SUPREME COURT

There was no appearance in court on behalf of the defendant. Mr. Duffy stated that the note was made in December, 1907, being made payable six months after date, with interest at the rate of seven per cent per annum. The defence was on three grounds-denial of the making of the note, plea of payment and the statute of limitation.

After hearing Mr. Long in proof of the debt the court gave judgment for the plaintiff for $643.30. Bruce Stewart & Co., Ltd., vs. Joseph T. Reeves-an action on a promissory note.

For the plaintiffs, Mr. McNeill; for the defendant, Mr. B. W. Tanton. There was no appearance in court for the defendant. Mr. C. L. McKay, secretary-treasurer of the plaintiff company, was heard on behalf of the plaintiffs proving the debt. He admitted two payments by the defendant-$25 in October, 1912, and $25 in January, this year.

A balance of $38.37, including interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum, was claimed, and for this amount His Honor gave judgment for the plaintiffs. This concluded the cases on docket for that day, and His Honor adjourned the court to 11 a.m. on Monday next. He intimated that no arguments would be heard until the cases on the docket were concluded, when a date will be fixed for the hearing of the arguments. While the court would be adjourned to Monday, he said, no cases would be taken until Wednesday, Tuesday being Dominion Day. The Grand Jury might be in attendance on Monday when the court resumed, but they would be discharged again.

Mr. K. J. Martin pointed out that it would be inconvenient to those jurymen who had to come in from the country districts, to have to be in attendance on Monday, when nothing would be done, and have again to come on Wednesday.

His Honor said that in that case there was no necessity for the jurors to be in attendance on Monday so long as they knew they had to be in court on Wednesday.

The docket of cases to come before the court when it resumes on Wednesday is as follows: JURY CASES. The Robert Taylor Co., Ltd., vs. Amelia Currie. For the plaintiffs, Mr. Bentley, K.C.; for the defendant, Mr. McQuaid.

Bryant McDonald, Ltd., vs. Idem. For the plaintiffs, Mr. Bentley, K.C.; for the defendant, Mr. McQuaid. Robert Stewart vs. Archibald Buchanan. For the plaintiff, Mr. Gaudet, K.C.; for the defendant, Mr. Bentley, K.C.

John A. Channell vs. Wallace Wheatley. For the plaintiff, Mr. Shaw; for the defendant, Mr. McLeod, K.C. Francis Collins vs. George Keenan. For the plaintiff, Mr. Stewart, K.C.; for the defendant, Mr. McDonald, K.C.

Daniel McDonald vs. The Island Gold Storage Co., Ltd. For the plaintiff, Mr. McLeod, K.C.; for the defendant, Mr. Stewart, K.C.

SPECIAL PAPERS. Martha A. J. Campbell vs. Samuel O. Shorey and ors. For the plaintiff, Mr. McQuarrie, K.C.; for the defendant company, Mr. Bentley, K.C. Shamy Bros., Ltd., vs. Simon Joseph. For the plaintiffs, Mr. Bentley, K.C.; for the defendant, Mr. Gaudet, K.C.

James T. Purdie and ano. vs. John P. Nicholson et al. For the plaintiffs, Mr. McLeod, K.C.; for the defendant, Mr. Martin. Duncan McDonald vs. Bernard McMaster. For the plaintiff, Mr. Gaudet, K.C.; for the defendant, Mr. McNeill.

Mr. James Lannon, successful student of the U. C. C. returned to his home in Montague yesterday afternoon.

Miss Hattie Hodgson, Charlottetown, left yesterday morning on a visit to her sister in New York. She was accompanied by her little niece Miss Helen Cookson.

FUNNIOSITIES

Funniosities. Today's Great Thought: An accident is a condition of affairs in which presence of mind is good, but absence of body better.

There was a girl named Margaretta so sweet that a youth could forgetta. They would sit "neath the moon with Margie and spoon; And getta, and getta, and petta.

Faithful to his Post. This happened on one of the mixed express freight trains, on the P.E.I. Railway. Anxious lady passenger to Conductor: "Say, conductor, couldn't you go faster than this?"

As the Crow Files. Two local representatives of the different steamship lines were the other day arguing quite heatedly as to which of their respective lines of steamers had the longest routes. Said No. 1, thinking to close the dispute: "Why, man, our line stretches from America to China."

