WARNS PUBLIC

DR. GRACE KIRKLAND, M. D., well known woman doctor, warns against continued use of drastic purgatives.

Ten years medical practice has convinced me that persons suffering from functional debility as indicated by pasty complexion, fatigability, chronic or occasional constipation, acidity, gas, unrefreshing sleep, nervousness, biliousness and toxic headaches, should shun the frequent use of calomel, salts, oils or other drastic, habit-forming purgative drugs.

Dr. Kirkland is a resident of Atlantic, N.S.

Quebec Lady Used Dodd's Kidney Pills

Mrs. O. Champagne Completely Relieved of Kidney Trouble After Taking Three Boxes

St. Frederic, P. Q., Jan. 6.—(Special)—Every year thousands of grateful people publicly testify to Dodd's Kidney Pills. They have used them with excellent results.

"I have had kidney trouble for a long time. I started taking Dodd's Kidney Pills and I felt better after the first box. I continued the treatment and after taking three boxes I am completely relieved."

The relief that Mrs. Champagne found has come to thousands of other Canadian women through the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Kidney trouble is not confined to grown people only. It is too often found in children sowing the seeds of future ills unless the kidneys are strengthened and put in condition to do their full work.

Can a Wife be Cured of Jealousy?—Foolish Young Man Who Lets His Deafness Hamper His Progress in Life—Seven Seas, or Sea of Matrimony?

Dear Miss Dix—In a recent article you said that jealousy was incurable. Let me tell you my experience: My wife was so jealous that she made my life miserable and was ruining my business.

of everything I did and made scenes before clients and clerks. I felt that I could endure it no longer and decided to leave her.

"Love will cure jealousy and it is the only remedy for it. Flatter your wife. Tell her how much more beautiful she is in your eyes than any other woman.

"And above all, keep her busy. See that she has plenty of constructive work to do, for an idle woman's brain is the devil's workshop in which he manufactures all sorts of bitter suspicions and fears.

"And instead of thinking of yourself as a martyr, hold this thought: that the reason your wife is jealous is because she thinks you are so wonderful that every other woman is trying to snatch you from her.

"Love, real love, will cure jealousy."

So I pass the priest's remedy of love as a cure for jealousy on to my fellow men who may be tormented by green-eyed wives. J. E. S.

I have no doubt that jollying comes nearer to being a cure for jealousy in wives than anything else, because, after all, jealousy is chiefly the expression of an inferiority complex.

She looks in the mirror and sees that she is growing middle-aged and stout. Gone is her lissom figure and her peacher-and-cream complexion.

And it is useless for the husband to protest his innocence and his faithfulness and to tell his jealous wife that the women who come to his office are clients or patients in whom he is only professionally interested.

It doesn't allay her suspicions a particle, for hasn't she seen movies which depicted the orgies that went on in business offices and which showed middle-aged married men bestowing thirty feet of kisses upon beautiful young stenographers?

The trouble with the domestic woman—and most jealous women are domestic women—is that the very nature of her occupation gives her too much time to brood.

And, viewed in this way, the jealous wife is a pathetic figure, for her suspicions are really just an appeal for flattery for which she is starving just a cry for some evidence that her husband still regards her as a lady love instead of a piece of useful household furniture.

Perhaps jollying her along is the only way in which a man can get along with a jealous wife, but it takes a hero and a good actor to put up a convincing performance of affection for a woman who insults him by her suspicions and disgusts him by making hysterical scenes.

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am a young man of 25, well educated, rather above the average in looks, a good dresser and successful in business, but I am handicapped by poor hearing, which embarrasses me dreadfully in society.

I think you are very wrong, Bob, in letting your misfortune make you morbid and cause you to withdraw from social contacts with your fellow creatures.

Many other deaf people take this same attitude and refuse to use the mechanical helps that science has designed for the alleviation of their affliction.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a young man 20 years of age. Ever since I can remember I have been fascinated by the idea of sailing the seas, but now I have fallen in love with a girl who says she doesn't want a husband who would be away from home most of the time.

Well, Joseph, at your age, the wise thing is to take to the salt sea instead of venturing out on the sea of matrimony. You will be in much less danger of making shipwreck of your life.

If you have the lure of the sea in your blood, you will never be happy ashore. Go and get it out of your system, or else find that it is your true vocation. You are too young to think of marrying for five years, anyway and that will give you time to try yourself out.

PARIS CABMEN DEMAND PASSEPORTS

PARIS, Jan. 3.—They do things differently in Paris. Tourists accustomed to look upon cab drivers with sometimes justifiable suspicion may be surprised when a Paris driver demands their passports before he'll drive them outside the city limits.

PARIS CABMEN DEMAND PASSEPORTS

As for marrying, why not? There are plenty of girls who will look at a man's heart and head and character instead of his ears, and who would love you all the more tenderly because of your misfortune. And a girl who would let your deafness keep her from marrying you would be small loss anyway.

Naturally, being deaf is a handicap in business. So is any other physical misfortune, but it only means that you will have to work a little harder and be a little bit more efficient than the ordinary man, and perhaps use a little more care in selecting your line of occupation.
