SCOOPS IN NEWS Rarely Result Of Mere Good Luck

More Often Follow Weeks or Months of Careful Preparation

FINAL SWIFT ACTION

Sir Roderick Jones, Head of Reuters, Lectures to Students of Journalism in London

LONDON, July 5.—Journalistic "scoops" are rarely the result of good luck, said Sir Roderick Jones, chairman and managing director of Reuters' Agency, in a lecture of students of journalism at London University, quoted by The London Morning Post.

They were often more the result of weeks or months of careful preparation, direct and indirect, of swift decision, and of particularly swift action the moment the news became news.

Sometimes that moment took one by surprise and might find one unprepared. It was then that the really efficient correspondent showed his worth. He brushed aside everything, he sacrificed everything, he subordinated everything, to rushing his news to the telephone or to the telegraph or both, and to being ahead of his rivals if only by a single minute. If by five or fifteen minutes, so much the better.

The most dramatic fact about the Peace Treaty of Versailles was the signature. In order that they should be first in announcing this great fact to the world, a certain news organization made elaborate arrangements, telephonic, telegraphic, wireless, motor and other, down to the smallest detail, for days beforehand, so as to secure swift transmission to London. In the final event several correspondents belonging to the organization, posted at different points between Versailles and London, were concerned in the transmission.

Good Working System

By means which need not be discussed a Mr. A had secured a place inside the Salles des Glaces. He wrote: "Despite the fact that I had practically a front seat, and so was far away from door, I managed, by alternately tramping upon and crawling over people, to get out first to my special telephone with the news that the Germans had signed. I was the first person, to send it from Versailles.

"I was at the back of the Galerie des Gaces, and that is on the road along which I had to pass. When he saw me dash through the Chamber his face lighted up. "You have it," he cried. "Yes," I said, and held on. We had a special line direct from the palace to our central office in Paris. There took my message down instantaneously, and inside a minute he was through to D.

D had hypnotized the French official in charge of our line to London with the idea that Lloyd George, Clemenceau, Wilson and Waley Cohen (Colonel Waley Cohen was the head of the British Communication Service at the peace conference) had stop watches in their hands waiting to see how soon the news would be got through to London. The spell was effective, for D was in touch with E standing at the London end, under a couple of minutes." This correspondent had the news in London long before anybody else, and as a result his organization was easily first in giving it to the world.

Ships Of The Air Replace Ships Of Desert In East

LONDON, July 25.—Regions that would have to wait many years before they could be traversed by railways are now quickly mastered by aerial transport. News comes today from the Air Ministry that a new air route has been opened up across the desert between Palestine and Mesopotamia. Notification has been received of the arrival at Baghdad of three airplanes of the Royal Air Force which have flown over this route.

The new route is about 580 miles long. It is an extension of the present Cairo-Ramleh route. It starts from Ramleh, where is the main Royal Air force aerodrome in Palestine, passes through Amman (east of the Jordan) and Kasr Azrak, where landing grounds have been prepared, and proceeds thence in almost straight line across the Arabian desert to Ramadie on the Euphrates, and thence to Bagdad.

The distances between the principal stations are as follows: Ramleh to Amman, 65 miles; Amman to Kasr Azrak, 55 miles; Kasr Azrak to Ramadie, 400 miles; Ramadie to Bagdad, 60 miles.

Armless Man Used Mechanical Levers Like Natural Limbs

LONDON, July 25.—A remarkable piece of apparatus which supplies arms to anyone who lacks those members, was demonstrated at the annual conference of the British Medical Association at Newcastle yesterday. The demonstrator was an armless man who, incidentally, has lost an eye. He sat at a table, and by levers worked with his feet, he operated a mechanical pair of arms which, it seemed, were made of lead piping. With these arms the armless man fed himself and enjoyed the meal. He used knife, fork, spoon, cup and napkin with ease and grace. Then he picked up a cigarette, raised it to his lips and lit it. He cut out a paper pattern with scissors and wrote his name with a pencil. This new mechanism is regarded as the greatest triumph of ingenuity in the art which is now called Prosthetic.
