An Adventure In Years

BY CAROLYN BEECHER

As he had not tried to analyze his feeling for Sonia Strong, Ned Campbell made no analysis of his attitude toward Lenore Fleetwood. Had he been asked he might have said that it was a friendly one, that she was a type, and that it was a desire to put her on canvas that made him think of her so constantly. To do him justice he was not always of anything more personal in his admiration. For, coupled with the almost childlike candor of his mind there went a clearness of thought unusual in one of his age.

With Lenore as it had been with Sonia, he longed to be a friend—to bring her happiness. But how? The daughter of wealth, sure of her social position, what could he do for her? He wished she had been poor so he could share his fortune with her that she were lowly so he could raise her to his own place in the world.

Sonia had accepted a dinner invitation for themselves and Ned! It was quite a grand affair. Diplomats and prominent politicians from Washington were among the guests. Sonia had a new gown for the occasion, a moonlight sort of affair that made her so lovely that even Strong forgot to be cynical when he saw her dressed and caused Ned to catch his breath.

"It is comforting to dress for two artists. They at least are sure to be appreciative of one's efforts," she told them, speaking gayly, delighted that Ned had been so pleased.

"It is for you who know how to dress," her husband had replied, "but think what it would mean to us if you had no feeling for form, lines, or color!" "Oh, that would be dreadful! Come on, we shall be late!" and she floated before them to the waiting motor, her face alight, her eyes dancing. This surely would be a party for old-time people. No silly young girls would be there to attract her boy's attention. "I am sure we are to have a delightful time," she added as they drew up at the curb of the mansion on the avenue.

A flood of rose-colored light from the chandeliers fell on his polished floor, mirroring the lights above. It fell on the shoulders and white arms of beautiful women, enhancing their charms until they were well-nigh irresistible. As Sonia had said, it was an unusual function—they were sure to enjoy themselves.

Dinner over, the dancing commenced. It was only then she noticed the new arrivals. Younger people, the debutante set, many of them. Several of the girls were accompanied by young officers. Among them came Lenore Fleetwood and Dora Delong. The same officers had been with them at the theatre.

She had been talking to Ned when they arrived. She saw him start, saw the eager look on his face, then the frown as he saw the officers. She leaned back against the wall. The room had suddenly become insufferable, the lights intolerable. She found herself considering asking Ned to take her home, pleading a headache, when she heard his muttered apology and saw him make his way to Lenore, who after discarding her wraps had re-entered the room.

Hints for the Motorists

BY ALBERT L. CLOUGH

WORN OUT CARBURETOR

G. W. B. writes: My 1916 car has its original carburetor and I notice that it is somewhat worn, especially at the throttle-valve shaft bearings. I cannot adjust it so but that it will miss at speeds above 30 m. h. p. Do you advise buying a new carburetor?

Answer: Yes. This is quite likely one of the carburetors, the needle-valve of which is progressively opened by throttle movement, and the wear of the throttle shaft and connected parts has made the raising of the needle valve incorrect, or unreliable at high speeds. Aside from this, recently designed carburetors are better adapted to take account of the change in volatility of gasoline, which has occurred since your car was built, and we think that you would obtain considerable advantage by replacing your present carburetor by a modern one. The reason you are sure that it is not due to ignition failure instead of faulty carburetion?

ENGINE RUN OUT OF OIL

G. M. writes: I accidentally left the oil drain open one day last summer and all the oil ran out of the crank-case. Not realizing what had happened, I ran the car about 50 miles with a short supply. Since then I have been getting only 40 miles per gallon of oil while I used to get 125. I have tightened all bolts and packing. Where does the oil escape?

Answer: It undoubtedly escapes past the pistons. Running with a low oil supply caused the pistons and rings to scratch the cylinder walls and the oil now goes up by the pistons excessively through the scratched and worn portions, into the combustion spaces and out through the exhaust. Probably you will have to have your cylinders bored out, and over-size pistons fitted in order to restore your better have the cylinders examined and see what can be done.

WEAK STARTING SPARK

F. McC. writes: My magneto does not furnish a sufficiently hot spark, when the car is cranked by the starter, the engine requiring to be spun by hand, to obtain a good starting spark. New platinum points have been put in. I am using four dry cells connected to the magneto for starting purposes. Can I connect my storage battery instead of the dry-cells and obtain better results?

Answer: Your magneto should give a sufficient starting spark without using battery. We suggest that you have the magnets recharged and that you inspect the plug points to see that they are not too far apart. Is everything about your starter in such condition as to give the highest cranking speed? There is danger that, if you connect on your storage battery, in place of the drycells, that your coil switch is accidentally left on, as the coil is wound for dry battery current and will be much stronger. However if you wish to try this remove the dry cell wire and substitute for it a wire from the storage battery.

foreign to her, she welcomed him back. Long ago she realized that Destiny then was having its say with her, and realized also why. At the time, however, she felt only the hurt of Ned's eagerness, the fear that now so often assailed her.

"Our dance," he had said, and whirled her away to the centre of the room. But when the dance was over she noted he did not ask for another although her card was not full.

