

LINERS SEE-SAW ON A WAVE TOP

Novel Experience of a Cunarder in an Atlantic Storm—Burial of a Child at Sea

A magnificent triumph over mountainous Atlantic seas, during a gale which blew at the rate of a hundred miles an hour, was the thrilling accomplishment of the Cunarder liner Mauretania. During a voyage from England she was handicapped by terrific storms, which buffeted her at times like a mere cockle-shell. When half-way across the liner's wireless rigging was blown away to seaward, and the Mauretania was listed just as a gale bends a tree. In the middle-watch of one night the Cunarder literally sea-sawed on a wave, the first time in ocean steamship annals that such an engineering and navigating possibility had ever been practically demonstrated by experience. This strange situation, which is regarded as a splendid test of the constructive unity of the vessel, was observed by Mr. G. B. Hunter, a member of the firm which built the Cunarder. The ship poised on the crest of a sea mountain, both bow and stern in the air, the four propellers turning above the water, and she conquered every combination of the warlike element. Not a rivet was started, says Mr. Hunter, and the ship was as lively, solid, and spontaneous as a single plank, yielding gracefully and buoyantly to the forces of Nature. Then she dived head under into a hole in the ocean, her propellers spinning out of the water. The next wave broke all the windows out of the wheelhouse, smashed the forward windows in the lounge, burst in a door opening into the lounge on the port side, carried away an entire length of rail on the boat-deck, and tore off the match-board ceiling from the overhang of the wheelhouse, extending over the boat-deck. When the ceiling went the electric wires inside of it—the means of communication between the pilot-house and the engine-room—were carried away also, and signalling to the heart of the steel monster had to be carried on by means of speaking tubes. The steel bulwark athwart the boat-deck forward, against which rest the tips of the derrick booms, was a stretch of bent and broken barrier. It was pummeled and punctured by the slamming seas, which tipped the teak from its top. No one was injured. While the ship was groaning under the assaults of wind and wave, Violet Richardson, three and a half years old, and English girl, became ill with diphtheria, and the ship's surgeon decided to perform the hazardous operation of tracheotomy. She was taken to the ship's hospital, and died from shock. The girl and her mother, Mrs. Julia Richardson, were on their way from Rotterdam to join Mr. Richardson at Carbonado, Washington. The steerage passengers were moved by the death of the little girl to contribute the mother's fare to Washington, whither she had to take her nine-months-old baby, Connie. The sympathy of the steerage passengers spread to the second cabin, and ultimately $300 was raised for the mother. Violet's body was sewed in canvas, to which were attached white lilies from the ship's conservatory, around all was wrapped the Union Jack. Staff Captain Brown read the burial service, and the body was slipped from the grating into the sea. The ship reduced speed for the burial.

Youth at the Treasury

Many Chancellors of the Exchequer besides Mr. Lloyd George have occupied that office before reaching fifty. Addington and Pitt were both under fifty. Robinson was only forty-five at the end of his term, while Goulburn was forty-six. Peel relinquished this office at forty-seven, and Baring at forty-five. When Disraeli had his first short experience in 1852 he was forty-eight, and Mr. Gladstone was only forty-three at the time of his first Budget. Ward Hunt went out at the same age, the present Lord St. Aldwyn completed his first term at forty-two. On the whole, youth has reigned at the Treasury, though Canning, Lowe, Stafford Northcote, Sir William Harcourt, Childers, and Ritchie had all passed fifty when they went there.

Discovery of Ancient Coins

An Italian farmer has made a valuable archaeological find in a field near Lasi. He discovered an earthenware vase containing 5,300 silver coins of the Roman republican period. The vase weighs about 50 pounds. Most of the coins are rare specimens and are in an admirable state of preservation. The field is owned by Count Honorati, who has renounced his right to a claim of one-half of the value of the discovery and has allowed Prof. Balloso to remove the coins to the museum at Ancona for identification. Only one-half of them have been examined as yet, but their value is estimated at more than $1,000,000. The Government gave the farmer $25,000.

When discovered by those attending an auction sale a short distance away it had gained such headway that it was practically impossible to save but a little of the contents, but all the adjoining buildings were saved. Mr. Baker's loss will be about $600. J.

"TIME ENOUGH"

(Intended for young men.)

Of all the harmful phrases known "Time enough" outranks them all; it chills the marrow in my bones and tastes as bitter as the gall; it is the specious plea of sloth, the slogan of the idle boy, the crusher of ambition's fire—The most unhalloved phrase on earth, except "I can't."

I loathe its sound because I feel that he who uses it is dead To all uplifting, O wicked phrase! What hordes of women and of men Lay stranded on the world's great shore.

All doomed to wretchedness and want Because of thy foul teaching, Thou cursed phrase.

There is not "time enough." The time To do a thing is now—just now; Put off not till tomorrow, That which today you can perform, A moment more may not be yours. If something must be done, O do it now—

Th' "accepted time"—Salvation's day.

Be not deceived, young man, By "time enough."

Time's short—eternity is long, When "then" they may be "time enough."

Not here! Don't hem and haw and groan, For if you want to fill a place High up upon the niche of fame, Go in and do it now—just now, Don't linger on the way—life's short Too short to use that poor excuse—"There's time enough."

J. H. FLETCHER, St. John's, Portland, Ore.

they want to inquire about advertising ask Central for the Subscription phone No. 132.2, or for the News phone No. 132.3, instead of 132.3; or when they want the News or Editorial Department ask Central for the Subscription phone No. 132.2, or the Advertising phone No. 132.2, instead of 132.3, although all those departments and their respective phone numbers are plainly given in the telephone book. Some people, instead of looking at the book, even phone one what number to ask for to get another department. All this is a great waste of time on the part of the person phoning, the operator at the Central, and the clerk in the department wrongly phoned. The news staff, on an upper floor, cannot give the necessary information about either advertising or subscriptions, nor the advertising staff about subscriptions or news, nor the subscription staff about advertising or news. In other words the clerks know and can do, but their own work in their own departments, and if it were otherwise they would be continually running from one department to another, upstairs and down, mixing work, wearing themselves out and causing the greatest possible confusion. On and after 6 p. m. daily it is useless to ask for any phone numbers except 132 and 133.

Patrons who consult their phone books for the numbers they really want will greatly lessen the work of the patient Central telephones and Guardian clerks and thus help make their lives much brighter and happier.
