Yesterday the Guardian had the pleasure of receiving a visit from two of the delegates, Mr. F. Evans of the University of Saskatchewan, Economics Department, and Miss M. Borgen, College of Law, University of Saskatchewan. Other delegates are visiting the other Maritime Provinces. The group spent a week in Quebec where they were sponsored by the Board of Trade, the Kiwanis Club, and the I. O. D. E. and received encouraging support from Premier Taschereau and the Quebec Government. The graduates visiting this Province are delighted with the reception so far accorded them.

The above query is being asked wherever and whenever this issue comes to a pro and con conflict. A practical answer was furnished by the Unemployed Married Men's Association of Calgary, Alberta when its members urged the Council of that western city to close a beer parlors and Government liquor vendor stores until the depression is over, pointing out very plainly the working of liquor's control in the following declaration: "Beer parlors and vendors are taking away money which might otherwise be put into food and clothing by the general public."

Wet propaganda has as a target "illegal bad whiskey." A press despatch from New York at the Christmas holiday time, stated: "Because of the widespread evidence of poisoned liquor, and the unusually large numbers of deaths, Police Commissioner M.—tonight ordered closer watch on all speakeasies." But a Toronto incident the same week is a tale of good old alcohol. A young man went to a government store and purchased legally a bottle of wine. He drank it and then climbed a 40-foot Hydro tower and was electrocuted.

Another Canadian, who, when sober was kind and upright, but whom, evidently, a drink turned into a demonic criminal, forged $3,000 and more from a Canadian railway, being a ticket agent. At his trial a former clergyman of the prisoner's pleaded: "This man was one of my flock in—for fifteen years, and I know his record as an honest and upright person.
