NAVAL POLICY IS UNCHANGED SAYS COOLIDGE

U. S. Government Will Go On With Moder- ate Program As Outlined in Presi- dential Messages.

(Special to the Guardian)
RAPID CITY, S. D., Aug. 10.—The United States naval policy is unchanged as a result of the collapse of the Geneva negotiations, according to President Coolidge, who today explained the country's position on naval defense at the conference with Secretary of Navy Wilbur.

The conference has failed temporarily in the belief of the president. Its failure must not be made the cause of naval competition and so far as his influence can be exerted, the United States policy will be for the carrying out of the naval program contemplated before the conference met. This government will go on with its moderate naval building program as outlined in his messages and carry out the five year building program to round out the fleet and provide the necessary light cruisers and other auxiliary craft.

In his opinion the government will continue on this basis as if the conference had not met, and will build only as needed to strengthen the fighting effectiveness of the ships. The present failure he holds does not justify the United States in considering anything beyond its defensive requirements, and it is his belief that United States sentiment will not support a demand for auxiliary craft.

President Coolidge is still for an agreement as to auxiliary ships, and has not given up hope that an agreement among the world powers will be effected, in reasonable time. There may be a decided reaction in Europe resulting from the operation of economic causes that may induce the countries to favor a naval treaty along the lines suggested by President Coolidge in calling the Geneva conference.

Chief Sark Prepares For Election

Chief Sark of Lennox Island returned yesterday from Morell where he spent a few days visiting his people in the Reservation there. The Indians at Morell gave him a cordial reception and promised him their hearty support in the election for Chief which takes place on Thursday 18th instant.

While in Charlottetown he had the honour of calling upon ex-Governor D. A. McKinnon with whom he smoked the Pipe of Peace and Friendship and accepted from the ex-Governor a handsome and costly pipe which they hope to enjoy when they next meet.

The Chief informs The Guardian that conditions both on Lennox Island and at Morell are very favourable, the Indians at both Reservations being comfortably off and quite prosperous.

Chief Sark expects that on the evening of the 18th he will be able to express his gratitude for the honour in the good old Indian fashion "Cain well as lin," which in English means "Thank you very much." When Chief is elected he will express his thanks to the people as follows: "Cain, well, as lin" which means "Thank you very much."

FRENCH-CANADIAN COMPATRIOTS FROM QUEBEC WELCOMED TO CHARLOTTETOWN

"Le Devoir" Excursionists Tendered Reception Last Evening At Old Government House. Mr. Henri Bourassa, M. P., Editor Of "Le Devoir" And Leader Of The Party Delivers Eloquent Address With "National Unity" As The Key-Note Of His Remarks.

The "Le Devoir" excursionists from the province of Quebec who are making a tour throughout the Maritime Provinces were greeted by a large concourse of citizens on their arrival at the Railway Station last evening. The visitors 225 in number spent the greater part of the day on the western part of the island among their compatriots at Egmont Bay and spent the night at the hotel capital until 9:25 p. m. by special train. The party is under the leadership of Mr. Henri Bourassa, M. P., editor of "Le Devoir" newspaper which is fostering the tour and consists largely of the clergymen, journalists and professional men whose primary purpose is to gain a better insight into conditions that exist on the provinces by the sea.

On their arrival the visitors were conducted by automobile to Old Government House where they were received by His Honour Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Heartz with aides and Premier and Mrs. Stewart. The interior of the building was beautifully decorated with flags and bunting and nothing was lacking to make the occasion one to be remembered by all. After the singing of "O Canada" a short programme took place with His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor presiding who after a few humorous introductory remarks spoke as follows:

On behalf of the people of the Province of Prince Edward Island, I extend to you a right royal welcome. Coming as you do from the pivotal Province of Canada to the smallest, geographically speaking of the nine forming the Dominion, I am sure that your visit will be fraught with great importance; and also that you will be impressed with the beauty of the country, its actual and potential wealth and the warm-hearted hospitality of our people.

Although small in area, this Province is immense in quality—hence, I am encouraged to assert that Quebec and Prince Edward Island have long been united in the bonds of friendship and mutual respect and understanding. Like Quebec—and unlike other Provinces of Canada—Prince Edward Island is a land of two great races—the English speaking race, which includes also the Irish and Scotch—and the French race. It is a land of two tongues and in this Province one hears, as one hears elsewhere only in Quebec, "the English and the French speech. We have villages that are wholly French. We have churches in which the service is wholly in the French tongue and in the French language. When the Canadians were driven from Grand Pre—the land of Evangeline in Nova Scotia—one hundred and seventy odd years ago, many of them took refuge in Prince Edward Island, then known as Isle St. John. When later the Island passed with Quebec under another flag, its people did not wholly pass under other traditions, nor did they forget their sacred memories of France. Like the sixty thousand French of Quebec, who at that time elected to remain in Canada and whose pioneer bones rest today along the noble St. Lawrence, which they loved, the French Canadians in Prince Edward Island elected to remain in this Province. They lived in peace and tolerance and in mutual good-will with the Scotch and English pioneers, and here for nearly two centuries they have set up an example of how two races can work in harmony for the development of our common country. The descendants of these French Canadians live today in this Province, working as their fathers worked for our provincial and Canadian welfare, and living in peace with their neighbours without prejudice of race, creed and language. I say that in the days of talk of Canadian disunion and disruption, and sectional jealousy, now I think past, we were an example of tolerance and mutual understanding to the rest of the Canadian Nation.

Again, more than a century after the coming of the French Canadians to my Province, there was another golden link of friendship forged. In 1854 Canada was seeking for unity. The Child of Confederation was about to come into being. Where should this child of promise be cradled? Where, indeed, but in Prince Edward Island and in Quebec? Charlottetown, where on the 1st of September, 1864 the first gathering of Confederation delegates took place—and the historic City of Quebec, where on the 16th of October, 1864 the second gathering met. Therefore the Cradles of Confederation, the cradles in which Canadian unity was born.

Not only upon the pages of this

Island's history, but also in the hearts of its people, is deeply graven an everlasting numbers the generous and considerate attitude of Quebec at trying periods, notably, when the Island's representation was finally and permanently fixed; and again at the readjustment of its financial problems.

My people will never forget, and their feeling for the people of Quebec may be summed up in the very significant motto of your singularly progressive Province: "Je me Souviens"—"I shall remember."

It is, Sir, gatherings like this today which will not only foster and develop in our land the unity and harmony and mutual respect which our fathers, French and British in Quebec and Prince Edward Island first dreamed, but they must have a broadening and educative effect which should be a mutual benefit to all concerned. Surely such gatherings will help us to realize their vision, and to keep us united, even as they were united in the bonds of fervent hope, continued fellowship and perpetual peace.

The French-Canadian visitors led by M. Thos. Paulin then delighted of the assemblage with the singing of the well-known French folk song, "Allouette."

Uzudun To Give Delaney Real Test In Bout Thursday

(Canadian Press)
NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The ruggedness of the Basque Oak will test the flashing blade of the ring's favorite French-Canadian woodsman at the Yankee Stadium, Thursday night, when Jack Delaney tries to cut his way into heavy-weight company.

That is how the fistic experts view the contest—a test of the marksmanship of the vivacious youngster from Bridgeport, who save up the light-heavyweight crown to seek the big purses among the bigger fellows.
