"I think it does one more good to do the daily dozen just as soon as one jumps out of bed."
 "Nothing of the sort! Who can see you then?"

UP TO SCRATCH

"Your vacation in the country doesn't seem to have done you much good. You don't look up to scratch."
 "Don't, eh? That's all I'm doing—full of chiggers you know."

"These Women"
 BY MALCOLM DUART
 CHAPTER XXXII.

Morton leaped to his feet, angry. "Audrey!" he exclaimed. "I can't permit this! Nona is my guest!" The younger girl's eyes were fiery, and her fists clenched. "I don't care whose guest she is! She has been trying to make a fool out of me!"

"Audrey!" Morton thundered. "Go up to your room!"

She stamped her foot. "I won't go up! I won't go up until that woman is out of the house!"

Nona confusedly arose, and edged away from the table. "I'd better go," she said, her voice low.

Morton made a gesture at her. "Stay where you are, Nona," he said. "Audrey, go upstairs."

The girl, who had been speaking in a high key, dropped her voice, but repeated stubbornly: "I won't go upstairs until she goes out of here!"

Morton's face set sternly. He took Audrey by the elbow, and turning her, led her to the stairway. At the foot of the steps, he released her, and silently pointed upward. After a moment's irresolution, she sprang from him, and running up the stairs at the top of her speed, flung into her own room and slammed the door.

Morton returned to Nona. "Nona," he said, "I'm sorry. You've been kinder to that child than any other person would have been. I apologize for her."

There was a little smile at the corners of Nona's mouth. "I do not do anything for her—it was for you I left my job in the show, and rehearsed with Audrey. I suppose there won't be any more dancing raised in inquiry. Her eyes were raised in inquiry."

"I don't know," said Morton. "I'm not strong for her going to cabaret work. You know that. But I am mighty sorry that she should treat you this way, after all your kindness to her. Here. Wait a minute."

He went to his study, opened his desk, and drew out a check book. Hastily he filled in one of the blanks, signed it, and handed it to Nona.

"Get back that pin I gave you," he told her.

She made a little cry of protest. "But this is for the thirty-five hundred. I sold it for thirty-five hundred, and I have about twenty-five hundred left. Don't give me all this!"

He waved her away. "Keep the extra twenty-five hundred," he told her. "I owe you that—and I'm ashamed that I didn't think of it before."

She took her departure, lingering a moment with her hand in his as she left the room. When she had gone, Morton went upstairs, and rapped sharply at Audrey's door. There was no response, and he tried the knob. The door was latched inside. He rapped again.

"Go away!" came Audrey's voice from within.

He wrapped again, impatiently. There was a pause, and then the latch rattled inside, and the door opened. Morton stepped inside, shut the door behind him, and striding across the room, sat down on Audrey's couch.

"Audrey, you've asked me many times about your mother," he said abruptly.

The girl, standing by the door, stared at him. Plainly, it was not the opening that she had expected.

"Sit down there a moment," he ordered her.

Wondering, she obeyed.

"Audrey, your mother was a beautiful girl, as you are," he said. "She was self-centred, as you are. She was passionate, as you are, and getting to be. And Audrey, she wrecked her life."

"Audrey, are you going to wreck yours?"

She had been standing in the centre of the room as he began to speak, but as he proceeded, she shrank farther and farther from him, until now she was huddled in a chair against the opposite wall.

The defiance all was gone from her face, and there remained only a fixed look of fright. He regarded her a moment, his eyes cold.

"What do you mean by speaking to me as you spoke tonight, and as you treated her?" His eyes, twinkling, seemed to pierce hers with their gaze. "Nona has been kind to you. What are you going to do about it?"

With a despairing wail, the girl bowed her head upon her folded arms, and wept. The big sob shook her body. Morton sat impassive, waiting.

At last she raised her tear-stained face. "You're so mean to me!" she cried.

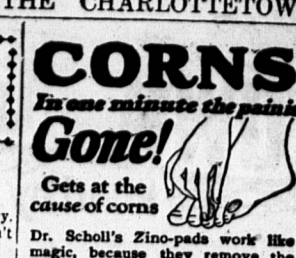

He did not reply. Rising deliberately, he walked across the room, passing within an arm's length of her, opened the door, and went out. The latch clicked and he was gone.

An hour later there came a tap at Morton's study door. He was inside, at his desk, writing.

"Come in," he said, shortly.

A little figure, in quilted dressing gown, crept into the room. It was Audrey.

Mt. Stewart Items

The new mown hay sends all its fragrance from the fields I used to roam. Hay is now in full swing, and the weather is favorable too, so the farmers are in the best of humor.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Court, of Hunter River, are spending some time at Mrs. Court's former home here.

Mr. Albert Jay and family, Borden, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Jay, this week.

Mrs. Russell Clark and sons, Keir and Sterling, left for Nova Scotia Monday, the 26th, where they intend spending a few days.

The many friends of Mr. Merton Jardine, Head of Hillsboro, were surprised and pleased to see him at the church services here Sunday evening. Mr. Jardine has been confined to home several doctors treating him during that time. Most of them kept him confined to home and mostly in bed, but under the skillful care of Dr. A. B. Martin, who is now attending him he is being able to get out and is much improved in many ways.

