SEA HAWK
by RAFAEL SABATINI

To Sir Oliver Tressilian, renowned for his exploits on the Spanish Main, comes Peter Godolphin, insulting and threatening, to forbid Oliver's marriage with his sister, Rosamund. Rose, Peter reports, is unwilling that his ward should wed a "pirate." Sir Oliver knows the real opposition from Sir John arises from a matter of conflicting land interests and Peter unwittingly lets out the fact that his own interests, too, are involved.

"So?" crowed Sir Oliver. "Now at last the sun of truth peeps forth from all this cloud of righteous indignation at my bad Tressilian blood-and-pirate's ways! You, too, are but a trafficker, and now see what a fool I am to have believed you sincere, and to have stood here in talk with you as with an honest man."

His voice swelled, and his lip curled in a snarl that struck the other like a blow. "I swear I had not wasted breath with you had I known you for so mean and pitiful a fellow."

"You shall answer for them," snapped his visitor. "I am answering now," was the stern answer. "To come here and prate to me of my dead father's disloyalty and of an ancient quarrel between him and yours, to blent of my trumped-up course of piracy and my own ways of life as a just cause, why I may not wed your sister, whilst the real consideration in your mind, the real spur of your hostility, is no more than the matter of some few paltry pounds a year that I hinder you from pocketing. A God's name, get you gone!"

"You shall hear from me again, Sir Oliver," said the other, white with anger. "You shall account to me for these words!"

"I do not fight with—with hucksters," bashed Sir Oliver. "Die dare call me that?"

"Indeed, 'tis to discredit an honorable claim, I confess it, Nick, the door for Master Godolphin."

"When, after his visitor had departed, Sir Oliver grew calm again. Then, being able in his calm to consider his position, he became angry anew at the very thought of the rage in which he had been a rage which had so mastered him that he had erected additional obstacles to the already considerable ones that stood between Rosamund and himself. In full blast, his anger swung round and took Sir John Killigrew for his objective."

"He belov'd for Nick and his boots. 'Where is Master Lionel?' he asked when the boots had been fetched. 'He is just ridden in, Sir Oliver.' 'Bid him hither.'"

CHAPTER II. ROSAMUND
Anon, after his visitor had departed, Sir Oliver grew calm again. Then, being able in his calm to consider his position, he became angry anew at the very thought of the rage in which he had been a rage which had so mastered him that he had erected additional obstacles to the already considerable ones that stood between Rosamund and himself.

Canadian Girl Has Successful Fox Ranch

By Marian Hale
NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Feed your fox—don't wear it. That is what Marjory Walton did, and it started her in one of the most thriving businesses in Canada. When two pet silver foxes were presented her, she did not convert them into neckpieces even as you or I might have done, but she began breeding foxes and started the Oakville silver black fox ranch in Ontario, which is now paying splendid dividends.

"The first year I raised five pups," she explained. "This encouraged my brother to go into the venture with me and we have succeeded beyond our most sanguine expectations. I have insisted upon fewer really high grade animals rather than many of an inferior grade. What we started as a hobby has proved to be a good business proposition."

Miss Walton is going to bring a miniature of her fox farm to New York this fall when she will show her foxes at the Women's Activities exhibit, which is put on annually by the New York League of Business and Professional Women.

"Then you must procure only the best stock obtainable. You must feed them moderately and look out carefully for sanitation. Your market is always ready for your supply once your reputation for quality is considered."

Showing foxes at an exhibition presents some difficulties, of course, but Miss Walton believes they can be overcome. And she is sure that many women in the United States will see the possibilities of this business for themselves, once it is pointed out to them.

"It's an ideal job for women, and very profitable if properly managed," she maintains.

It was a wet day, and as the pretty girl entered the crowded car a man rose to his feet. "No, you must not give up your seat; I insist," said the young woman.

"You may insist as much as you like, miss," was the reply, "I'm getting out here!"

A rather nondescript looking woman applied to a doctor for assistance and said she could do washing. "Doc" gave her a note to the manager of the local hotel, which read: "This woman needs washing, do what you can." In a short time the doctor got an answer: "I don't doubt it. Why the deuce don't you tackle the job yourself? I'm married."

Hidden Treasures

(By Dominion News Service)
LONDON, Aug. 24.—Hidden treasure in an unusual form has been discovered in an old Georgian house in Holloway which was recently sold for conversion into a garage.

In the garden were eight statues, apparently of stone or plaster, very much in the way, and far from beautiful. The purchaser of the property received an offer from a workman engaged on the premises for one of them, representing a cupid, and said he might have it if he took it away.

The man, however, found it too heavy to move. An examination of the statues was undertaken, and it revealed the fact that they were made of solid lead covered with several coats of paint. Each of them weighed many tons. With lead at about £33 a ton the owner received more than £2,000 for the lot, and £200 was given to the workman.

Many years ago the house was the private residence of a builder. To keep mice away, scatter small pieces of camphor in your cupboards and drawers. They greatly dislike the smell of camphor and will go far away from it.

Women Lived On Shell Fish

(By Dominion News Service)
PARIS, Aug. 24.—A drama of the sea in which a woman passenger on a fishing smack narrowly escaped death by drowning, and then had to exist for nearly two days on nothing but shell fish, was unfolded when the crew of the French fishing-smack Sams Péur reached Creances, their native village.

The smack was surprised by a gale off Jersey, and ran for shelter to a rocky islet. In addition to the crew, a Paris veterinary surgeon M. Fevre, and his wife were on board.

In attempting to make a landing Mme. Fevre, was washed into the sea, and was rescued with great difficulty. Finally everyone was safely landed, and the smack was immediately afterwards dashed to pieces on the reef.

The party had to remain all that night and the next day with nothing but shell fish to eat. When hope was almost exhausted, they were seen and rescued by a motor-yacht owned by Mrs. Roblin, widow of an English major.

A Diamond Mine for You
CERTAIN South African farmers were poverty stricken. They said the soil was too rocky to plow. They complained that their children were in rags—that they had to play with pebbles instead of toys.
The pebbles were diamonds! But the farmers didn't know. Many of them died poor.
Don't be like the South African farmers! Don't seek opportunity in some distant place and overlook the wealth that is daily within your grasp.
