

PUNCH'S SATIRE

ON ROOSEVELT.

NEW YORK, April 11.—A cable from London to the Sun says: This week's Punch satirizes Roosevelt in a column article which is headed "Mr Roosevelt in England. Extracts from the Hebdomadary Journal of the Roosevelt Round Trip." The article follows: "Today, Monday, Mr Roosevelt, having arrived at Charing Cross the previous night, addressed the members of the London County Council at the County Hall. Mr Roosevelt was received in state by the chairman and aldermen. In an impassioned speech, which occupied two hours in delivery, he adjured the council to neglect party, not to bother about rates and to sound the deathknell of municipal trading of all kinds. What, he asked, did a tram line more or less matter, and why should not all needy parents of at least twelve children be fed and clothed at the expense of the rate payers? At this stage William Hayes Fisher and Sir John Fenn left the hall, but Mr Roosevelt, nothing daunted, continued his address. Eventually the meeting adjourned in confusion, after an enthusiastic vote of thanks to the distinguished visitor had been passed by a majority of one on a total vote of three.

"Today, Tuesday, Mr Roosevelt paid his long-promised visit to the Houses of Parliament. The members of both houses had assembled in Westminster Hall to do him honor, a mixed guard of honor being furnished by the First Regiment of Life-guards and the Middlesex Yeomanry. The Speaker of the House of Commons and the Lord Chancellor led Mr Roosevelt to the brass plate commemorating the position of Stratford during his trial, and Mr Roosevelt then began his harangue by dwelling in scathing terms on the contest between the material splendor of an arch-bishop and the needy wretchedness of a laborer out of employment. No arch-bishop, he thought, should receive a stipend of more than $500 a year, paid quarterly in advance, and both of them ought to be compelled

THE SENATE.

Sir:—From the ground, the blood of our great grand-father Wat Tyler cries to us, through the spectral sprays that dance athwart the crestled waves, from our dear old ancestral home beyond the stormy sea, and rears its psychologic arch of ethereal waves, that spans the gap of more than five hundred troubled years; and carries the spirit food of freedom, with paternal love from beyond the mystic bourn to the yearning shore of our filial love, from the sacred spot on historic Smithfield's sympathetic sward where the cruel Walworth, Lord Mayor of London Town, stabbed him to the death with his long murderous sword; and to the death, as was thought by Walworth's pack of hired human dogs, of the people's right and power to govern, and the abolition of bondage; those tiny cherubs Tyler reared like the woodbine and the ivy, on either side of his humble cottage door; and that he meant, and did not mean in vain to be the harbingers of justice and of peace for peoples then unborn, and nations yet to be.

The Senate of Canada rears its autocratic head too high, and yields to the greedy serpent's seductive charms, other Tylers may arise, and other Walworths, too, with other patriots, and other human dogs; and an overbearing Senate writing in its gore shall die; and Tyler shall be slain; but on the forehead of Tyler's blood a nation shall be built up, and free from tyranny.

All newspapers that are free to favour government by the people, and are not in bondage to our country's parasites, please copy.

(In a private note to the editor, Anglo Saxon mentions that the above letter refers to the action of the Senate in rejecting the Car Ferry bill after it had passed the Commons.—Guardian.)

PEARY'S LECTURE AT MONTREAL CAUSED LITTLE ENTHUSIASM.

MONTREAL, April 11.—Before an audience of about 800 persons that seemed dwarfed by the huge dimensions of the Arena, the much discussed veteran of polar enterprise, Commander Peary, gave a lantern lecture on Saturday evening, on his trip to the North Pole. That his lecture created much impression could not be claimed. At no time did the audience exhibit enthusiasm. There was applause at intervals, but its ring was not convincing. Indeed, from the entrance of Commander Peary the demeanor of the audience was marked by comparative indifference. The commander seemed to feel the lack of cordiality in his reception. His voice was nervously husky at moments. But he plodded on with his theme, an unimpaired, self-centred, prosaic personality whom the romance of the Arctic appeared to have left strikingly uninspired. When he showed the picture of the pole, he did not state how he knew he had arrived there or describe the steps leading to such a conclusion.

