DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

And, on the other hand a daughter-in-law can win her mother-in-law's heart and make of her a friend who will be a tower of strength to her by putting herself in her mother-in-law's place and trying to realize how she will feel when the time comes when she has to give up her place in her son's life to some other woman.

And if she will visualize that, it will make her very kind and patient with the lonely old woman whose husband is perhaps dead, whose sons and daughters have left her for homes of their own, and who has no happiness except that which she borrows from her children.

WEDDING BELLS—A quiet but pretty wedding took place at St. Patrick's Church in Montreal when Josephine Lanigan, daughter of Capt. L. Lanigan of Souris, P. E. Island was united in matrimony to Joseph E. Creamer, also formerly of Souris. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. Murphy. The bride, who was given in marriage by her cousin John Lanigan, wore a suit of dusky pink with white accessories. Her corsage was of yellow tulleman roses. She was attended by her sister Alice wearing a grey flowered dress, picture hat and white accessories. Her corsage was white carnations. The groom was supported by Josephine Lanigan, cousin of the bride. After a delightful wedding breakfast the bride and groom left for New York on a short honeymoon. On their return they will reside in Montreal.

Don't Make This Mistake When Child Is Constipated

Don't upset a child already upset by constipation with harsh-laxative laxatives or harsh, griping cathartics. Give Children's Own Tablets. This new corrective medicine especially for growing youngsters needs to be placed on the table as a gentle and normally without disagreeable reactions that even the fussiest child is likely to drink up. Make laxative-taking time easy on the child. Give your child Children's Own Tablets today at your druggist.

ELLEN'S DIARY (Continued from Page 2) him this evening the distance to and from the snug home on the Spruce Grove road, when he fetched the animal home. "Paid a pretty stiff figure for him, I understand," I said looking him over. "Oh, I wouldn't say that," Jock replied. "It all depends on how well he does." Jock is not one to haggle over a price especially in buying live stock. His philosophy is a very good one. "There's two things a would-be purchaser can do," he will tell me humbly when we happen to engage in a deal. "If the article suits him, he can pay the price or else he can leave it where it is." James himself is satisfied that the newly bought "grow into the fowls of this lovely night on its back, will ultimately grow into something."

So with additions like this, our modest herd is being continued. This was our second excursion to the fields this evening. Earlier, and on invitation from James, Jeanie and I had walked along the farm lanes with him to view our growing crops. In the last week, these have made rapid growth. Potatoes and turnips spreading to fill the rows, the grain lengthening and heading out to a degree which James "never saw better for the time of year"—a remarkable concession for James to make. Returning Jeanie chuckled. "Yes," James said "we've had many a walk like this—Ellen and I. But I never could make out whether her interest lay in the crops or if she came, just to be with me!"

James talked of old days this afternoon with a schoolmate of his, now following a much-respected and busy profession in another Island community. He had left his care, to call at Alderlea briefly, and with James recall some of the undying memories that belong to earlier years. Days in classes in the school down the river road, when desks were whittled, I suspect sometimes idly, yet precious memories as well as initials were carved there. "And do you remember..." with a chuckle, for notwithstanding the many concerns of his profession, he has retained his boyish sense of humor, which to the one thus gifted is the fine touch of some nice fairy wand. As folks will even in distant country places, we hear many a tale of this
