Liberals, Conservatives To Field Full Teams In Nfld.

By Canadian Press Staff Writer ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., May 16 — (CP) — There is almost certain to be a full slate of Liberal and Progressive Conservative candidates for Newfoundlanders to choose from in their first provincial election May 27.

There are 28 seats and 25 "districts." Dual districts are Harbor Main-Bell Island, chiefly noted for iron-producing, St. John's East and St. John's West.

Progressive Conservatives celebrated the arrival of national leader George Drew here today by announcing their completed slate of candidates for insular Newfoundland. A candidate for Labrador, created as a separate district under the terms of union with Canada, will be announced later.

The election in Labrador, still in old man winter's icy grip, has been deferred to July 25 and nomination day to July 15. Insular Newfoundland's nomination day is next Tuesday.

The Liberals already have announced their lineup to contest all seats, including Labrador—from far North Cape Chidley to Cape Race in the south, and from Cape Ray in the west to Pouch Cove in the East.

Premier Smallwood, now on a 200-speech campaign tour of the Island, will contest the district of Bonavista north against James M. Way.

Mr. Way replaces Wilson Humphries, first named to contest the seat until he was found ineligible under the residence requirements of the Election Act.

The C.C.F. is not entering the fight. Four Labor officials are in the front under the banner of the Progressive Conservatives.

Criticism of the financial terms of union is a major plank in the Progressive Conservative platform. Mr. Drew and Mr. Mews, provincial leader of the party, have said repeatedly that the tax-provisions of the agreement would be reviewed should their party take power.

Because Mr. Smallwood was deputed to the movement for confederation, he has become a symbol in that respect. His campaign is based to a large extent on the achievements of the Liberal Government in Canada in such things as "baby bonus" and old age pensions.

Newfoundlanders are showing great interest in the election campaign—their first in 17 years.

France Develops Five-year Scheme To Lure Tourists

By Odette Laguerre

PARIS, May 16 — (Reuters) — The April re-opening of the famous Longchamp race course in the Bois de Boulogne marked the beginning of what is expected to be France's most brilliant tourist season since the war.

Several hundred thousand holiday visitors started arriving around Easter, and the movement will get into full swing by June. The waiving of United States visas for France and the easing of currency are expected here to make this a boom year.

Last year 1,500,000 travellers came to France, including 100,000 from the United States and 300,000 from Britain, according to statistics issued by the tourist bureau.

This figure is expected to be greatly exceeded this year. Under the Monnet 5-year plan, France hopes to increase her foreign tourists to 3,000,000 by 1952.

Both the Monnet plan and the Economic co-operation Administration authorities have given considerable thought to the development of tourism in France and other European countries. Both consider this to be one of the most important elements in the stabilization of the European commercial balance sheet.

Theodore Pozzy, chief of the economic co-operation travel development section, forecast recently that between 250,000 and 300,000 visitors would come to Europe from America this year. He stressed that a number of new liners would be available for that 1949 traffic, including the French White Star Line's 34,000-ton Caronia and the Franconia, on the North Atlantic route; the Home Line's Italia and Andania, and American Export Line's La Guardia and Four Aces in the Mediterranean.

In addition, an undetermined number of Boeing strato-cruisers are scheduled to go into service between France and America in the late summer or early fall.

Air Travel Grows

Air France is also gradually increasing its traffic between France and Britain. A new thrice-weekly service is already in operation between Paris and Manchester via Birmingham and another will be inaugurated this summer to link Paris and Belfast via Glasgow.

On the Paris-London line, passages are to be increased to five a day, increasing in frequency with the demand until at the peak travel period, French and British lines together will be running no less than 16 daily flights in each direction.

After joining nine other Marshall aid countries in suppressing the visa formality for American visitors, France is launching a strong campaign to attract tourists to the lesser known regions of the country and to encourage tourists to come all the year round.

Paris and the Riviera coast continue to be the main attraction for American and British visitors alike, but great efforts are being made to boost the less reputed resorts.

While Brittany, the Savoy Alps and the Chateaux Country in the Loire Valley draw large quotas of tourists, other equally beautiful regions are neglected.

Hotel accommodation in France, very bad at the time of the liberation, is now among the best in Europe, tourist authorities here consider. Few new hotels have been built; but the old ones have been refitted and modernized.

Worried Little Boy Finds His Mother

PITTSBURGH, May 16 — (CP) — Andy Tompos Jr. has found his mother.

The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, to whom Andy directed his wistful plea for a mother because "everybody who has a mother has good luck," today wrote a happy ending to the tale.

Andy's desire to find his mother as "Easter present" came to light Palm Sunday. He was disappointed on Easter, but the eve of Mother's Day finds the 10-year-old's dream belatedly come true.

The newspaper's story of Andy's reunion with his mother bore no date line. Where she lives, what her new married name is, will remain untold. It will be easier that way for Andy to begin his new life.

But Andy not only has a mother now, but a father and a 2 1/2-year-old brother. The little boy who worried what would become of him when his aged grandparents die doesn't have to worry any more.

His mother disappeared five years ago. Andy had been living with the grandparents since. His father had vanished before he was born.

"I made a mistake by going away," his 27-year-old mother said. "I was just young and crazy, I guess. Both sides have suffered. Maybe we can be happy now."

His mother said she saw Andy's plea in a three-week-old newspaper given to her by a neighbor. "It seemed like steam rollers were bumping on my head," she said. "I just went limp all over. I've never forgotten the boy. I never could."

Irish Bill Approved In British House

LONDON, May 14 — (CP) — The House of Commons tonight approved the government's Ireland Bill which recognizes the secession from the Commonwealth of the Irish republic.

The bill also guarantees that Northern Ireland may remain in the United Kingdom and the Commonwealth until her parliament votes otherwise.

The House defeated an amendment calling for rejection of the measure by 317 votes to 12. The amendment was moved by John Beattie, Northern Ireland Labor member.

The bill then was read a second time — agreed to in principle — without a division.

Institute Needed To Cure Addicts

VICTORIA, May 16 — (CP) — Chief Justice Gordon Sison of British Columbia believes a central institution for treatment of sexual perverts and narcotic addicts is needed in Canada.

Addressing the Western Conference on Social Work here, he said such an institution would "bring immeasurable relief to those of us who are forced by present laws to send hundreds of young men and women — narcotic addicts — to prison."

"After intelligent and careful screening of narcotic addicts, and perhaps others, those capable of being returned to a normal way of living could be sent for treatment."

"It should be staffed with doctors, psychologists, sociologists and psychiatrists, with an adequate staff of after-hour workers... The institution would more than pay its own way."

The chief justice said nearly 100 criminal appeals came before the Appeal Court in the course of a year.

"In the case of perverts and narcotic addicts, I am never satisfied when upholding jail sentences, which are, in most part, based upon what has been described as a 'hard system of punishment'."
