Strawberries Ripe!

Jams and jellies made of strawberries, now in season, suggested innumerable delicious combinations. Farsighted housewives who have been putting up strawberry jams and jellies now against next winter's raids on the cupboard, find themselves tempted to use some of their store right away when they consider these luscious dishes. Imagine strawberry mousse, strawberry sundae, home-made strawberry ice cream old-fashioned jelly roll, strawberry turnovers, Polish tartlets! Think how tempting a jelly omelet would be at breakfast, how lovely a brilliant garnish on a meat dish.

Here are some recipes for making the jams and jellies, and for their use. Wise housewives eliminate the garbage in making jellies from fresh strawberries by the short-bill method, using bottled pectin.

Sliced Strawberry Jam

4½ cups (2 lbs.) prepared fruit.
7 cups (3 lbs.) sugar
½ cup bottled pectin

Cut about 2 quarts fully ripe berries in halves lengthwise; large berries in quarters.

Measure sugar and prepared fruit into large kettle, mix well and bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard 3 minutes. Remove from fire and stir in pectin. Then stir and skim by turns for just 5 minutes to cool slightly, to prevent floating fruit. Pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once. Makes about 10 eight-ounce glasses.

Berry and Pineapple Jelly

4 cups (2 lbs.) juice
7½ cups (3½ lbs.) sugar
1 bottle pectin.

Cut or grind 1 medium fully-ripe pineapple and 1½ quarts fully-ripe strawberries. Place fruits in jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice.

Measure sugar and juice into large saucepan and mix. Bring to a boil over hottest fire and at once add pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard 1-2 minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once. Makes about 11 eight-ounce glasses.

Strawberry Mousse

1 cup strawberry jelly or jam
1 egg white, unbeaten
Dash of salt
4 tablespoons milk
3-4 cup cream

Beat jelly until soft and smooth. Combine egg white, salt, milk and cream, and beat with rotary egg-beater until stiff. Add jelly and mix well. Turn into mould. Cover with waxed paper, press cover tightly down over paper, and pack in equal parts of ice and salt. Let stand 4 hours or longer before serving. Makes 1 quart mousse.

Strawberry Ice Cream

1½ cups strawberry jelly or jam

1 cup milk
½ cup cream
Fit together parts of freezer, and pack, using 8 quarts finely crushed ice to 1 part salt. Put jelly or jam into freezer, add milk and cream, and freeze at once. When stiff, remove dasher, cover tightly, and re-pack using 4 parts finely crushed ice to 1 part salt. Makes 1-2 pints ice cream.

JELLY ROLL

3-4 cup sifted cake flour
3-4 teaspoon baking powder
1-4 teaspoon salt
4 eggs
3-4 cup sifted sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup strawberry jelly.
Sift flour once and measure. Combine baking powder, salt and eggs in bowl. Place over smaller bowl of hot water and beat with rotary egg beater, adding sugar gradually until mixture becomes thick and light-colored. Remove bowl from over hot water. Fold in flour and vanilla. Turn into pan 15 x 10 inches, lined with greased paper, and bake in hot oven (400 degrees Fahrenheit) 13 minutes. Turn from pan at once onto cloth covered with confectioners' sugar. Remove paper, quickly cut off crisp edges of cake, spread with jelly and roll. Wrap in cloth and cool on rack. Serves 12.

Strawberry Custard

1 cup strawberry jam
3 tablespoons sugar
3 egg yolks, slightly beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 dozen lady fingers, split
Pinch of salt
2 cups milk, scalded.

Beat jam with fork until softened and spread on split lady fingers arrange in layers, jam-side up, in flat-bottomed dish. Add sugar and salt to egg yolks. Pour a small amount of milk over egg mixture, stirring well. Add to remaining milk in double boiler and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Remove from fire, add vanilla, and cool. Pour over lady fingers and chill thoroughly. Before serving, pile sweetened whipped cream on top of pudding. Serves 6.

If you like jam in the old-fashioned way:

Here is a novel sandwich idea, which is sure to surprise and delight your guests!

Cut fresh sandwich bread in very thin slices the long way of the loaf. The entire slice is spread with soft butter and strawberry jam. The strip of bread is rolled tightly, starting at the end. Wrap the roll in a damp cloth. When ready to serve cut the roll crosswise into very thin slices.

For The Cook

DREAM CAKE

1½ packages lemon gelatin.
3 cups boiling water.
8 maraschino cherries.
4 or 5 slices canned pineapple.
Whipped cream.
1 thin layer sponge cake.

Dissolve the lemon gelatin in the hot water and pour into a layer cake pan, the same size as the one used for baking the sponge cake. A cake pan at least one inch deep is most suitable.

When it is cool and starts to congeal, arrange the slices of pineapple in the gelatin and place the maraschino cherries in the centre of and around the slices. When the gelatin has hardened, and just before serving, unmold it on the sponge cake layer. Decorate with whipped cream and slice at the table.

