For The Cook

FOOD FASHIONS

Saturday morning and baking—do the two go together for you? Do you stock up on cookies and cinnamon rolls for "lunching" youngsters? If you do, have them lend a strong arm to the beating of the chocolate cakes. There will be sufficient reward for their efforts when it is time to scrape the frosting dish.

The little cakes just mentioned are the best ever tasted, and you are challenged to disprove that statement. The recipe is a legacy, and may be quickly and easily tossed together. Especially, if you use the "strong arm" to which I referred. They are good frosted with a white or chocolate boiled frosting, though many cooks prefer the uncooked mocha butter frosting.

The mocha frosting is made with one cup of powdered sugar, four tablespoons of cream, two squares of unsweetened melted chocolate, and one tablespoon of butter. Cold strong coffee may be substituted for the cream, or use half of each. About one-eighth of a teaspoon of salt and half a teaspoon of vanilla supply the finished flavor.

Here is the recipe for the little cakes:

- CHOCOLATE CAKES
1/2 cup butter.
1 cup sugar.
2 eggs.
2 1/2 squares unsweetened chocolate
1/2 cup sweet milk.
1 cup flour.
1 teaspoon baking powder.
1 teaspoon vanilla.
1/2 teaspoon salt.
Cream the butter, add the sugar and cream together. Add the melted chocolate and then the milk. Sift the flour, measure and sift the salt and baking powder with it. Add to the sugar mixture. Beat the batter well. Beat the whites of the eggs stiff, drop in the yolks and beat together. Add to the cake mixture. Pour into greased muffin tins. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit). This makes twenty-four small cakes.

Pitiful Men and Women Who Kill Love and Then Mourn its Loss — Does the Command "Love One Another" Justify Loving Another Woman's Husband?

Dear Miss Dix—Why won't men and women awaken to the fact that love is not God's gift to the lazy and careless? Why don't they realize that love, like everything else in life, must be worked for and guarded if we are to have it to bless us? Isn't it pitiful the way men and women let the greatest thing in life slip through their fingers when with only a little effort on their part they could hold it? I know what I am speaking of because I had love and I lost it. ONE WHO HAS LEARNED.

Answer:

You speak truly, my dear. The saddest thing in the world is the way men and women abuse love, the way they trample it under their feet, the way they stab it to death with a thousand wounds, and then the way they mourn for it after it has perished.

They seem to think that love is indestructible and that no matter how they misuse it, it will always remain beautiful and un tarnished. They seem to think that they can throw love away and then come back and pick it up again whenever they feel as if they wanted it. They seem to think that once you have love nothing that you do can alienate it from you, and that once a person loves you he or she is bound to go on loving you to the end of the chapter, no matter how you treat him or her.

It is a strange fallacy. Love is not indestructible. It is as perishable as a wind-blown orchid. Of all treasures, it is the one most easily lost and the most seldom recovered. And because we are loved today is no indication that we will be loved tomorrow, for the human heart is fickle and prone to change.

It would save a lot of broken hearts and wrecked homes if men and women would only realize that love is not a miracle that is daily worked for their special behoof and benefit. It is a fragile flower that they must work to make thrive, that they must nurture and tend with unceasing vigilance if they want to keep it alive and have it bless their lives.

Every day we see people who are killing love and we wonder at their folly. We see men marry women who love them and then we see these men neglecting their wives, torturing them with jealousy, showing attentions to other women, using their homes as only a place to go and come from, and we wonder if these men think their wives will go on loving philanderers.

We see men who are surly and grouchy and who never speak to their wives except to find fault with them. We see men who never pay their wives a compliment, or take them out to any place of amusement, or do a single thing to make them happy. We see men who are tight-wads and who make of their wives nothing but unpaid servants and we wonder that these men cannot see that they are starving love to death.

We see men who come home sullen drunk and disgusting. We see men who are lazy loafers, who let their wives support them, and we marvel that they do not know that they are killing their wives' love.

We see women who married men who loved them because they were pretty and dainty, who let themselves get slovenly and slouchy after marriage, and we wonder that they can imagine that their husbands will want to kiss them when they are no longer kissable. We see wives who nag and fret and complain and whine, and we wonder that they do not know that they are driving their husbands away from them. We see wives who rule their husbands with petty tyrannies and deprive them of every bit of personal liberty, and we wonder that they don't see that their husbands are bound to come to hate them.

We see women who let themselves get dull and stupid, who never read or go anywhere, and who make no effort to be interesting and companionable to their husbands, and we wonder that they do not see that they are alienating their husbands from them.

When you look around among your divorced friends you can see how in almost every case the man or the woman killed love. It was an inside job, for the other man and woman always come in after the husband or wife has slain the other's affection. Pity, isn't it?

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am in love with a married man and I feel that I have a perfect right to love him as long as I want to and as much as I please, for love was put on this earth for us human beings. For God is love, and Christ said, "Love one another." He didn't say just love only women. If there was a little more real love in the world, it would be better for us all.

