ZION CHURCH CHOIR IN MUSICAL AND PLAY—Zion Church choir rendered a splendid musical programme Wednesday night at Marshfield Hall. The talent was exceptionally good and every number was enjoyed. Prof. Thompson presided at the organ and made the reed feel it was in the pipe class. McKinnon and Craswell and chorus rendered the chanty songs with a gusto that would have done justice to the boatwains mate of a 74. The mixed quartette in "Whispering Hope" touched the heart strings of the audience and was heartily enjoyed. Miss Lafferty and Miss Flora Campbell were heard at their best in solos. Mr. Jack MacLeod "In the Garden of your Heart" picked a choice bouquet. The inimitable Mr. William Bruce "Kissed on the Stair" was a scream and scored heavily in the "Mother-in-law." Mr. George Beer was a winning number in his splendid rendition of the horse race reading. The play "Advertising for a Wife" was a snappy bit of bachelor experience. All star actors and actresses and cast in a humorous mould rarely has an evening with local talent been so much enjoyed and appreciated. A goodly sum was taken at the door, and the young ladies' sale of candy was a sweet success. The National Anthem closed the entertainment, after which the choir and friends were entertained by the ladies of the Marshfield Presbyterian Church and the hostess, Mrs. (Dr.) Genge, at the Manse. In closing the social hour Dr. Genge in fitting remarks tendered the thanks of the officers and congregation and pastor to the Zion Choir for the splendid, clean entertainment. City choirs are appreciated in the country. Come again.

LECTURES AT THEOLOGICAL SCHOOL

Five lectures were delivered yesterday at the Theological School in Hertz Memorial Hall by professors W. G. Watson, D. D., C. McKinnon, D. D., J. W. Falconer, D. D., and J. S. Thomson, M. A.

Dr. Watson continued his series on the faith of Isaiah. Isaiah's belief and teaching were that Jehovah would punish the nation for its unrighteousness and lack of faith. The punishment however did not exhaust Jehovah's purpose for Israel. The nation will not be exterminated; there will be a remnant. Jehovah's final purpose is one of mercy and salvation. Isaiah's hope centred in Jerusalem and the temple. He is an ardent nationalist, and thinks of salvation for one people only—the Jews. He has no missionary outlook.

The second lecture in the morning session was given by Principal MacKinnon on "The Holy Spirit and the Word." As an illustration of the working of the Spirit in the hearts of men through the Word, the lecturer cited the life and writings of John Calvin. Calvin brought to focus the teaching of the reformed church and by the clarity of his thought, the preciseness of definition and the force of his logic he commanded the attention of thinking people. All the great reform movement received the stamp of Calvin. As a theologian he was more accurate than Luther. The theology of his Institutes has been qualified and modified in the course of years. His best representatives today are Karl Barth and his school.

At the afternoon session Prof. Falconer spoke on "The Meaning of the Sacraments" as interpreted by St. Paul in I Corinthians. The sacraments are the real battle-ground of issue between Christians today. In the Lausanne Conference of a few years ago there was no difficulty in formulating an idea of the content of the Gospel upon which all agreed. The first cleavage came over the correct orders for celebrating the Sacraments. There are two extreme views held in Protestantism about the sacraments, the view of the sacerdotalists who place them at the very heart of religion and at the opposite extreme the ultra-Protestants who place the sacraments not at the centre but on the circumference of religion. Can we not win a via media. The origin of the sacramental conception as found in St. Paul is attributed by some scholars such as Kirsopp Lake, to the influence of the mystery religion. The chief consensus of opinion is that for Paul, Jesus is the origin of the sacraments.

In I Cor. there are 4 passages dealing with baptism. Baptism is in the name of Christ. Faith in the person of Jesus is the primary condition of baptism. Instruction is the forerunner of baptism. According to Paul, baptism is not a magical rite but has faith as its antecedent. There are two passages in I Cor. relating to the Lord's Supper. In each case the Lord's Supper is mentioned indirectly. In the first instance 10: 14-22, many Christians continued in profane and pagan practices. Paul asks them to stop as such is in contradiction with a true attitude to the Lord's Supper. In the second instance 11: 19-34 Paul condemns the cliques which had grown up in connection with the celebration of the Supper. It is a breaking of the bond of fellowship. In conclusion the speaker stated that there is sufficiency of evidence to justify the claim that the two sacraments had their origin in the mind of Christ. The celebration of them is bound up with loyalty to Jesus. The intentional neglect of them may bring a great loss of religious experience.