BRIDE OF SIXTY-FIVE NOW SEEKING DIVORCE

NEW YORK, April 11.—Mrs. Jeanette Suffren Hiscock, the 65-year-old wife of Frank Hiscock and the owner of large tracts of land in and near Suffren, N. Y., visited Paterson, N. J., the other day for the avowed purpose of bringing suit for divorce. She was attired in a bright red gown, a green velvet hat and a caracul coat. Her hair was dressed in the latest style.

"There is but one plain reason," she said, "why I decided to marry a poor man. If I had married a wealthy man I would likely have obtained a husband who would look at other women besides me. Wealthy men are great admirers of women, you know. I wanted a man who would pay all his attention to me, and I selected one who hadn't a cent. In this way I counted that I was protecting myself from disgrace.

"Frank Hiscock discovered that I was a great deal sharper than he thought. I have property in Suffren, Paterson and other places, and he believed he could control it. He tried hard to get possession, but I put a stop to it. Now he has gone away. I thought, I have property in Suffren I married him. I paid his board, bought his clothing and gave him money for drinks. Now, is that not enough for any wise man?"

MOORE & MCLEOD MILLINERY

Opening This Evening At Half Past Seven—An Exclusive Showing Of The Latest Fashionable Millinery Ready To Wear Millinery - Ready To Make Up Millinery—Millinery Materials And All Pretaining To Millinery Needs.

A bewildering display of seasonable chapeaus awaits the discriminating taste of the lady buyers of the city at Moore & McLeod's millinery opening this evening. Bewildering? Well, the term is lacking as far as any attempt at giving an idea of all the beauty there revealed or of all the combinations shown. Combinations which rival the artists' work for they are as surely pictures as are the productions of the painter. Of course, the styles of the season in their beauty and shading are most beautiful, therein giving a foundation for dainty work which has never been equalled.

Selecting the turban as the favorite model for early spring wear, an assortment of various shapes and models present themselves to choose from, which makes choice not the easiest thing in the world. But to notice the imported hats first. Worthy of special notice is a shaded green turban in straw. Almost severe in trim, yet most distinctive are the three quills which ornament the sides, and these along with braid ornaments and straw rosette comprise the sole finish. Price $11.00.

Next a large hat of black, of the coarse net which is so chic this season, was imported and approved of most decidedly. The crown was a felt tan, and trimming was black moire ribbon, and two handsome plumes. Price $18.50.

Passing on the domestic patterns, the beautiful products of Moore & McLeod's own workrooms, under the clever supervision of the Misses Edith Wilson and Clara Steele, so many beautiful hats were shown, that it was small wonder that the question was often asked: "Are they imported models?" They are fully as correct, just as tastefully made, and priced very much lower.

A beauty in Helio straw was priced but $7.75, and one would need to look far before finding one any more stylish. Shaded chiffon, and velvet carried out the shaded effect which is seen in so many materials this spring, while chrysanthemums in helio and green, and most distinctive are the buckle made the finish.

A very deep small turban of the same material, and with a small plume, was also shown. In addition that it would take some to tell of them. So, just as a closing word for today, reserve this evening for one of the greatest Millinery showings of the season, the one every one has been waiting for, and the one which will give fastidious patrons an opportunity of seeing the world of fashion duplicated right here, and the opportunity as well of making choice from models which are adapted from those shown in the recent openings of Paris, London, New York and Toronto.

All the above mentioned are shown in the Millinery opening tonight, and so much more. In addition that it would take some to tell of them. In our Crops Mr Farmer Do You Ask How To Do It? We Will Tell You. To farmers who do not farm systematically this may seem absurd; but to the farmer whose bank account is proof of the profits of fertilizer it will seem sensible. Don't you know that there is difference in soils? Of course you do—and won't you admit that when certain elements of fertility are lacking, no matter how apparently unimportant they may seem, your crop is a failure. Well, then don't it seem reasonable that when the lacking elements of fertility can be supplied at a comparatively small cost, without practically any extra labor to apply same, and the crop doubled, don't it seem sensible to apply it? Certainly. Then it can be mixed to suit any soil. The land is supplied with the lacking "plant food" and the crops doubled. Can any shrewd farmer overlook this chance to increase his products with practically the same amount of labor? We will supply you with literature, explaining everything about these fertilizers, which contains valuable information. May we send it to you? A card will bring it—merely address— AULD BROS Charlottetown, P. E. Island.