Answer:

When Christ said, "Love one another," He didn't say anything about loving another woman's husband. In fact, one of the Ten Commandments specifically says that we must not covet another man's wife, which also goes for coveting another woman's husband.

And, since you are quoting Scripture, why not ponder a while on that text about doing unto others as you would be done by. That will hold you for a while, because you know very well how you would feel if some other woman were loving your husband and making eyes at him, or some woman, younger, slimmer and better-looking than you, were trying to take him away from you and flattering and jollying him along and telling him that he was too young and boyish for his fat old wife.

On the whole, if you are so overflowing with affection for the world, it will be better for you and all concerned for you to lavish your love on your own set and on bachelors.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a married woman with a large family of growing children and with simply a perfect husband. Our only trouble in life is the lack of money. My husband is one of the men who can't hold down a job or make a decent living. But there is one way out of our trouble. There is an old gentleman who is 90 years, in very poor health and very rich, who is passionately in love with me. He wants me to leave my husband and family and be a companion to him in his old age and if I do this he will leave his entire fortune to me. He can't live long, and if I do this I would only be away from my husband for a few years and ever afterward we could live in comfort and happiness and give the children every advantage. Would you advise me to do this?

A DISTRESSED MOTHER.

Answer:

Is this a plot for a movie scenario, or what? It is certainly the wildest proposition I ever heard of in real life and I can't think that any woman could seriously contemplate giving up her husband and children for the sake of a possible inheritance from an old man.

Put such a crazy idea out of your mind and go to some honest work to help support your family if your husband is too trifling to do so. Don't put your trust in an old man who would ask such a thing of you, for he has no ideals of decency and honor, and the chances are that after you had sacrificed so much to him he would leave his money for a Home for Disabled Olds. Besides, it is ill-waiting for dead men's shoes. They are long in coming and generally they are left to somebody else anyway.

Money is a good thing, but it is not worth selling your soul for, and no advantages that you could give your children would compensate to them for having a mother whom they couldn't respect.

A Morning Smile

A man in plus-fours dropped into the barber's chair.

"Mow down the rough a bit," grunted the barber.

The barber did as ordered, then he said, "And now, sir let me recommend to you an excellent tonic for your hair."

Mothers, Mix This At Home for a Bad Cough

You'll be pleasantly surprised when you make up this simple home mixture and try it for a distressing cough due to a cold. It takes but a moment to mix, costs little, and saves money, but it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

Get 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex from any drugist. Pour this into a 16 oz. bottle; then fill it with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. The 16 ounces thus made costs no more than a small bottle of ready-made medicine, and it is much more effective. It is pure, keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

This simple remedy has a remarkable three-fold action. It goes right to the seat of trouble, loosens the germs which have made their way to the inflamed phlegm, and soothes away the inflammation. Part of the medicine is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly upon the bronchial tubes and thus helps inwardly to throw off the whole trouble with surprising ease.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the great medicinals for severe coughs and bronchial irritations.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief for coughs, colds, and croup.

in his life, the famous ceremony of his "Crossing the Line," Captain Will G. Barker, renowned British photographer told interviewers, "No picture of his handshaking, his reviewing of guards of honor, or his opening of famous buildings brings the slightest gleam of pleasure to the face of His Royal Highness. But again and again he laughs uproariously as he watches the reel unfold depicting his being lathered with deck-hand soap and unceremoniously dumped in a tub of water when first he made his bow to King Neptune on board the Renown on the voyage to Australia.

Mrs. Clyde Auld has arrived from Toronto to visit her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Keir, Malpeque.

Mrs. Harry Cameron who spent a short but delightful holiday with relatives and friends here left Monday on return to her home in Halifax.

A cordial welcome is being extended to Miss Frances Stevens of Truro, who has come over to visit her sister, Mrs. Harry Brown.

The ladies of St. Paul's held their annual tea and sale in the Parish Hall Thursday afternoon which proved a most enjoyable and profitable affair.

Col. F. I. Andrew, M. M., and officers of the P. E. I. Light Horse entertained delightfully at dinner on Armistice night in the Armouries, the guests of honor being Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Ings, Lieut.-Col. and Mrs. Full, and the officers' ladies.

The Queen's wedding gift to her niece, Lady May Cambridge, whose marriage to Captain Henry Abel Smith has already been reported was a beautiful long diamond chain. Of simple design and with a magnificent diamond drop attached, the chain is so constructed that it can be divided and the parts used as four bracelets or two bracelets and a smaller necklace. Even the oblong drop of massed diamonds can be detached and used as a brooch.

The practical modern fashion of the combined family gift was followed by many members of the Royal family in choosing their wedding presents for Lady May. The Prince of Wales and his brothers including the Duke of York, the Duchess of York Princess Mary and the Earl of Harewood have given a writing table between them. Another "community" gift was a beautiful painted screen from Prince and Princess Arthur of Connaught, Rear-Admiral Hon. Alexander and Lady Patricia Ramsay, Princess Helena Victoria and Princess Marie Louise. Princess Beatrice and the Marquis and Marchioness of Carisbrooke also joined together gave a rose pink glass lamp and shade.