In the second place the Sacraments are neither magical nor automatic. They are divine ordinances established by Christ and dependent for their efficacy on the presence and grace of Christ. It is one duty to maintain a high doctrine of the Sacraments. They should reveal worship and religion at its very best. The second afternoon lecture was given by Prof. Thomson on "Newness of Life." Jesus speaks to us in a language which is universal. He speaks in terms of life. This experience of life has a purpose. It confronts us as a momentous enterprise. Life may be glad or sad but it is never trivial. There are many interpretations of life. "Vanity Fair" is one verdict. All is vanity. This cynicism is found in the works of Wells, Bernard Shaw, Walter Lippmann, and to some extent in Mr. John Galsworthy. Another view of life is given us by a man such as Dr. Robert Laws of Livingstonia, who accepted the challenge of David Livingstone and went to Africa fully equipped in mind and heart. Is Thackeray right? Or is the full sat-

Isynging life of Dr. Laws a better interpretation of this thing? He had found a purpose in life which illuminated all cynicism, a purpose illumined by Jesus Christ. How arrive at this purpose? Life presents a moral choice. Jesus emphasises this in his teaching when he presents the great alternative; the sheep and the goats, the great gift, the wise and foolish virgins. Jesus assumes human responsibility. Life involves choice. Yet at the same time many of the great major conditions are predetermined. We cannot be anybody unless there were destined forces, such as the languages we speak, the customs we inherit; these are predetermined for us. Christ influences all the forces that come into our lives. He enters our lives decisively through our Christian homes and environment. Through the life of Jesus new and moral ideals have come to bless us. Then again Christ enters our life as an example. As Dr. Denney says "After all He is our example." The great and good are the messengers of God. The deepest influences are those which come through personality. To meet Christ is to encounter newness of life. Preeminently that is the Christian message to youth. Jesus speaks of saving the lost, those who have taken the wrong track, who are overcome by doubts, and who have fallen in their objective. The world is full of lost men and women who can't get back on the right track. Jesus met them in his day, the victims of evil habits, prisoners of their own selves. In all ages they raise the cry "Can a man be born again?" Can we begin over again? Can the lost be unfound and restored? How can a man be free from the guilt and power of sin? A man is unable to save himself. First of all as to the guilt. There is no experience which will make men realize their need for God so much as the need for forgiveness. You cannot forgive yourself. Again you may in part be responsible for the wrongdoing of others. Our task as preachers is to expose to men this malignant disease and to present to them the good news that God forgives. He forgives on the basis of repentance and faith. God cannot forgive men who are unwilling to be forgiven. The fact that a man feels the sting of guilt in his soul is a token that God is striving with him. On what grounds can we announce that good news? Surely not upon our own authority. It is through the death of Christ upon the cross. Here we enter upon a vast subject, the atonement. No theory is adequate for it. God does not forgive men because Jesus died. That would be to deny the reality of the experience of forgiveness. Jesus died because God forgives. Not that the sacrifice of Christ changed the heart of God, but it made it possible for God to forgive through opening the heart of man. If God is eternal then there must always have been in the heart of God that truth which Christ's death so clearly sets forth. God did not begin seeking men at the death of Christ. What differentiates the death of any other life laid down on behalf of humanity? It is the person who died. If Christ is the express image of God then here is the deepest insight that we can ever find into the ways of God with man. The death of Christ is unique because Christ is unique. "He died for me." "He is my Saviour." If any man can say that about Christ, is there anything to compare with it to give a man new life?