JAUNTY SPORTS TYPE

Plaits are again in the daytim mood! And how charmingly youthful and slenderizing they are! You'll adore this model in its slim straight styling—and with darling cap sleeves. The cross-over effect of the yoked bodice is smart. It offers interesting theme for contrast.

The original in white shantung was strikingly effective with red buttons and matching red patent leather belt.

And here it is to copy exactly, for Style No. 3051 may be had in sizes 16, 18 years, 36, 38, and 40 inches bust. For the medium size, 3½ yards of 39-inch material is sufficient.

And how surprisingly simple it is to make it! The bodice is attached to the skirt; merely pretends a hip yoke. It is cleverly moulded to the figure below the waistline. The inset yoke is stitched to the bodice following perforations for same. The four-piece skirt is pressed into plaits and attached to the bodice, and it's ready to wear. The cap sleeves may be omitted if desired as shown in miniature back view.

Pale blue angora cotton mesh is stunning for active sports and morning resort wear.

Fiat washable crepe silk in white or pastel shade as blue, pink, green or yellow is excellent for this model. The belt may be of self-fabric with several rows of stitching and fastened with neat white or matching coloured buckle.

Wool jersey, shirting silk, linen, plaided gingham, shantung, polka-dotted batiste, eyellet linen, wool crepe and novelty pique are suitable, snappy and serviceable for general day occasions for summer.

Agree With U.S. Re Phil Scott

LONDON, July 6.—British boxing critics now admit that United States scries are correct in their estimates of Phil Scott's enervated fighting ability.

Following the defeat of Scott in less than three rounds at Miami by Jack Sharkey various British newspapers commented on the fight with a single word—"robbed."

Newspapers lamented the description of the Scott-Sharkey fight written by American scribes. They asserted that such comments were unfair. A number of leading articles stated that Scott should immediately be named the real heavy-weight champion.

The attitude began to diminish following the neat, effective and thoroughly convincing lacing Young Stribling gave Phil Scott at Wimbledon.

The recent fiasco at Leicester resulted in a landslide of British denunciation of Scott. When Larry Gains, the colored Canadian, stopped Scott in less than two rounds, British writers turned loose a flow of stigmatizing comments seldom equalled in modern journalism.

"I Believe," Says One Intelligent Man, "That Nothing Would do More to Stabilize Marriage Than to Pass a Law to Prohibit Divorce During the First Five Years of Marriage?"

The other day we were discussing the fact that one marriage in six in this country goes on the rocks, and a very intelligent and thoughtful man suggested the best remedy for this tragic condition of affairs was to make marriage a five-year instead of a life contract. "I believe," he said, "that nothing would do more to stabilize marriage than to pass a law to prohibit divorce during the first five years of marriage. That would make getting married a concrete business proposition instead of leaving it in the glittering sentimentalities class as it is now. If young people knew that when they signed the marriage register they were putting their names to an ironclad contract that they could not possibly break for five years it would make them pause and think and prevent many a foolish and ill-advised marriage."

"Nobody can deny that nowadays boys and girls give less serious thought to selecting their wives and husbands than they do to picking out an automobile or a new hat, for in the case of the automobile they would, at least, consider the make and type of car and what horsepower engine it had and whether they wanted to use it as a truck or a sport car, and in the case of the hat they would consider its suitability and whether it harmonized with their own personality and fired their fancies."

"But they will pick out their life partners without giving a single serious thought to the background and character and habits of the men and women they are marrying or whether they are adapted to each other or not or even whether they care enough for each other to endure a lifetime of each other's society. A boy will marry a girl because she is pretty or cute or because he likes the way she does her hair, and a girl will marry a boy because he is a peachy dancer or a good speeder or has a keen line, and the reason they marry thus casually is because the idea is in the back of their minds that if they don't like it they won't have to stick it."

"Nothing is commoner than to hear young people in talking of marriage say, 'Oh, well, I'm a sport. I'll try anything once,' and even while they are solemnly swearing at the altar to take each other for better or worse until death do them part they are privately thanking heaven that divorce is easy and has become respectable and a common thing in our best circles."

"But suppose these youngsters, who so blithely run off and get married after a whoopee party or on a dare, knew that they had to stick to their bargain for five long years, no matter what happened, don't you think that they would reflect a little about what they were going to do? I'll say they would. It is one thing to promise to cleave to Maud or Algernon for a lifetime, knowing that you can get rid of him or her any minute when you lose your taste for him or her or his or her society falls upon you and quite another thing to sign a contract that you can't break or wiggle out of, to put up with the faults and foibles and endure the conversation of Maud and Algernon for 1825 consecutive long days that may seem longer."