It seemed to her that she could not endure the sight of him dancing with those young girls, especially Lenore Fleetwood, although only her intuition differentiated her from Dora and the others. Neither could she bring herself to go home and leave him there with them.

She had been so happy to be there with him. That was scarcely more than two hours since. Now she was unhappy. Yet why?

She tried to honestly question herself, tried to give an honest answer. He was young, they were young. Dancing was natural to them and it was only what all the boys and girls in society did—dance with each other, laugh and chat gayly, happy just because they were alive.

Yet as Lenore and Ned glided past she saw no envy in his face. In its stead was an expression she could not fathom, one of humility, of something else she could not name.

The State of Louisiana tried to get into the matter by intervening in the suit of Lillie Taylor against Angelina Allen, an action brought merely in order to have Lillie formally and legally declared owner, the Attorney General contending that the land was the property of the State because Lillie Taylor, being an illegitimate child, could not inherit. Subsequently George West also intervened, contending that he was the owner of and occupied the land.

FABULOUS FORTUNE

While the suit was dragging in the courts the value of the land and its products steadily grew up into the millions, until now, when Lillie Taylor has finally been declared the owner of the lands of the oil within them, and of the oil tanks, and pipelines that has been pumped from them, it has attained a fabulous figure.

THE MARKETS

MONTREAL, May 6.—There was no actual change in local prices for eggs yesterday, but the undertone to the market was easy and a decline is expected in the near future on account of the continued weakness in the country and the fact that local dealers and packers were only bidding 25c to 26c per dozen f. o. b. country shipping points for current receipts. The domestic consumption continues fairly good and sales of straight candled stock in a jobbing way were made at 34c to 35c, and No. 2 stock at 31c to 32c per dozen. The receipts were 3,987 cases, as compared with 3,329 for the same day last week, and 3,006 for the corresponding day a year ago.

The market for maple product was without any new feature to note prices being steady with the demand able to absorb the bulk of the supplies coming forward and sales of maple syrup were made at $2 to 2.25 per tin of one gallon, made at usgar .d112342341234344 and light colored maple sugar at 23c to 25c per lb., and dark at 21c to 22c.

The trade in car lots of potatoes shows no improvement which indicates that the local buyers have ample supplies on hand to meet present requirements, and that there is practically no demand from outside sources consequently the market on the whole was dull with Green Mountains nominally quoted at 75c to 80c, and Quebec stock at 65c to 70c per bag of 90 lbs. ex-store, while in L. wholesale jobbing way sales were made a 90c per bag of 30 lbs. ex-store.

Chicago, May 4.—Eggs higher, receipts, 22,248 cases. At mark, cases included, 20c to 21-2c. New York, May 4.—Eggs easier, receipts, 42,038 cases. At mark, cases included, 20c to 21-2c.

New York, May 4.—Eggs easier, receipts, 42,038 cases. Fresh gathered, extra firsts, 24-2c to 26-2c; state, Pennsylvania and nearby

BRILLIANT FUNCTION IN MAYFAIR HOUSE

LONDON, May 7.—Honored with the presence of Royalty in the person of Princess Beatrice, aunt of King George, the wedding reception of Violetta Selfridge and a Viscount Jacques de Sibeur today took rank among the most magnificent in the history of fashionable Mayfair.

The bride is the daughter of Gordon Selfridge, London merchant prince, formerly of Chicago. The bridegroom is the son of the Comte de Sibeur, head of one of France's oldest families.

More than two hundred representatives in attendance made the guest list read like a volume of Doherty's.

The reception was held in Lansdowne House, Berkeley Square, recently leased by Mr. Selfridge. It is one of the oldest and most famous of London's town mansions, and is located in the heart of aristocratic Mayfair.

Because the young Vicomte is a Catholic, Miss Selfridge consented to turn Catholic to marry him.

The invitation list numbered more than seven hundred, but thousands stormed at Oratory. Special police protection was necessary to keep back the crowds from the door during the ceremony.

More than one thousand guests were greeted by the bride and bridegroom in the famous yellow parlor room of Lansdowne House. The bride gave to each guest a piece of enormous wedding cake. The cake was four tiers high and an airplane floated above it. The famous Scots guards band played for the dancing.

Ford THE UNIVERSAL CAR. What the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, means to Canada's workmen. FEW people realize that while the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, employs over 3000 men at their factory at Ford, Ontario, there are also upwards of 50,000 people who directly or indirectly are kept busy in Canadian plants filling the demands of this Company for material and finished products. During the depression of last Fall and Winter practically every automotive factory in the Dominion ceased manufacturing. To assist in relieving the serious Dominion-wide problem of unemployment the Ford Company, at heavy loss, kept its plant running four full days each week. Not only in the Ford factory but in hundreds of other Canadian industrial plants thousands of Canadian workmen were thus given employment throughout the winter. The yearly payroll of this Company exceeds $4,000,000. Our purchases in one year totaled almost $20,000,000. With the exception of a few parts, which are not procurable in Canada, the whole of the Ford Car is built from materials purchased from Canadian manufacturers. The Ford is a "Made-in-Canada" Car. In buying a Ford you are giving employment to Canadian workmen. Wherever you go—Ford Service. Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, Ford, Ontario.