The evening meeting took the form of an illustrated lantern lecture by Dr. Watson on "A Bible Student in Palestine." The chairman, Dr. J. R. Saint, conducted the devotional exercises. Rev. Ewen MacDougall led in prayer. Dr. Watson introduced his subject with a warning to those who might visit the Holy Land, that if they had idealised Palestine too much they might be disillusioned. Palestine in the days of our Lord was a much better country than it is today. Under the Turkish regime it has gone back. By the use of a map he gave a splendid idea of the land. Two mountain ranges run north and south through the country. The plain of Esdraelon breaks the western range. The Dead Sea is 1292 feet below sea level. The maritime is a beautiful section of country, fruitful and rich. Cultivation is very limited on the hills. Pictures were thrown on the screen depicting the sea coast of Palestine. Tyre, Mt. Carmel, Joppa, Lydda. A

The Late Hugh MacMillan
The death occurred at his home in Cornwall last evening of Mr. Hugh MacMillan, a well known and highly respected resident.

Mr. MacMillan was born 85 years ago at West River, the son of Captain Ewen MacMillan and Isabella Matheson. His grandfather, Donald MacMillan, was a native of Scotland and was one of the first settlers at Covehead.

After teaching school for a number of years, Mr. Hugh MacMillan located at New Haven about the year 1871. At that time this now flourishing hamlet was part of the forest. Mr. MacMillan cleared the land and engaged in farming and also carried on a general mercantile business. He was one of the pioneers of that place and on his suggestion it received its name.

About the year 1911 he removed to Cornwall where he took up farming and fox ranching. Advancing years necessitated his retirement from active farm life, but up to a year ago he was able to attend to his ranch.

Mr. MacMillan was a most worthy descendant of his Scottish ancestors, possessing their strength of body, mind and spirit and known wide and far as a man of sterling character and integrity. He was one of the first members of Clyde River Presbyterian Church. He established the Sunday School there and was its superintendent for many years until the union when he joined the United Church at Cornwall. He also took a deep interest in education and was largely instrumental in having the Lawrence Toombs, Maurice Brady, always a strong temperance worker, being a member of the Sons of Temperance and the Temperance Alliance.

He was the first Post Master at New Haven. Mr. MacMillan was a Liberal in politics, and at one convention his name was put in nomination as a candidate for the second district of Kings. He lost the nomination by only one vote to his brother, the late Hon. James MacMillan.

About three years ago he had a severe attack of pneumonia from which he never fully recovered, although he was only in bed for a week during his last illness.

His wife, nee Phoebe Ross, daughter of the late Rev. Malcolm Ross and sister of the late Mr. J. K. Ross predeceased him about ten years ago.

They had five sons, Talmage George, Malcolm, Ewen, Gordon, and one daughter Emma wife of Mr. David Scott. Of these only two survive Ewen and Gordon. He also leaves one sister, Mrs. Arthur Wright of Strausburg, Sask.

The funeral will take place today at Clyde River Cemetery at 3.30. Service will be conducted by Rev. D. R. Ross and Rev. E. M. Aitken. To the sons and other bereaves relatives the Guardian extends its deep sympathy.

CENTRAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH Dr. R. F. Whiston, preached on the many obstacles in the way of the highest Christian life, last night in the Central Church, mentioning the physical disability, the mental, the moral and the handicap of the routine of many lives. Poverty and sin were also mentioned among the handicaps. The Evangelist said "There are many things we cannot understand in this world and that brings to us the eternal 'Why?' Why are some born rich and others poor, why are some born intellectually brilliant while others are mentally deficient and why do some have healthy bodies while others are weaklings. The inequalities of life have never been solved—we simply know them as realities. No one seems to blame. There is just one answer to the 'whys' of life and that is in my text 'Bear ye one another's burdens.' That is the solvent of all life's problems. The best way to bear one's own burden is to bear the burdens of others. This is not only a law of Christ but it is a fundamental law of life. Grace is stronger than environment or heritage and although the burden remains the same the Grace of God is greater." Dr. Whiston gave an evangelistic turn to his message when he discussed the great all involving handicap, that of sin.

Tonight will be the great climax night of the week. The services from now on will begin at 7.40 rather than 7.30 except Sunday. Mrs. Roper will sing at the service tonight.
