IN Romance and Arbella

Famous comedy by William Hurl Burt given super-production in newest photoplay.

THE STORY

Romance is the breath of life to Arbella. When set free from the elderly and uninteresting husband of her first marriage she starts out to replace him with a number two who shall be all her fervent fancy paints. In the meantime her young neighbor, Bill, a fine chap who is deeply in love with her stands no show at all. Arbella regards him as a good friend and nothing more. Bill is wise enough to accept the situation and await his chance. It comes after Arbella has been provided with four different suitors by Bill, who goes to it that she is introduced to a new admirer before the old wooer makes her his wife. An impulsive Westerner, a soulful gentleman who expounds free love, a very young chap who plays the mandolin, and an elderly but absent-minded scientist form the quartet. Bill gets Arbella on the rebound when her aged bridegroom forgets to be present at his own wedding.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. John Alexander MacKenzie and family of Hartsville desire to thank their friends for the kindness and sympathy received during the recent illness and death of the late Mr. MacKenzie.

LET HEROES SLEEP

Thy hero sleeps where heroes sleep; The fields of France are consecrated ground; No greater honor waits across the deep

Thy hero fell where heroes fell; His last brave glimpse was of a foreign sky;

And he would say, if spectral lips could tell, "I stay where I was glad to die."

Thy hero knew what heroes knew In storms of exaltation and despair; Unselfishness, the child of anguish grew Supreme and wonderfully fair.

Thy hero gave what heroes gave—A life, and with a smile, he laid it by.

His victory is complete, Salute the brave! Pass on, but there his bones shall lie.

Let heroes sleep where heroes sleep. We have no shrine to hold remains so dear.

Let France, forever, reverent vigil keep. While, in our hearts, we guard them here.

—William V. V. Stephens, in New York Times.

Don't believe the man who says he doesn't care what his neighbors say.

Yes, Alfred, love is too polite to look at the clock.

During the season of navigation of 1917, 3,199 vessels passed through the Canadian Sault St. Marie Canal, their tonnage being 3,182,960 tons. Of these vessels four-fifths were Canadian.

In 1917 there were in Canada 3,418 establishments producing creamery butter and factory cheese. The butter produced amounted to $7,494,366 lbs., having a value of $84,227,188. The factories produced 194,904,366 pounds of cheese, having a value of $41,170,563.

These markets provide an excellent complement to Canada, since being within the tropics they produce the articles we wish to buy and purchase the goods we have to sell. It is pointed out that the recent marked growth of exports from these countries reflect possibilities of great developments of natural resources, and that the present high prices prevailing for most kinds of tropical products will create a growing demand throughout the Caribbean for modern conveniences and luxuries supplied from abroad.

The Caribbean Sea is enclosed on the north and east by the islands of Cuba, Santo Domingo, Porto Rico, the Virgin Islands and the Islands of the French and British West Indies. These islands contain a population of approximately PENGUIN'S EGG HATCHER.

For some weeks three of the king penguins in the Scottish Zoological Park have been patiently protecting and at the same time providing the heat required for the incubation of an egg. In the king penguin the egg, instead of being laid in a nest and incubated in the usual way, rests from the first on the upper surface of the feet, and is so firmly pressed against the oliver legs by an apron-like fold of skin from the lower abdomen that even when the "sitting" bird is lifted bodily from the ground, the egg is seldom dropped.

After about fifty days appeared what seemed to be a healthy normal chick. Even if the mother penguin, with the help of her mate, fails to rear the chick it will not have lived in vain, for it will en able ornithologists to ascertain, amongst other things, whether in the king penguin, as in the ringed penguin, there is a vital as well as a juvenile coat of down. It may be mentioned that the king penguin lives under less trying conditions than the great emperor penguin, for while the latter lives near the Pole, the king never crosses the Antarctic Circle—two favorite haunts of the king penguin being South Georgia and the Macquarie Islands, about 600 miles southwest of New Zealand.

The varnish but puts it surface coating to strenuous tests and emphasizes what we can expect from varnish in our own homes.

That metal roof—what a life it leads if not given surface protection. Rust, leaks, stained ceilings, expense, can all be charged to neglect of the roof's surface. Save the surface.

Post-Mortem

THIS drawing is from a photograph of a veranda post from which the paint has been allowed to wear off. Is it not eloquent?

This was a good post not so very long ago but it has now gone beyond redemption. Think of the trivial cost of the paint to protect the post and keep it sound.

Every crack in this post started from the outside. Those deep checks were at the first little checks. Once the surface was broken down, the damage was under way.

How much is similar deterioration under way on your property? Do you dare to say? Have you examined it or just taken for granted that its condition is sound? Have you examined the siding of your building? Have you inspected the eave troughs and other metal trim? Have you seen the roof lately—have you really looked at it in years? Are you watching the floors, and woodwork, and furniture, inside the house?

to yourself and to those who will inherit your property to ask these questions and answer them.

All over this country property is rotting, rusting, crumbling, wearing, which a surface coating of paint and varnish would save.

The most needless, useless, senseless, and most aggravating loss in the world is loss due to neglect on our own part. Isn't it so?

Look at your property in a new way—closely. Save the surface and you save all.

Your thoughtful answer to these questions we do not ask that you give us; give them to yourself. You owe it

"The realization of the above objects will lead to employment during the Reconstruction Period and bears our entire approval."
