

So Much Depends On The Lighting

WHAT is more comfortable than good light—and what other comfort so cheap in cost?

A 75-watt Edison Mazda Lamp gives two and one-half times as much light as a 40-watt Edison Mazda Lamp, yet the difference in current cost averages only a third of a cent an hour.

Use light freely—and use it rightly. A living room without a floor or table lamp cannot possess the charm of one containing either or both. Put white or frosted Edison Mazda Lamps in portable floor or table lamps, and clear Edison Mazda Lamps in fixtures that do not permit the eye to see the lamp.

Near you is an Edison Mazda Lamp store, recognizable by the yellow and blue cartons. There you can obtain real information about good lighting.

75-watt gas-filled Edison Mazda Lamp for use in semi-indirect fittings, and fixtures that do not permit the eye to see the lamp.

The Legend of the Hall

"Isn't it the most wonderful old house?" asked Evelyn Haste, who had been Evie Carroll no longer ago than the morning.

"She looked all around the beautiful dining-room, with its dark walls of 'linenfold' paneling, and then flushed one of her dazzling smiles at Kennedy Haste, her husband of a few hours. "Now aren't you glad I would accept the loan of it from Sir Don? It just is Romance!"

"It's certainly a wonderful house. But—no, I'm not very glad—just," said Haste. "It doesn't seem playing the game, somehow! Poor old Don was so horribly in love with you. I believe you'd have married him if—"

"If I hadn't met you!" laughed Evie. "Well, if I had married him, it would have been to get this place. I've got you instead, which is about a million times better. But the next best thing to being mistress of Hidden Hall Court is having it lent to one—for one's honeymoon with the most thrilling man on earth."

When the most beautiful girl in the world called one the "most thrilling man on earth," and one had just snatched her away from dozens of other men who wanted her, one had to throw off the shadows of gloom. Kennedy smiled adoringly across the dinner table at his American bride.

All the same it was a pity to have the smallest blot on such happiness as his, which should have been perfect. Haste felt that he would rather have spent his honeymoon in a workman's cottage at Clapham than at Sir Rawdon Wells' famous old place in Essex.

Rawdon was his friend, and Kennedy liked and admired him. But in Rawdon's place, if he'd had such a house, he would not have offered to lend it for the girl he loved to pass her honeymoon with another man. Besides, it wasn't like Rawdon to do such a thing. He was rather a brooding, revengeful sort of fellow, more like his Italian mother than any of the extremely English ancestors whose faces adorned (or didn't adorn) these walls. Why, then, had he made such a point of Evie accepting the loan of Hidden Hall Court? Haste couldn't rid himself of the heavy presentiment of something queer—something which would make them both repent coming here to stay. Stupid, perhaps. But there it was!

"Why is it called Hidden Hall Court?" Evie was asking. "It's such a queer name, isn't it? Sounds like secret rooms and things."

"Shouldn't wonder if there are secret rooms and things," Haste said. "But the place wasn't called after anything of that sort. 'Hidden' was an old family name of some ancestors of Don Wells, who died out for good in the eighteenth century. That's when the Court came to his branch, and was supposed to bring bad luck with it. "As if such a glorious place could bring bad luck!" laughed Evie.

"That's the story, anyhow. And the Wellises—men and women—are always having some tragedy or other in their lives. From generation to generation."

"So there is a story!" said Evie. "Somebody told me there was. I can't think who now, unless it was your dear V. A. D. Miss Gillett. I asked Sir Don, and he pretended never to have heard anything."

"When did you have that conversation?" Haste inquired, rather sharply. "Was it when he offered to lend the house?"

"Yes, I believe it was then," Evie reflected.

"Oh!"

"Why 'Oh?'"

"Well, he wouldn't crab the place if he wanted you to inhabit it, would he?"

Eve laughed. "You're a jealous boy, Ken! You look gloomy and cross whenever we have to mention Sir Don. What if I glared or sniffed when you spoke of Pandora—or even of Miss Gillett?"

"Pandora's my adopted sister," said Ken. "And poor Miss Gillett—why, compared to you she's what a 'punny dip' is to the planet Venus."

"They both hate me like poison."

all the same," said Evie. "Not that I mind it's a compliment. And I loved having Pan for my bridesmaid, and inviting Miss Gillett to the wedding. You can't say you 'loved' asking Sir Don and his thrilling Italian cousin Paolo Magnani!"

