Crawford, MacMurray Seen Together First Time in M-G-M Film

Action and thrills follow fast on the heels of Joan Crawford and Fred MacMurray as they combine a honeymoon with a spy hunt in M-G-M's "Above Suspicion," now playing at the Prince Edward Theatre. They are seen together for the first time in their theatrical careers.

Miss Crawford and MacMurray are honeymooners who are asked by the British Intelligence to discover the whereabouts of a missing British agent while in Germany, since they will be typical tourists; and consequently, above suspicion. They lead the Nazis a merry chase all over the continent and escape into neutral Switzerland in a photo finish. Placed in the background of pre-war Paris and southern Germany, the film exposes the extent of Nazi espionage being practiced even then and shows what the British did to counteract its influence.

Elyse Knox Seen as Society Girl

After several weeks as a jeweled and perfumed society girl in one picture, Universal's golden haired and satiny looking Elyse Knox has to start living the way the other half lives. In "So's Your Uncle," which opens today at the Capitol Theatre, Elyse Knox costs as the spoiled debutante - niece of socially prominent Billie Burke. Elyse wears milk, rides in town cars, drinks champagne, lolls in bed in her Fifth Avenue apartment, and gazes at life through a lorgnette.

Cowboy Stars Ban Double

When Ken Maynard and Hoot Gibson, two of the screen's most versatile western stars, execute those dangerous riding tricks and other stunts in their films, you can rest assured that the men do the stunts themselves - without benefit of doubles. In "Blazing Guns," latest Maynard-Gibson film at the Empire Theatre, there are several rough-and-tumble stunts that any ordinary man would consider carefully before attempting. When Producer-Director Robert Tansey explained them to Maynard and Gibson, they laughingly agreed "that they probably could handle them all right" - and they did.

Exceptional Display Easter Beef At J. M.'s Market

J. M.'s Meats have always gone hand in hand with the choicest quality obtainable and this year's display of Easter Beef at this popular market is an outstanding one. Those privileged to see an early preview of it have remarked on the unusual high quality that Mr. Roop has obtained for his wide range of customers and they frankly state that it would be hard to equal.

Included in the display, which will be open for inspection until 12 o'clock Good Friday are five cattle from Otis McLeod of Ugg; two from J.R. Munn, Marshfield; three from Mac MacSwain King-Jenkins, Vernon. All choice young beef, you can't go wrong by choosing J. M.'s for your place to select your Easter dinner. And in addition, J. M.'s have your order to-day. By phone, call 181-1111. J. M.'s MEATS, Market Building.

Fine Display of Easter Beef

Roops Ltd., Grafton Street, have their usual large stock of Easter Beef on display in their daily Beef Free from such orders as Emmer Younger, Kingston; Wilfred Frouth, Cherry Valley; two from Wm. Younger, Kingston; one Heifer from Fred Proude, North River; one Heifer from Harry Edwards, Hamastine; one Steer from Francis Draks, Millview.

They also have a full line of Smoked Mats at special prices. They extend an invitation to everybody to inspect their stock.

PUFF PATTEE Powder puffs last longer than you think... if you wash them! Swish through good lukewarm suds, rinse carefully, when dry use a soft brush to raise the hair. Keep puffs always fresh and dainty too.
