WEDNESDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 28, 1904.

THE EXHIBITION.

The Exhibition opened most auspiciously yesterday afternoon. The weather was perfect—bright and warm. So much depends upon the weather in making the success of an exhibition! In favorable weather our densely populated Island can always be counted upon to supply a crowd of visitors at the great annual fair.

Many attend to match the products of their toil and skill, their stock, field, dairy and orchard products with other eager competitors. Others attend to view with pardonable pride the various products of our Island home. There are many others who go to see the crowd, to meet old friends from various parts, to exchange greetings and inquiries for mutual welfare.

A crowd draws a crowd. Fair weather supplies a prime requisite to that end, a success increased enjoyment to all attendees to the show. May the success in a few days be as fair as yesterday!

The past season has not been a propitious one for our Island farmer. Dry weather hindered the growth of field crops and of pastures, the latter so important to our great dairying industry. It had been thought this cause might have had an injurious effect upon the Exhibition, both as regards the number of exhibits and the articles displayed. But a hasty survey of the contents of the main building and stock yards conveys the impression that this is still a land of plenty, yielding its fruits in abundance of "seed to the sower and bread to the eater." The drawback of the dry season is not apparent to the casual observer. However it may be to the critical one.

And the entries have overflowed, showing unabated interest, keen and cheerful competition, an undaunted spirit among our producers, and a pardonable pride in the agricultural wealth of our fair Province. It is a good show, well worthy to be visited again and again by people of the town and country, from home and from abroad.

We have several letters awaiting space for publication. Correspondents will please make their favors brief, at least until the Exhibition is over.

A Detroit newspaper tells that during his recent visit to the Northwest Lord Minto found the Doukobors quite willing to accept him as the Messiah.

That so vigorous a fighter as the Japanese soldier is proved to be should take with him to the war a fan, a teakettle and a fishing rod and line as part of his equipment reads strangely at this distance. But a correspondent of the New York Times tells that such is the fact.

It is now given out that the original project of a Cape to Cairo railway has been for the time abandoned. Some long-suffering schemes will be utilized in making connection between the Sudan and Abyssinia. The original idea may be resumed after the fixed rail and water routes are put in operation.

The advance of the Japanese upon Mukden like that upon Liao Yang is conducted with caution. We think the progress slow but it has hitherto been sure. Eight months ago when the war was about to begin practically everyone would have said that if the Japanese succeeded in taking the Manchurian capital it would be at the end of at least a year or two. It has been a wonderfully successful campaign which pleases the Japanese forces in a position under the walls of Mukden at this date.

Sir William Macdonald is establishing an experimental farm and college at St. Albans, near Montreal, for the training of the Protestant young men of Quebec, in agricultural pursuits. He has expended already about $150,000 for land and architects are now at work on the plans for the buildings which will be erected early next spring. There is a rumor, not yet confirmed, that Prof. Robertson of the Government Experimental Farm at Ottawa will be engaged at a salary of $7,000 a year as head of the new institution.

It is pitiable to see a great political party, the Liberal party of Ontario, holding on to office by the mere casting vote of the Speaker. Such is the position of the Ross Government to-day. For many years the party had been nobly led and had noble aims and a most useful career. As led by Edward Blake and Oliver Mowat, both high-minded and honorable statesmen, it gave to Ontario a sound, honest, progressive and economical administration of public affairs such as had not been exercised in any Province of the Empire. Since the days of Mowat there has been a constant decline in the character and methods of the administration. It is now sinking out of sight ingloriously mired in corruption. It is dying with tarnished honor. All is lost save office and that cannot be long retained. Doubtless the majority of the Liberal electorate is still sound at heart and greatly grieved at the corrupt and corrupting alliances which are dragging the party to perdition. There is nothing the party needs so much as a term in the cold shades of opposition long enough to effect its purification.

WELCOME

To every visitor to the Exhibition. We are glad you are here. The "Town is Yours" is our store. You cannot wear out your welcome and make Paton's store your home.

We solicit your patronage, but we ask for your favors only to the extent that we deserve them.

Not alone that our store was never more crowded with beautiful new goods than at the present, but our manufacturers have vied with each other in the production of exquisite fabrics, and the artists and designers have evolved rich and tasteful results, that the artistic showing of Novelties, Millinery, Furnishings, White Wear, Furniture, Carpets, Upholstery, Dress Goods, Furs and Mantles, is a well spring of pleasure to all visitors. But our small profit system or trade-winning methods are appreciated by all who deal here and will be recognized by you. Success urges us on to please. We have added three floors covering 6,000 feet of new floor space making our store the largest retail store in P. E. BUYING A MOUNTAIN.

Troubles of Owning an Estate Away Up in the Air.

On Wednesday, July 16, 1889, Snowdon, the highest mountain peak in Wales, and of all South Britain, rising to a height of 3,560 feet above the level of the sea's surface, was sold by auction in London. It was purchased by Sir William Watkin, created a baronet in 1880—formerly chairman of the South-Eastern Railway Company, and called "the Railway King," representative in the House of Commons at various times of Yarmouth, Stockport, and Hythe, and who died on April 18, 1901, at 80 years of age, and was succeeded in his title by his son, the present Sir Alfred Mellor Watkin. Sir Edward possessed, as one of his residences a house in Baddegart, by the southern foot of the mountain, whence is one of the ways of ascending; this dwelling being called "The Chalet," which is a French word signifying "cottage." At the auction the first bid was one of £2,000; but the mountain was finally knocked down for $5,750. Having come into possession of such an owner, a rack-and-pinion railway was laid down by about 1897, the name being applied to one on which there are cogs, teeth on the wheels which are caught by bars crossing the lines at right angles, the train being thereby prevented from slipping back downwards, as otherwise it naturally would by the law of gravity. Such a railway is of extra expense in construction, this one costing £11,550 a mile, but has been far exceeded in this respect on such heights as the Alps. The Snowdon line is four and three-quarter miles in length, and starts from Llanberis, at the north-west foot of the mountain, and terminates at an hotel that crowns the top.

The Deaths of Home Fests.
The death of any one is affecting, but that of poets seems more so. Campbell on his death-bed said to his niece, "Come let us sing praise to Christ!" and pointing to the bedside, he added, "Sit here." "Shall I pray for you?" she said. "Oh, yes," he replied, "let us pray for each other." The next day at a moment when he appeared to be sleeping heavily, his lips suddenly moved, and he said, "We shall meet to-morrow," naming a long-departed friend; and on the next day he expired without a struggle.

Mrs. Browning died in Florence, in the house of the Casa Guidi Windows, and she sleeps in the English burial-ground without the walls of the city. So long a sufferer, her fatal illness was but a week's duration. The "beloved" sank to rest with her beloved ones around her. Her last words, as her eyes opened into the light, were, "It is beautiful."

During Wordsworth's last illness, his wife said to him, very gently, "William, you are going to Dora," (a favorite daughter). He made no reply at the time, and the words seemed to have passed unheeded. More than twenty-four hours afterwards, as one of his nieces was drawing aside the curtain of his chamber, and then, as if awakening from a quiet sleep, he said, "Oh, thank Dora!" then quietly breathed his last.