Some writing home from the "Bean City" and surrounding towns report the weather very warm. Some of the factories having to shut down, and on one day the thermometer did not deliver. The mercury reached 101 (officially) in the shade. So we have no reason yet for complaint.

On Tuesday last Messrs. Myers and Messervy paid a visit to Mt. Stewart electors.

A baseball game of more than usual interest was played Thursday afternoon, the 22nd, on the Souris diamond when the Mt. Stewart Tigers met the Souris Stars in a challenge game. Although the Souris team were on their own, they proved too heavy for them, winning a victory of ten to six. And this was no easy task, as the Stars certainly know how to play ball, but the Tigers were a small bit their superiors in this case.

We learn that Mrs. A. M. Smith has leased a tenement from Mr. H. Feehan, general merchant, and intends moving in shortly. One of her sons, Fred, is a freeman on the C.N.R. So this being a junction will make it quite convenient for both.

We also learn that Mrs. Elias Coffin and Mrs. James Partridge have leased some rooms from Mrs. Kimble Coffin, where they intend residing. Both ladies formerly lived here, but have been away for a number of years.

Miss Marion McMillan, Charlottetown, is spending some time here the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Jay.

Gleanings From Tryon And Vicinity

Warren Lord, Esq., celebrated his 83rd birthday on Friday last. A large number of his friends met at his home and congratulated him upon the event. He is hale and hearty, sleeps and eats well, and is enjoying the evening tide of life. He is interested in everything which pertains to the welfare of the community.

The schooner Edward S. Falt, Capt. Ferguson, finished loading a cargo of hay and oats on Friday at Victoria, and sailed Saturday for Sydney. The cargo is owned by E. Boswell, and is the second he has sent forward this month.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Doyle, of Malden, Mass., is the guest of Mrs. Huntley's aunt, Mrs. Colin Donald, Sea View.

Miss Minnie A. Wright, Summerside, Miss Mary E. McNutt, Charlottetown, and Mr. John Mulrhead, Summerside, motored to Malpeque with friends in Sea View and Malpeque.

Miss Ruth Davison, of Kensington, was the guest for several days of Miss Grace Riley, Baltic.

Mrs. John Huntley and son, of Malden, Mass., is the guest of Mrs. Huntley's aunt, Mrs. Colin Donald, Sea View.

Miss Minnie Owen, Boston, is spending her holiday with her brother, Mr. Burleigh Owen.

Miss Norman McGowan, Winkipeg, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm McGowan.

Dr. Clarence McKinnon, Halifax, Judge and Mrs. McQuarrie, Summerside, Mrs. Cameron and Mrs. C. A. McPhail, of Charlottetown, were recent visitors to Malpeque.

Mrs. Fred Bennet has returned to her home in Stanley, after spending a week with relatives and friends here.

Mr. Clyde Auld, Toronto, was the guest for several days of Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Keir.

The program at the annual thank-offering of the Malpeque and Baltic auxiliaries was more than ordinarily appreciated by the representative always adds very materially to any meeting, was of a very special nature, and richly deserved the words of appreciation which were spoken by the pastor, Rev. A. N. Gillis. The solos, "One Sweety Solemn Thought," by Miss Jennie Brown, and "How Lovely are Thy Dwellings," by Miss McMurdo, and the quartette "Wandering Child Come Home," by Messrs. Mountain, Campbell, George and Harry Brown, well rendered with great expression and sweetness. Mrs. Jas. A. Campbell was the accompanist and instrumental selections were all of a high order. Dr. Saint, of Kensington United Church, was accorded a splendid welcome on his first visit to Malpeque, and his thoughtful and practical address was enjoyed by all. Refreshments were served to the Kensington friends who had contributed so willingly and efficiently towards the success of the program.

Malpeque

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wright, Bedouque, and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Howatt, Augustine Cove, were guests of Mrs. Wright's sister, Mrs. H. A. Stewart, Hamilton, on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ross, their daughters, the Misses Jean, Ruth and Margaret, and Mr. Stewart, all of Charlottetown, spent Sunday with friends in Sea View and Malpeque.

Miss Ruth Davison, of Kensington, was the guest for several days of Miss Grace Riley, Baltic.

Mrs. John Huntley and son, of Malden, Mass., is the guest of Mrs. Huntley's aunt, Mrs. Colin Donald, Sea View.

WEARY MEN AND WEARY HORSES RENEW FIGHT

EDMONTON, July 29. — Weary men and weary horses, stung to renewed activity by news of another fire, have been battling in the White Court area for the past three weeks, through the almost impenetrable wilderness in an effort to cope with the new outbreak, states Col. R. H. Palmist, Chief Fire Ranger, who has just been notified by wire from Halkias that another party is being taken in to take care of the east border of the Lesser Slave forest reserve.

Reverend B. C. July 29. — The forest fire near Donald, B. C., is reported to be spreading rapidly in a southwesterly direction, and all efforts to bring the fire under control have failed. The new fire at Lea Choi is still burning and is causing grave apprehension.
