THE MARITIME SMOKE

Organizes List Varied Opinions On Party Policy

(By R. K. Carnegie) (Canadian Press Staff Writer) OTTAWA, June 27.—The ranks and file of the Conservative party have been asked to send to the National Convention committee suggestions for the party platform which will be decided at the three day gathering here beginning July 5.

government have claimed it is occupying most of the road on which the Conservative party is accustomed to travel and there isn't enough room on the right side for an out-and-out Tory party to get ahead.

It is a foregone conclusion there will be wide differences of opinion among the convention delegates on the question of veering to the left or the right. The radio speeches of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett before the last Dominion election were generally regarded as pointing somewhat to the left and many of the radically-minded Conservatives will be well pleased if the convention decided to go even further in that direction.

will be prepared to go in state direction of the individual which will be discussed at this convention and it will be argued that the production and marketing system cannot ultimately compete in world markets with countries where the state directs the system.
