JELLIED PEACH SALAD
Here is an example of the salad into which cheese puts tissue-building protein and thus complete a light main dish. Winter menus may claim this same dish; canned peaches could be used when the fresh are out of season.

- 2 tablespoons plain gelatine
- 1/2 cup cold water
- 2 cups boiling water
- 2/3 cup finely granulated sugar
- 1 cup strained orange juice
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 9 halves stewed peaches

DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

Neglected Mistress
Woman Should Forget Married Lover After Seven-Year Affair

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: Have I a right to insist that my boy friend of seven years should choose between his wife and me? She has a good job and no children. Does no housework. Spends all of her money on herself. He pays the bills and hangs his hat there because he is afraid she will humiliate him and the may lose his job if he clears out.

Is he a spineless jelly-fish, or am I?
PUZZLED PAULINE

ANSWER: I think you are not only spineless, but brainless to waste seven years on a man who so plainly shows you that he has no intention whatever of legitimizing your relationship. Surely you must have seen enough of life to know that most of the married men who have affairs with other women have no idea in the world of divorcing their wives. On the contrary, they are clinging to their wives with both hands and hiding behind their skirts because that keeps them from having to marry their mistresses.

So when a married man tells his sweetie how he longs to marry her, and how cruel his wife is in not giving him a divorce, don't be dumb enough to believe him. In these days of easy divorce it wouldn't take your boy friend seven years to find some way to break his marriage bond if he wanted to.

WASTE NO MORE TIME

My advice to you is to waste no more time upon him. But don't you think you could be better employed than in trying to break up another woman's home? In case you got your jelly-fish, how would you like it if some other husband-snatcher tried to get him away from you?

Living & Leisure
—THE WOMAN'S REALM—

A thing of beauty is a joy forever; its loveliness increases; it will never Pass into nothingness; but still will keep A bower quiet for us, and a sleep Full of sweet dreams, and health, and quietude.

John Keats: Endymion.

It takes a little know-how to make good use of lemons there are just so many uses for this versatile fruit. On a hot summer day ice-cold lemonade is a pleasant relief. Lemon wedges and slices are fine flavorings for many beverages and fish dishes. And lemon desserts are a favorite with nearly every member of the family. Why not take advantage of the good supply of lemons now on the market. Make a luscious lemon milk sherbert for dessert tonight. Precede this lemon treat with a main course of beef, pork, and veal loaf and accompany it with parsley potatoes and cauliflower au gratin. Then bring on the lemon milk sherbert and serve it with molasses cookies. Top dinner off with milk for the youngsters and coffee for the adults.

COLORS ARE SENSATIONAL

PARIS—The first week of the fall fashion shows ended Saturday and professional observers from many parts of the world were in general agreement that Paris couturiers have regained most if not all of their pre-war predominance in the field of designing.

Louise Leleuq, Chiaparelli, Jacques Fath, Balenciaga, Paquin and Lanvin were among the important designers whose creations were exhibited during the first week.

The dominant note this year is color, apparently splashed at random, but in fact used with an originality and daring technique never seen before.

Contrasting shades are the vogue. Yellow flames against steel-grey, with a touch of mauve. Bright hues such as Nile green, lemon yellow, brown and beige are set against backgrounds of jet-black. Different shades of a single color were displayed so audaciously that one just stared—and liked it. You would have to go back many years to find such a varying quantity of materials.

Dresses are more feminine than ever.

The results are seen in skirts so narrow that they pick up a fleet of stairs becomes almost an exercise in agility. Many of the coats, in a style reminiscent of 1929, are buttonless.

Morning Smile

AGROUND

The skipper and the engineer were arguing. The latter said that steering a ship was far easier than looking after the engines, and the captain said that looking after the engines was child's play compared with steering. They decided to settle the argument by changing places.

After 10 minutes the captain had to admit he was beaten.

"Macpherson," he shouted, "I can't get the engines to start!"

"That's all right," replied the engineer; "we needna bother—we're aground."

POOR START

Dodson had never played golf before, but he had real beginner's luck when he drove off. The ball flew straight to the green, tricked across it, then "trapped" into the hole.

"At his very first attempt the novice had realized the ambition of every golfer, but he did not seem excited.

His next drive was almost as good. Again the ball landed on the green, but this time it stopped short a few inches from the hole.

Dodson turned apologetically to his partner.

"How silly of me!" he exclaimed, "I've missed it!"

Loose Casters

Loose casters that are always dropping out whenever furniture is moved are a source of great annoyance. Remove the casters, dip into glue, and replace. Do not use for at least 24 hours.

Black Material

When laundering black material, no matter what kind, silk, wool, or cotton, rinse the material in a deep blue water and observe how greatly the appearance and the color are improved.

Storing Eggs

Eggs should never be washed before storing, unless they are for immediate consumption, as washing reduces the keeping qualities.

Ellen's Diary
By an Island Farmer's Wife

The Doctor's findings were most encouraging this morning — our babe is definitely on the mend. We ourselves felt that she was better and yet were uneasy that perhaps, the improvement as we saw it might only have been wishful thinking on our part. Some sicknoses are deceitful things, doing their deadly work stealthily before ones' eyes. But the crisis was past. She was improving. Jeanie's manner that of late had been so concerned and quiet, brightened and presently I overheard a bit of the usual gay and interested "conversation" that had been missing in recent days between mother and daughter. She eyes and lost the strange stare and sometimes today a pleasant smile crossed the small features. The rest of the family at Alderley and Rob's who had "slipped out to find out about the baby" this morning went with lighter hearts to commence the threatening "out of the field" at Rob's. They found it an ideal day for the work. The sheaves were in fine condition and when several adjustments and minor repairs had been made here and there to the threshing gear James himself said "she never worked so better". A strange thing it must have been. Or so I regarded it from my point of view. The like of it has not occurred in the family, as Aunt Kitty Mahoney used to say "for a generation of cats". For not one of the women was there to lend assistance at the work. Circumstances had combined long at last to thwart James' hopes—if it had come in a round-about and distressing way. Karmy found plenty to do indoors; Jeanie had the care of her babe I suppose it might have gone "to empty back-ets" I should like to have been there. But mine was a sort of roving commission today, which included in it a number and variety of duties and interests.

Once the babe's welfare had been established, the care of Mary the Jersey cow was left to Jeanie. Not that it really amounted to so much in the line of duty and yet it brought added responsibility to her. At a set time she was to be let from the stable where she has

Modern Etiquette
By Roberta Lee

Q. Is the wrong pronunciation of one's name, when being introduced, a cause for annoyance?

A. Yes; it is always annoying for Mrs. Jenkins to hear her name pronounced Mrs. Jennings, but a well-bred person will conceal this annoyance. Then, if the person persists in the pronunciation, Mrs. Jenkins is justified in quietly and smilingly making the correction.

Q. What is considered the best taste in letter paper?

A. Plain, unruled sheets of note paper, that fold once into their envelopes.

Q. When setting the dinner table, should the prongs of the forks point up or down?

A. The forks should be placed to the left of the plate, with prongs pointed up.
