Expenses At Falconwood Increased Under Liberals

HON. MR. MCINTYRE: It might have.

DR. MCMILLAN: Because it was found to be bad?

HON. MR. MCINTYRE: It might have been.

DR. MCMILLAN: There is no "might" about it. It was not hard to find it out; it was so rotten it found itself. I wonder if there are any merchants in this Province who bring their butter from Montreal and sell it to the farmers and others who buy butter?

HON. MR. LEPAGE: We will be getting some of that 20 cent butter pretty soon.

DR. MCMILLAN: Do you know where the meat comes from that is supplied to Falconwood Hospital? Is it produced here? I wonder when my hon. friend goes to buy a roast of beef, whether he gets Island beef.

HON. MR. LEPAGE: I get good beef every time.

DR. MCMILLAN: Of course; but was it produced in Prince Edward Island?

HON. MR. LEPAGE: I presume so.

DR. MCMILLAN: I buy mine at my Grocer's; and he tells me that it comes from Ontario.

HON. MR. LEPAGE: You shouldn't buy it.

DR. MCMILLAN: I will venture to say that there is more Ontario beef sold in this city than any other kind. It is better beef, and they say they can bring it in here cheaper from the other parts of Canada than it can be produced here. I am asking this question: Isn't that an unfortunate condition of affairs in an agricultural country, when we cannot produce beef enough to supply our own needs.

(At 11 p. m. Dr. MacMillan moved the adjournment of the debate.)

HON. MR. LEPAGE: I move that we do not adjourn.

(The motion carried.)

DR. MCMILLAN: I am quite satisfied, but perhaps if my hon. friends had been as expeditious in coming here when the bell rang this evening, there would be no need of prolonging the debate after the usual hour of adjournment.

CITES "N. S." OPINION

Continuing his discussion of the agricultural situation, Dr. MacMillan was interrupted by frequent references to the alleged failure of Premier Bennett to implement his promises.

DR. MCMILLAN: There is one thing about Mr. Bennett, that when he says something he will do it. He is no pussyfoot; he is no evader. It is either yes or no with him, and you won't fail to understand him either. (Applause). If you want an independent opinion of Premier Bennett, I have it here. This is from the Saturday Evening Post of March 28th. The article is entitled "The New Voice of Empire," and it reads in part as follows:

"If ever a Dominion Premier dominated an imperial conference it was Canada's chief representative in London during those fateful weeks last year. There was a drama, to be sure, in the first appearance of Smuts, Britain's erstwhile foe, at the initial imperial wartime parley. He, however, represented a single entity at the high tide of imperial crisis. Wars end, but the economic problem, with its handmaiden, the tariff, goes on forever. This is why Bennett, speaking for all the self-governing peoples, incarnated a permanent issue upon which, let me repeat, imperial economic unity—and with it no small degree of Empire political co-ordination—stands or falls. The story of Bennett, therefore, is more than the record of a striking career which reads like a Horatio Alger book. He is the embodiment of a movement which has brought Britain, so far as her relations with the rest of the Empire are concerned, to the crossroads of her destiny."

Dr. MacMillan then briefly reviewed the prompt action of the Bennett Government in placing an embargo on Soviet coal, and other measures in the interests of Canadian producers since coming into power.

Greetings being exchanged the bride-to-be and the groom elect were placed in the seats of honor, amid a shower of confetti. Little Miss Helen Carr and Master Gordon Rogerson, dressed as bride and groom hauled an over laden wagon before them. This wagon contained gifts from the assembled friends, it was unladen and yet again re-laden. The gifts were opened by Miss Ethel Leard and Mrs. V. Howatt read the contributions from the local poets that accompanied the gifts. Rev. Mr. Lund then read an address from the choir and Sunday School officials of the United Church and Mrs. Harold Howatt presented the bride-to-be with a beautiful dimer set in addition to the beautiful gifts of linen china, silver and glassware, that she had already received Miss Thomas made a very touching acknowledgment of the kindness of her friends and their good wishes. The bride-to-be is a girl of whom Tryon is pardonably proud and we are glad that her marriage does not take her away, the bridegroom elect too is one of our splendid young men. Dainty refreshments were served to all present.—D.

Picking Your Life Work

BY SAMUEL W. REYBURN
As Told to J. V. Fitzgerald

Assuming that you have moral character, physical health and good habits, the first requisite for success in any undertaking is knowledge, and in retail merchandising a knowledge of economics, of sociology, and of psychology, is particularly helpful. Those of you who have this basic knowledge at your command will know the effect of supply and demand upon the price of commodities, will recognize the standards of living in a given community, will understand human behaviour and be able to direct human effort.

The courage necessary to make decisions in important matters and the confidence needed to make plans by which the efforts of others will be controlled and directed is another requisite for success.

Still another requisite for success is the possession of bodily energy, and force and the tact with which to direct the execution of plans and decisions promptly. It is this last quality that makes it possible to successfully use all others.

Although ultimate success may be attained through a variety of channels, it has its source in experience behind the counter where you make customer contacts.

Only through frequent contact with the customer can the buyer or merchandise manager discriminate successfully in the selection of merchandise. Only through a real interest in customers and their needs can the fashion advisor anticipate the demand for articles.

Only through a knowledge of human nature can the copywriter of an nature can the copywriter catch and hold the attention of the buying public.

Every function performed by executives of a retail store supplement the work of the salesperson. No better counsel can be given those of you who select retailing as a vocation than that which sends you behind the counter for an adequate period of apprenticeship.

Judge: Do you mean to say that such a physical wreck as your husband gave you that black eye?

Plaintiff: Your Honor, he wasn't a physical wreck until he gave me the black eye.