An Electric Organ. One of the principal topics of discussion in the Island just at present is the result of the voting in the school districts upon the auto question. It stopped up at the dinner table at one of the city hotels the other day: One man, who was championing the cause of the auto, remarked upon the apparent inconsistency of the people in plumping for the up-to-date method of lighting, viz., electricity, and refusing to adopt the modern style of vehicle, the automobile. "But," objected the champion of the other side of the question, "there are no electric lights in the country districts." "Excuse me, please," quietly interposed a third party. "You know Jim Flanagan, who has a farm Southport way. Well the other day, his wife had such a bad attack of pain in her side that she had to get an electric belt and wear it. Guess she's got electric lights, now."

Impervious to Attack. They quarrelled. She called him a robber. He told him he was a bully. She added that he was cross-eyed, crooked, false, fore sworn, an ignoramus, and a few other odds and ends of everything low, mean and despicable. "But he never wince." He did not even deign to reply. "You see, he was a baseball umpire."

Pot's Preference. "Now, my man," said the Magistrate at a Police Court to an "old fender," an Irishman, "what brought you here again?" "Two policemen, yer honor," was the reply. "By the by," inquired the Magistrate. "Yes, sorr," answered Pat, "both av them." "Five days, or seven and six," ordered the Magistrate. "Thank ye kindly," added Pat; "if it's all the same to yee, I'll take the seven and six."

From the Office Boy. "I'm the only fellow that really does the real thing in this place. The boss he just tells Mr. White to do something. Then Mr. White he says to Mr. King, 'Would you please do this as soon as possible?' And Mr. King he says to Jim, 'I guess you'll have to stop and attend to this.' And then Jim goes to Miss Brown and says, 'Would you kindly look after this?' And Miss Brown says to Miss Smith, 'Here's something that's got to be done right away'-and Miss Smith says, 'Deal do this!' and I have to do it-there's nobody for me to tell. Talk about your organization!"

In the Same Boat. He was a stranger to Charlottetown, and he was on his way to the Notre Dame Academy. Naturally he got a bit mixed in his whereabouts. He was just losing patience in his vain search for the place he wanted to get to, when there approached an individual whose coming was welcome, inasmuch as his aged appearance betokened a seasoned experience of the locality. Moreover he looked so approachable. With gladdened heart the stranger hastened to meet him. He remarked with surprise that the other seemed as anxious to meet him. "Can you tell me, please, the stranger began, when the other's face brightened with the following: "Do you know where Mr. Fitzgerald lives about here?" With a groan the stranger fled.

Caught. The life-size wooden horse on show at Messrs. Horne and Co's carriage works in Kent Street, is a striking advertisement. Through its means a Do not stirre another day with itching, bleeding, itching Piles. No surgical operation required.

How They got the Chocolates.

In a certain office in this city the employees seem endowed with a chocolate-eating mania, and many a day the idle hours of toil are beguiled in the demolition of a bag or two of these delectable sweets. Most of the other day it happened that none of them seemed possessed of the ready quarter so necessary in the obtaining of the chocolates, and that day, too, the hankering for the chocs was greater than ever. Something therefore had to be done. It was suggested that between them all, five or six of them, they might be able to raise the wherewithal. But just who should pay and just who should not was rather difficult to decide. And so, sad to relate, these young people resorted to a regular little ruse in order to decide the question. There were two chocolates remaining from a previous lot, and these were made the prize in the pool which was got up, and for which slips were sold at five cents each. In this way the quarter was soon raised, and a full bag of chocolates was equally soon going the rounds. With the moral side of the matter the participants were not at all concerned, they just wanted chocolates, and they got 'em, and no doubt whenever similar difficulty arises again, a similar way out will be adopted.

General sorrow was expressed yesterday evening when it was learned that Master John Connors, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Connors, Corner Fitzroy and Great George streets, had passed away in the Charlottetown Hospital. The deceased, who had just passed his sixteenth year, had for the past year been employed in the C. D. Rankin drugstore and his bright, gentlemanly and obliging disposition had made him a favorite with everybody who knew him. Whether at work or at play it was remarked that he was always, manly, upright and unselfish. Trusted by his employers and respected wherever known, his death, just as he was entering upon life's duties is especially sad, and the circumstances surrounding it are peculiarly distressing. A week ago last Sunday a stone playfully thrown by a companion, struck him near the eye. The injury appeared a trifling one and, although medical assistance was called in and the wound dressed, no apprehension was felt until last Saturday when alarming symptoms developed. On Sunday morning the symptoms plainly indicated tetanus and he was removed to the hospital. The end came at 5.30 last evening. He leaves to mourn his father and mother, one sister, Miss Margaret, teacher at Savary Harbor, who arrived home yesterday, and one brother, James J. employed on board the S. S. Earl Grey and who is expected home for the funeral. To the family so suddenly bereft of a loving and promising son and brother The Guardian tenders sincere sympathy.
