the paper flap against his face completely hiding it from Divis' view. The two passengers preceded Divis out of the car. Divis, with an amused glance at the sleeper in the rear seat, swung down off the steps.

"Hey in there, end of the line," yelled the conductor he gave Jimmy a none to gentle push. "Want off here?"

"Hi!" Jimmy was acting for the benefit of Divis. If he were still in car shot, he thought, his voice might work. He said in a voice disguised and husky, "Hell, I rode past my stop. 'I'll stay an ride back to my stop."

A fog had been gathering. It was thick, for which he thanked his lucky stars, but he could see Divis as he rounded the front end of the car and crossed the tracks.

"You're a minute," cried Jimmy, checking him. "I've changed my mind. Let me off here, just thought of a man I wanted to see that lives out here."

Then he saw Divis test a steps that led to the passenger entrance. He was out of sight now, but Jimmy listening intently.

Along a parallel street a block away Jimmy could see an automobile shooting along at a furious rate and bumping crazily over the uneven road. He wondered what mission its passenger or passengers could be on to warrant such reckless speed.

Divis observed the auto, too. The roar of its motor seemed strangely far away in the fog, although only a short block separated them. Jimmy saw Divis stop again, his head moving slowly as he followed the car with his eyes. Jimmy thought, "Wonderly here. Mary thought, seeing me run away like that? Looked as if I were trying to avoid her. . . . Must clear that up soon. I get back. . . . Wonder what Barry thought? . . . Good old Barry. Wish he were here."

He felt the need of someone near him. . . . Not help, so much, as companionship. He debated briefly on the advisability of entering one of the houses that he passed so frequently, explaining his plight and asking for someone to come with him—with a gun.

But he put the thought aside. "Right now," he said to himself, "I'm going to stick it to him to see where he's going. Thousand dollars to one he's going to see Jensen. Maybe they've got Olga. . . . God, what a lonely place! . . . Nobody here. . . . Nobody within hailing distance all day long."

Again Divis stopped and again Jimmy flattened himself on the ground, his again it was only to shield himself.

"Must be heavy," Jimmy said. "Wonder what's in it? Lord, if only somebody were here—Barry, O'Day, anybody."

Straight ahead, some distance back from the street, a light glowed dimly. As he drew nearer Jimmy could see that it came from the basement of a house whose outlines he could barely make out in the screen of fog.

There was no glint to the light, as there had been to those in some of the houses he had passed. Jimmy concluded it must be shining from behind a drawn shade.

Strait ahead, his man turn sharply to the left. Dropping down to the ground once more, he saw Divis, head still straight ahead, walk toward the house with the dim light.

Growing a little bolder, he got to his feet and trotted, sure that he was unobserved.

It was a long walk from the cinder path to the front porch of the house an inner hallway led to a door. Jimmy thought, "I'll see what's in it."

Then he saw Divis test a steps that led to the passenger entrance. He was out of sight now, but Jimmy listening intently.

Woman Suffered Nearly a Year. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Brought Her Health

Moose Jaw, Sask. — "I am going to try to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered very badly with dragging-down pains and inflammation, also pains in my right side over my leg. I had it nearly a year when I went to a doctor and he said I would have to have an operation. But my mother said to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as it saved her life years before. I took two bottles and I found I was better, so I kept on taking it and also used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I have had two more children since then and am perfectly well. I used to have to lie down two or three times a day, and now I do all my housework without trouble. I always keep the Vegetable Compound in the house as I find a dose now and then helps me. I am willing for you to use this letter any way you see fit and I will answer letters. If I can help any other woman I'd be only too glad to try." Mrs. ESTHER HOUGHTON, 712 Athabasca W., Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan.

BABY'S OWN SOAP

Your dear old mother wouldn't use any other

Girls just must curl and wave bobbed hair to appear their prettiest. But constant curling and waving burn and dry the hair, vitality and very life from the hair.

To offset these bad effects, just get a 35-cent bottle of delightful, refreshing "Danderine" at any drug store or toilet counter and just see for yourself how quickly it revives dry, brittle, lifeless, and fading hair.

"Danderine" is a dependable tonic and will do wonders for any girl's hair. It nourishes, stimulates and strengthens each single hair, bringing back that youthful gleam, glint and vigorous luxuriance. Falling hair stops and dandruff disappears. "Danderine" is pleasant and easy to use.

heard two distinct raps on the door.

Silence followed.

Then cautiously, his heart pounding a thunderous tattoo against his ribs, he slowly made his way up the walk of the house.

What lay ahead?

MORNING TENTS

EMILY walked down to "her Stone" in the garden. She often found girls the Fairies had left there for her.

Once it was a big diamond made of a dew-drop in a primrose cup. And once they gave her a pet toad to play with all summer. Today she found the tents they had slept in.

"If I busy their Spider Tent-makers must have been" said Emily.

"Here is the Queen's tent all covered with tiny moon-stones." Emily peeped beneath the dainty flap.

"She's gone!" sighed Emily. "But I can see her little bed."

NEW RUBBER FIELDS

The English rubber barons control 70% of the world's rubber supply—and the United States, the richest country in the world, uses three times as much rubber as all the rest of the world combined. A nice set up, said the barons, for a hold-up—so they proceeded to jack up the price by restricting exports.

But the American business man is not the kind who sits still and is such conditions, say Good Hardware. Already the Rubber Association of America is planning to spend $10,000,000 each year for five years in growing rubber plants, and the Automobile Chamber of Commerce has formed a $10,000,000 corporation for similar purposes. Fields are to be developed in Central America, the Philippines and the West Indies. The English fields are located in the Malay Peninsula and India.

KOTEX

No laundry—discard like tissue

LARGELY on medical advice, women are abandoning the old-time "sanitary pad" for a new way that supplants uncertainty with positive protection.

Sheer frocks and ill-timed social engagements no longer remain as worries. Lost days are fewer, and health better.

It is called "KOTEX." Ends the insecurity of the old-time sanitary pad. Five times as absorbent! And odorless—ends ALL fear of offending.

As easily disposed of as a piece of tissue. No laundry. No embarrassment.

You get it at any drug or department store simply by saying "KOTEX." You ask for it without hesitancy.

Costs only a few cents. Eight in 10 better-class women employ it. Proves the risk of old ways.