"No, I can see nothing that would do more to prevent indiscriminate and unconsidered marriages than a cold, chilled-steel contract that would hold men and women to their bargain for five years and prevent them from marrying any one else."

"Then the five-year contract would give the man and woman who entered into it time to try their marriage out and find out whether they could make a success or it or not if they really put their hearts and their backs into it. It would give them a chance to adapt themselves to each other, and that is something that can't be done in a few months. It is a slow process that requires years."

"The trouble with most young married people is that they don't give marriage a fair show. They throw up their hands and quit just as soon as they fail to find it all their romantic dreams had painted."

"If they went into any other job, law, medicine, writing, the grocery trade, anything, they would expect to work their way up and to be middle-aged before they were getting good salaries or drawing down heavy dividends, but they are not willing to work and wait for happiness in marriage. It must be all plugh from the beginning or they cry out that it is a failure and go into bankruptcy."

"Some of the most successful men in the world starve along for years at the beginning of their careers. Some of the biggest businesses were nursed along through years in which they nearly perished of anemia. And many a marriage that ends in failure could be turned into a great success if only the man and woman had to stick together for five years and had to make a definite effort to get along with each other and make the best of each other instead of being free to run to the divorce court as soon as they had their first spat or discovered that they were married to human beings instead of angels and movie heroes."

"And finally," said the man, "still another good point in favor of the five-year marriage contract is that it would put a time limit on the sufferings of the unhappy married and enable them to endure it with fortitude. We can stand anything if we know it is going to end, and often we learn to like the thing that was at first distasteful, but that we had to endure. And I have an idea that what is true of spinach and coffee without sugar would often be true of husbands and wives and that after having stood each other for five years they would find that they had acquired a taste for each other."

Such was this man's theory of a limited marriage contract. What say you?

WITH ALMA ARCHER

If you want just one more thing to make ga-ga over this summer, I suggest your clamping on to a Schiaparelli overall of navy knitted wool featuring ribbing from the hips up. Of course, the pants are full and wide, but the entire top, being ribbed, fits like the eyes at the keyhole. If one's figure happens to be a beauty, this is the ideal opportunity of going arty.

And while you're making this last summer purchase, how about stopping by at a tenny-cent store and buying a pair of those amusing beach sandals cut out of old inner tubes!

Paris Styles

PARIS, July 7.—(U. P.)—Sleeves are interesting and important enough to write volumes about these days. Every couturier not only has his, or her, own ideas about them, but the word idea about them, but the word idea is in the plural where all of them are concerned. We can't take them all under consideration in one interview, but we can go down the line with several at least.

They have no one length, or type this summer—that is certain. The long and the short of it according to Paou, goes something like this: Printed silk or crepe from the elbow to the cuff, fitting the arm rather snugly. Then just at the elbow a little "skirt" is attached by means of tiny tucks all the way around. The fullness in the tucking is released after an inch and the ruffle falls to midway between the elbow and the wrist. His short sleeve is simplicity itself. It strikes the arm when finished halfway between the shoulder and the elbow and has only a three inch cuff put on very much like a man's shirt cuff, but instead of cuff links the ends that come together are made into tiny plaits.

Maggy Rouff has made a "dancing" sleeve that is delightful. It has a run of six parallel tucks just above the elbow and from there on the under side it falls in cascades almost to the wrist. At the inside of the elbow it is short and lined with white. The white extends further than the outer layer and when the arms are lifted in dancing the effect is everything to be desired.

Goupy veers toward the old fashioned with adorable little puff sleeves that have tiny bows, or clusters of flowers just under the pounce at the outer side of the arm. These with oval or bateau neckline are irresistible in their youthfulness.

SPARROWS CLEAN RADIATORS

ROCHESTER, N.Y., July 5.—(U. P.)—At last the sparrow, generally regarded as a pest, is useful to mankind. Motorists who dislike to see the front of their radiators strewn with butterflies, moths and fleas, need worry no more, for the sparrow loves such delicacies. Two of them were seen recently perched on a radiator, pecking away at the dead insects.

BROTHERS MEET AFTER 44 YEARS

PODT CREDIT, July 7.—Returning from a motor trip through the United States, Kenneth Skinner, well-known farmer on the Slave Bank Road, today related a unique experience. When going through Southern Virginia, Mr. Skinner's attention was arrested by some particularly fine shrubbery which lined a farm garden. Stepping out from his car to examine it closer, the owner of the farm soon appeared, and both were for some time discussing horticulture. The conversation ended with the farmer inviting Mr. Skinner to come in and have a cup of coffee. Chattering at the table, both were astounded when they discovered that they were brothers, who had not met in 44 years, and neither knew the whereabouts of the other.

Bon Ami keeps white enamel sparkling white—looking always new because it polishes as it cleans. And there's not a scratch in forty 'leven carloads. This snowy-white household helper is kind to your hands, too—it never reddens or roughens them.
