The Style Review of 1913 --- Fall and Winter Wear The Master Designers of the World Represented

A Magnificent Display and its Significance

The Word Of the Moment is Millinery

WITH EVERY WOMAN, at least, who has seen the display of PROWSE HATS. They demand attention and compel admiration because these are different hats, charming in the hand, but a literal revelation of beauty when deftly poised on the head. That they reveal unsuspected beauties in the wearer as well as in themselves is not the least of their many commendations to favor. And that they are the last word in distinguished and distinguishing style is half the secret of their favor. Among them are the cream of new Hats from famous milliners of Paris, London and New York. But equally beautiful are our own adaptations of these French hats, not lacking one bit of their chic, and style in original ways. Tailored Hats, Dress Hats, Morning Hats and children's millinery a wide range of original and imported models from $2.60 to $15.00.

FROM ALL THE WORLD OVER where fashion reigns have come to us the superb gowns, wraps, waists, hats, dresses, coats and furs that will be shown to you here all next week in a wonderfully attractive way, and which will be the authoritative STYLE REVIEW OF THE YEAR. It is an exhibit which will please the most fastidious women of Charlottetown and vicinity and one which they may speak of with pride to their friends.

THE REVIEW THIS YEAR is a most remarkable one in many ways. It is the most elaborately comprehensive ever attempted in Charlottetown. In fact we can confidently say that never before has there been exhibited in the history of the ready-to-wear garment business, so diversified, wide embracing and complete a collection of

RESCUE CREWS BUSY

AT DAWSON, N. M. Dawson, N. M., Oct. 25.—Rescue crews today succeeded in working their way well into the fatal chamber No. 18, east on the high line, where two hundred miners are entombed in the Stag Canon Mine, and before nightfall they expected to be within a few feet of the jammed door connecting this chamber with the last on the east side high line. It is beyond this door that a large number of bodies are expected to be found, among which are those of General Superintendent Wm. McDermott and Henry F. McShane, the wealthy young New Yorker.

That the men will be found dead is the opinion of all concerned in the rescue work. Mine experts, including J. C. Roberts and his assistants of the United States mine rescue service, agree that the amount of black damp which penetrated the nineteenth chamber was sufficient to have killed all of the occupants instantly. But that so many of the miners, about two hundred, should have been in the one chamber, is the puzzling feature to the men, who are directing the rescue work.

From the conditions found in the adjoining chambers, it was believed that the centre of the explosion was in either the eighteenth or nineteenth chamber, and by this reasoning they are unable to see how the miners could have reached the chamber if there they are.

The rescue work has been systematized with a directing head at each phase of exploration. With the coming of the government rescue crews the miners were given new courage, and no difficulty was found in the organization of helmet crews, a task which had assumed desperate proportions when it was learned yesterday that two of the helmet men had been killed at their work. The opinion still exists that all of the bodies will not have been recovered before Sunday.