Ken laughed now. "A man does exactly 'love' having two chaps who'd joyfully see him struck by a thunderbolt, wishing him at the devil while he's being married. And look here, if I'm 'thrilling,' you're not to use the same adjective for anybody else."

"I adore you!" cried Evie. "Now if you really know it, tell me the story of this house."

"I know the story, but I don't know its truth," said Haste. "It's probably tommyrot. You've heard the ballad of 'The Mistletoe Bough,' haven't you? The bride who ran away from her friends on her wedding day, and hid in an old oak chest? Well, once something of the sort happened here, they say. She was Italian, like Don's mother, and a beauty—a princess or something."

"Her husband, the first Sir Rawdon Wells who ever lived at the Court, brought her home directly after their marriage, though the girl didn't want to come, had heard there was a curse on the place. What happened exactly seems never to have been found out, whether there was a quarrel through jealousy, and the bride was murdered by the bridegroom; whether she simply ran away; or whether she was 'bewitched.' But at all events she vanished and was never seen again—not even in skeleton form, like the bride in the ballad. They do say she haunts a room called the Tapestry Room; however, which was given to her as her own sitting room. Her name was Bianca. She ought to be a beautiful ghost, but I'm not keen on seeing her."

"I'd love to, if you were with me," said Evie, with a delicious little shiver.

5. Beowulf Himself

(Drawing: Beowulf)

This Beowulf, nephew of King Hygelac of the Geats, was a champion of champions, a theme among themes, whose valor was on the lips of men throughout the world of warriors. In his hand was the strength of thirty men and his war sword had cleaved many a helmet and armor piece of the enemies of the Geats.

"Twas to this princeling that tidings of King Hrothgar's distress came and Beowulf said, "I will go to my kinsman, Hrothgar," (for Hrothgar was also Beowulf's uncle), "And I will see if I can rid my uncle's kingdom of this most fiendish Grendel." And having uttered these words he made preparations with a good ship and sixteen warrior thanes to go to the land of the West-Danes where Hrothgar, his uncle, was king—to see whether, happily, he Beowulf might win great glory and many gifts in an encounter with Grendel. To fight he was determined even though death might be his outcome. (Tomorrow's story tells how Beowulf came to the land of the West-Danes.) (Copyright, 1924, Associated Editors, Inc.)

Suddenly the dealer stopped, threw his cards down, and got up from the table. "Boys," he said, feeling for his ails "so tall that you can't conveniently get this into it to swing the hoe. It will sprout like the sweet corn until it grows with every awat at the weeds."

GOOD NEWS FOR BRONCHITIS SUFFERERS!

Deep-Seated Chest Troubles Yield to PEPS.

BRONCHITIS lays hold of the chest in a slow insidious way. Do not, therefore, neglect to take prompt measures to counteract the first symptoms of this ravaging ailment—the first difficulty in breathing, the occasional made-up feeling in the throat with its accumulations of phlegm. Be warned by that irritating cough and those frequently-returning colds.

Get a box of Peps, the well-known breathing remedy. After removing the silver wrapping place a Peps tablet on the tongue and breathe in the healing fumes as the tablet dissolves.

Peps are simply invaluable for allaying that teasing, tickling cough; for softening and loosening the phlegm, and soothing the irritated and semi-inflamed bronchial tubes. Every day as you breathe in the powerful germicidal fumes which are emitted from these Peps, a healing influence is extended deep into the lungs where liquid cough mixtures cannot penetrate.

The regular use of Peps at bedtime will ensure healthy slumber undisturbed by bouts of coughing. By day, the treatment should be continued on the assurance that the throat, bronchi and lungs are all being healed and strengthened by this medicine.

Peps are guaranteed to be absolutely free from opium, laudanum, chloral, morphia and any harmful ingredients of the old-fashioned cough medicines.

Dr. GORDON STABLES, M.D., C.M., writes:—"Fear every little cold. Keep Peps handy and you will ride triumphantly clear of bronchitis. Peps are invaluable for soothing and healing semi-inflamed bronchial tubes. Peps tablets are more of an inhalation, and go directly to the seat of injury."

What Peps are an expensive remedy to produce the demand has become so great that I see now some faked pills to have the price reduced from 50c to 10c. Get a box today! All grateful.
