The Markets

JUNE 29—A stronger feeling prevailed in the local market for live hogs at the opening and some sales of selected lots were made as high as $14.50 per 100 lbs. weighed off cars, but owing to supplies being larger than was generally expected packers held off from operating, which resulted in the market weakening and prices declined 15c to $1 per 100 lbs. from the above and closed with sales of selects at $12.50 to $13.75. The market for dressed hogs was steady with a small trade passing in city abattoirs. Fresh-killed stock at $20 to $21 per 100 lbs.

The trade in smoked meats was active, there being a good demand from local and country buyers for supplies, and prices were unchanged with sales of 8 to 10 lb. hams at 35c to 38c, per lb., 10 to 15 lbs. 30c to 32c, while Windsor selected at 33c to 35c, and 18 to 25 lbs. at 32c to 35c, and breakfast grades at 32c to 35c, per lb. The demand for trimmed Jutland, Admiral Sir John Jellicoe in control of one part of the fleet; while Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty commanded the other part. There was considerable loss on each side. The British losing three cruisers and several smaller ships. As a result of the battle the German fleet withdrew to its own base which it never afterwards left. The Germans were convinced that the British navy was invincible.

By the terms of the Armistices Germany was forced to surrender all her submarines and the greater part of her fleet.

We shall never be able to repay the debt of gratitude which we owe to the British navy. It is to it we owe our safety and our freedom of today.

THE PART PLAYED BY THE BRITISH NAVY DURING THE WORLD WAR

It has always been true that in a war the nation possessing the greatest naval power is likely to win. This was splendidly illustrated during the late World War, when the British Navy won almost every battle. England knew from the beginning that to win the war, she must have a navy superior to that of Germany. When the war broke out the German navy was the second greatest in the world. The building of this navy had been the work of the past fifteen years and its development was mainly for the purpose of attacking and destroying British supremacy on the sea. If she could do this then England would be forced to surrender or else starve. England must depend on her merchant vessels to bring supplies to feed her millions, and during war to bring soldiers and ammunition across the Atlantic to her. Before any country wishes to defeat England in war, can hope to do so, she must first of all destroy the British navy. We may well say that the British navy saved the world during the World War.

At the very beginning of the war the British navy blockaded Germany.

The first naval victory for the British was on August 28, 1914, just at the outbreak of the war. This victory was won off Heligoland under the leadership of Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty. On November 1, of the same year, the British
